Mr. W. A. Goodyear publishes in The Bulletin the result of some additional observations upon the new Mount Whitney, Fisherman's Peak or Dome of the Continent, whichever it may be called. These were made by a party sent out by Mr. Belshaw, consisting of Charles Rabe, an attache of the State Geological Survey, and W. L. Hunter, Wm. Crapo and Mr. McDonough of Cerro Gordo. It would require too much of our space to give the reports of Goodyear and Rabe in full. According to corrected observations, the true bearing of the Dome from Mount Whitney is North 53 degs. West, instead of N. 67 degs. W., as deduced from his first magnatic observations. Owing to the amount of magnetic iron in the rocks, the needle varies many degrees in a radius of a few feet on Mount Whitney, and is therefore not to be relied upon in determining bearings. This correction affects the result obtained by Mr. Belshaw's triangulation, showing the real difference of altitude between the two Peaks to be 367 feet instead of 900.

The Dome towers above Lone Pine to the hight of 10,892 feet, and above the sea level 14,900 feet.

Since their visit, Professor Clarence King, the first scientific explorer of the lofty regions in question, has made a pilgrimage from New York to the scenes of his early exploits, and will soon furnish the world another report, based upon the very completest barometrical observations. King acknowledges the mistake attributed to him by Goodyear, and his final report in his later volume of "Mountaineering" will be looked for with keen interest. His sketches show the respective summits to have a very close similarity. But Mr. King will gracefully upset the idea that the summit of the Dome has never been reached before, since he found thereon an arrow-head and other evidence of previous Indian presence.

From a statement by Mr. Thomas McDonough, published in this paper a few weeks since, it remains an open question whether himself and party or Johnson, Lucas and Begole were the first to reach the summit of this peak. The difference of time was but a day or two anyhow, but it is well that they should compare notes and settle the mooted point at once. Tourists by the hundreds may hereafter want to know who it was among the whites that actually first set foot on the Dome of the Continent, as Professor King calls it, not as a rumor but a point of fact.

Whatever the name, whether the Dome or Fisherman's Peak, either or any is far preferable to "Whitney," for that name is established as belonging to a well known mountain, whatever were the intentions of Clarence King, the original inventor of the nomenclature of our mountains. Besides, Whitney has never effected enough, except to draw heavy salaries as State Geologist and assume honors belonging to his abler subordinates, to entitle him to the distinguishment of a transfer. In addition to that, the aforesaid Whitney, when he sailed straight through this valley looking for earthquakes to report upon, voluntarily promised copies of his maps to divers and sundry persons; "they would be here in a month, sure"—but many months have passed, and still they come not. Whitney is a name good enough for a minor peak or an ordinary geological, earthquake fraud, but won't bear forced transplanting and give satisfactory results, these days.

Following is Mr. Rabe's description of the summit, etc.:

The summit of the peak has an area of about one and a half acres of flat surface, having its highest point at the eastern edge and sloping gently towards the west. This area was free from snow at the time of our visit, though there was plenty of snow in the canyons below around the northern sides of the mountain.

The view from here is grand indeed, and embraces many a peak at a distance of 150 miles or more. To the southeast the San Bernardino range was distinctly seen. Scattering here and there in the bottoms of the granite basins and amphitheaters which surround the base of the mountain are some dozen or more little lakes, filled with water of most crystaline transparency and beauty.

Before leaving the summit, Mr. Hunter deposited here a copy of The San Francisco Examiner, the September number of The Overland Monthly, The Inyo Independent, and The Littletown Mercury of New York. I also engraved my name upon a half dollar and left it among the rocks of the monument.

Creeping out to the eastern edge and taking one last look over the lip of the terrible precipice, which fell from beneath us with almost vertical walls for thousands of feet below, and whose dizzy grandeur makes me shudder yet, we slowly turned and bade farewell to this sublime and unquestioned Monarch of the Sierras.

UNWISE APPOINTMENTS.

The President has recently appointed Roscoe Conkling, the New York politician, to the high office made vacant by the death of Chief Justice Chase, and John A. Bingham of Ohio as Minister to Japan. Both of these appointments are especially obnoxious to the mass of the American people. Both are backpay stealers, monopoly pets and railroad advocates in the narrowest meaning of the term. These objectionable features are comparatively of small consequence so far as Bingham's appointment and business is concerned, but not so with regard to the other. It appears almost like an intended insult to put such a man as Conkling upon the Supreme Bench of the United States. He is an orator and a successful politician. Those appear to be his only qualifications, and they will hardly be looked upon in the light of qualifications for his present position. Though educated as a lawyer, yet since he was twenty-eight years of age he has practiced nothing but politics, and these of the most partisan character. He is an insufferable egotist, of an overbearing disposition, and accepting these and the half of other disparaging accusations against him as truth, it will ever be a wonder why such a man as Conkling should have been named for such a position, especially when there were hundreds of lawyers right in his own State to choose from who are his superiors in every important essential pertaining to the head of the judiciary of a great nation. As a general thing President Grant's administration is entitled to commendation, but such a lapse of good judgment and lack of respect to the wishes of a whole people as these two appointments indicate, will soon effectually overshadow all all his commendable acts.

Proposed Change.

The United States Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections had a secret meeting in New York recently, at which they are reported to have adopted an amendment to the Constitution modifying the present mode of electing the President and Vice President. While they are at it they would do well to suggest a change in the State election of United States Senators. We know of not a single reason in favor of the present absurd mode of electing the President or Senators.

A New Meridian.

Lieut. G. M. Wheeler, of the corps of Topographical Engineers, U. S. A., arrived in Virginia City yesterday. We learn that there is a probability that the recently established meridian line which passes through Virginia City and Gold Hill, will be continued southward to the ocean. The establishing of this meridian will be a public benefit which cannot be too highly appreciated, for the reason that to it, as a base line, may be referred all the local and mining surveys which already have been or may hereafter be made. It will also be of value in a scientific point of view, being a determined base, to which may be referred the fluctuations, from year to year, of the magnetic variation. The detachments of soldiers detailed for service under Lieut. Wheeler, in addition to the establishing of meridian lines, by means of careful observations, collate valuable information respecting astronomy, meteorology (including movements of the atmosphere), geology and natural history. The party who were engaged several weeks ago in taking observations on the Divide, are now similarly employed at Fort Ellis, Montana. Lieut. Wheeler has nine other field parties under his charge, one of whom is stationed at Ogden, one at Salt Lake, three in Colorado and four in eastern Arizona.—Gold Hill News, Sept. 29.

Railway Speed.

The London Engineer states that the highest railway speeds in the world are attained in England, and that the highest of all is reached on the Great Western railroad—the speed on the latter being given roundly as fifty miles an hour. Instances are given, however, of sixty-five and seventy miles an hour, and The Engineer believes it would be possible to lay a permanent way so well and to maintain it in such excellent order that trains might travel on it with perfect safety at one hundred miles an hour—indeed, miles upon miles of such track are now to be found upon most of the great main lines, but nowhere can one hundred miles of permanent way in perfection be found; and, as a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so a few hundred yards of bad track would spoil for the purpose of traveling at one hundred miles an hour a whole line. The really important question, argues The Engineer, is, given the line and the cars fit for it, what shall the engine be like, and is it possible to construct an engine at all which, with a moderately heavy train, will attain and maintain a velocity of one hundred miles an hour, on a line with no grade heavier than, 1 in 300. After a thorough examination of the question in all its bearings, The Engineer's figures prove that it is absolutely impossible to obtain a speed of one hundred miles an hour on a railway, if the resistance is anything like 120 pounds per ton.

Bed Bug.

The Borax Miner assumes responsibility for this: Here is a new use for borax, which is said to be effectual in the riddance of these little red pests which do not smell sweet by any name. The recipe is vouched for by one of the "oldest inhabitants:" Dissolve borax in boiling water until the water has taken up as much borax as it will hold. Apply the solution with a brush, or pour it into places where the bugs most do congregate, and they will all disappear.

Sale of a Mine.

[From The Humboldt (Nev.) Silver State.]

In Oakland, California, on the 16th instant, the certificate of incorporation of the Oakland Gold and Silver Mining Company was filed in the County Clerk's office. The objects of the corporation are to acquire and work the Eagle mine, in Indian district, eight miles south of Unionville, and to erect a mill, etc. The capital stock is $4,000,000 in gold coin, divided into 40,000 shares of $100 each. The time of existence is 50 years. The Trustees elected to serve the first three months are Geo. C. Potter, F. K. Shattuck, J. Ross Browne, James Dods, G. A. Miller, A. L. Page and R. C. Gaskill. The principal place of business will be Oakland, California. The mine was sold to the above company by W. J. Walker and John McCarthy, both old residents of this county, for $20,000 in gold coin, and the deeds and money changed hands last Monday evening. This has always been considered one of the best mines in the county. The vein will average six feet in width, and its course is almost due north and south. It has been prospected by incline and shaft. The incline, following the course of the ledge, is in a distance of 160 feet, exposing mineral its entire length. Further up the hill a shaft was started and sunk to the depth of 160 feet, connecting with the incline, in good milling ore the entire depth. By actual measurement, almost 6,000 tons of good ore are thus exposed. The entire ledge, by tests made by D. Van Lennep, has been proved to be worth $30 per ton in gold, the predominating mineral. The mine is located between the lime-rock and quartzite, and is pronounced a true fissure vein by some of the leading mining experts of the Pacific Coast. Rev. Mr. White, ex-Mineralogist of Nevada, and a gentleman whose reputation as an expert is second to none, and Gen. A. L. Page of Pioche, well known all over this State, examined and reported on the mine, and on their reports the property was purchased. The first right to the water in the creek, and several large springs of water near the mine, belong to the company. Gen. Page will commence the erection of a 10 stamp mill immediately, which, it is expected, will be ready to commence crushing by the 1st of January, 1874. The works of the company will be under the superintendence of Mr. B. F Bivins, who is the prime mover in the organization of the company. Mr Bivins examined the mine several months ago, and was so well pleased with the prospect that he negotiated the purchase and organized the company among his intimate friends, some of the most influential business men of the city of Oakland. He is well and favorably known all over this State, and is largely interested in mining in Eureka county. The men comprising this company are all wealthy. It is their intention to work the mine for its dividends, and its stock will never appear upon the San Francisco stock board. They have entered into this work with the determination to make it a success, and such it is sure to be. Mr. Bivins informs us that he will commence work by letting a contract for 200 feet of shaft. Until the mill is built all the work on the mine will be done by contract. The obstacles overcome, and the firm determination of purpose exhibited by Mr. Bivins in perfecting this organization, at once stamps him as a man who will not be frightened at trifles, and one who is certain to materially assist in the development of the mining interests of this part of the county. A few more such men in our midst and we will soon have a county next to none in the State for prosperity.

Wilmington—Its Brilliant Future

The Los Angeles Star gives the following in relation to the prospects of Los Angeles and Wilmington:

If there is a point on the Pacific coast with a brilliant future, that place is Wilmington. At the anchorage, six miles distant from the wharf, for the last month, at any time, might have been seen a small forest of masts attached to sailing vessels, laden with freight for this port—there being at one time nearly ten thousand tons of merchandise awaiting the lighters and light-draught steamers for conveyance to the landing.

Two years since, the commerce of this port was over sixty thousand tons. The present year it will probably be near two hundred thousand tons, and now that the Thirty-second Parallel Railroads have combined, and when the grand depot for construction and heavy freight is located at Wilmington where nature dictates that it should be, who can form a just estimate of the hundreds of tons of merchandise that must come and go through our port after one or two short years have passed away.

Congress has generously appropriated four hundred and twenty five thousand dollars for the improvement of our harbor, about one hundred and thirty thousand of which remains unexpended, and will be used in dredging the channel.

Hon. B. D. Wilson, with his usual liberality, has offered to donate to the Methodist Association a large and expensively furnished three-story building and another one-story, with ten fine rooms, for a college. The details of the gift are about completed, and soon our sea-port will have a first-class seminary for boys and girls.

But the most important of all is a large and commodious wharf, with seven feet of water at the end of it at low tide; with a storehouse thirty by three hundred feet, in which teams and vessels can receive and discharge freight without the expense of lighterage and dravage.

Wilmington has steadily marched on. From that port was commenced the first railroad in Southern California, which now has three branches under construction—one of which will bring all the trade of Los Nietos, Anaheim, Santa Ana, and eventually, San Juan Capistrino. Another, the rich and rapidly increasing trade of Owens River, and who can foretell the millions of tons of merchandise that will go and come on the Colorado River line, tapping, as it will, all the trade of Arizona, part of Nevada and Southern California.

The Execution of the Modocs.

Following is the report of the execution of Capt Jack and his band: Boston Charley and Black Jim were led on the scaffold first, Schonchin next. They mounted it with apparent indifference and iron nerve, having evidently resolved to die as brave as they had lived. Jack went easily up the stairway, but looked wretched and miserable. The fetters had been struck off, but their arms were securely pinioned with cords. At precisely 9:45 A. M. the interpreters, O. C. Applegate and David Hill, explained to the culprits the nature of the order to be read to them by the Adjutant, and at 10 o'clock Adjutant Kingsbury read the order promulgating the sentence of the Commission and the President's order therein, with the orders of the Secretary of War and the Department Commander in the premises. The two reprieved prisoners, Barncho and Slolucks, yet stood on the ground in front of the scaffold, shackled and under guard. During the reading the pinioned victims were seated on a platform of the scaffold, with their feet upon the drop, listening anxiously, but of course not understanding a word. The reading occupied ten minutes. Then the Adjutant read the order of commutation in the cases of Barncho and Slolucks, and they were taken back to the stockade, evidently happy. The Chaplain then prayed for the culprits, to which they listened attentively. At 10:15 the fatal nooses were placed around the necks of the culprits under direction of Capt. Hoge, who bid farewell to them, and the black caps were placed over the heads of all the culprits. It must have been an awful moment. At 10:20 they stood on the drop. The rope was cut by an assistant, and the bodies swung round and round, Jack and Jim apparently dying easily, but Boston and Schonchin suffering terrible convulsions. At 10:28 they had no pulse. As the drop fell with a terrible deadly thud, four poor wretches fell into eternity, and a half-smothered cry of horror went up from over 500 Klamath Indians, who witnessed the spectacle.

San Francisco Items.

The wife of Charles Betts committed suicide by cutting her throat, in San Francisco, October 6.

A. B. Meacham, the Commissioner who so narrowly escaped death at the Canby massacre, has been delivering lectures on the Indian question. He ought to know something about it worth telling.

Regular police officer Robert Burke committed suicide October 6, by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. He was desperately in love with a young lady school teacher, Katie Green. She would not marry him on account of the opposition of her aunt. On a table in his room was found a note to a brother officer.

Narrow Gauge.

We are informed that the prospects of the narrow gauge are brighter than ever before. It is looked upon as a certainty now in place of a probability. An important meeting of the directors was held last week in Stockton, but as our representatives have not yet returned, we are unable to give a report of the proceedings, though from the press below we learn that the engineer's reports were most flattering, and the company is prepared to commence the work of grading at once.—Visalia Times, Oct. 4.

Another.

Fire and Loss of Life.

Within a few minutes of 10 o'clock on the morning of Monday last there occurred a sad casualty in Lone Pine, resulting in the burning to death of an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Phillips. During the absence of the father, Mrs. Phillips had occasion to go a short distance from the house in search of an older child, which had strayed away in its play, leaving the baby alone in the house. Just how the fire started is unknown, but in a few moments the entire structure was consumed, before any rescue could be had. A stiff wind was prevailing at the time, but the house being situated some distance from any other, the flames did not spread. The sympathies of the community are with the unfortunate parents in their truly deplorable loss.

Committed to Answer.

E. P. Welch was brought before Justice Gunnison on Wednesday for examination on the charge of murdering Frank Moore. The prisoner's counsel, Paul Bennett, desired to waive an examination, but the Court refused to grant the motion, as there was an abundance of testimony available to formally convict, and thus bar possible legal technicalities. The testimony elicited all tended to paint the alleged charge of cold-blooded murder even blacker than popular rumor has done. The prisoner was remanded to jail under commitment to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Progressing.

The work of putting desks and other furniture in the several county offices in the Court House is progressing finely, under the direction of Mr. Gerrish. The desks, tables, etc., are completed, as is also the railing in the Clerk's office, all in good style and shape. The Judge's bench and seats for the Court room remain to be put up, requiring a few days longer, after which justice can be ground out and the business of the county go on in the best manner, it convenient and neatly furnished Court room and offices will tend to that desirable end.

New Material.

It is the calculation for a member of THE INDEPENDENT firm to shortly purchase in San Francisco some extensive and necessary additions to the working material of the office. This will involve a big outlay, and necessitate the very closest collection of ALL outstanding accounts, and matters will be greatly facilitated if all parties knowing themselves indebted to the concern will immediately remit. In each instance the amount due is small, but in the aggregate they amount to considerable, which we must have.

Some More.

Quite a number of our finest looking young men left here last Spring on a visit to the East. By ones and twos they have all straggled back, looking fine and hearty and no wise depressed, though nary a frow to the lot, the last to come being J. S. Brown and George Shedd, who got here Thursday last. It seems like the Eastern girls have become very fastidious of late years. Perhaps it is the earthquakes they are afraid of, they have heard so many "shocking" items about them.

The Eclipse.

There are prospects that Capt. Eudey, of whom we spoke a week or two since, will make a systematic effort in London toward the re-inauguration of operations on the Eclipse. The mine in question is a mammoth ledge of low-grade gold ore, and in our belief there is no question but what it can be made to pay, and largely, too, by placing it in the hands of an honest, competent and judicious manager.

Transfer of Teams.

Mr E. Olinghouse is transferring his teams from the Los Angeles and Cerro Gordo to the Columbus and Wadsworth road, where they will engage in the borax freighting business. The quantity of this freight will be larger than ever after the weather gets cold enough to favor the collection of the crude material.

A New Hall.

The Odd Fellows of Bishop Creek, in conjunction with the I. O. G. T., are perfecting arrangements for the erection of a fine, new hall. It is to be a two-story building, and located at Sneden ville. It is to be hoped that the matter will be carried to success.

Important Notice.

The L. A. & S. P. Railroad company give notice that all goods consigned to Inyo must be plainly marked in the care of some freighter, or else a special written order will be required before the goods are delivered. See notice elsewhere from the Superintendent.

Bakery.

Andy Culberson has established a bakery, confectionery shop, etc., in his new building at the west end of Kearsarge street. An establishment of this kind has long been needed here, and will, no doubt, do a good business. See advertisement for particulars.

Proceedings of the Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met on Monday, pursuant to adjournment, in regard to the canvass of the returns of the late election and for other purposes. Present Messrs. Bell and Hutchison. The newly appointed member, W. L. Hunter, was not present, so that nothing could be done in regard to the canvass. This is to be regretted, but no doubt paramount reasons prevented Mr. Hunter from attending, and thus relieving the dead lock. It is much to be hoped there will be a full Board present at the meeting set for the 20th instant to canvass the returns for the judicial election, and also to decide what is to be done with the other.

As a matter of form M. W. Hammarstrand filed an application demanding the count referred to, and issuance of certificates in accordance therewith to the proper parties, but the demand was refused.

The rate of county taxes was fixed at $3 on the hundred, divided among the several funds in cents as follows: General, 60 cents; Interest and Building, 40; School, 20; Hospital 23; Contingent, 15; Sinking, 12; Building, 25; Road, 18; Mono Debt, 45, and 50 to the State, total $3.

The sum of $374, non collectable taxes for 1872-3, was ordered canceled. The resignation of W. C. Snodgrass, Constable 5th Township, was accepted. The bill of J. P. M. Perham, goods furnished Coroner, amounting to $103, was ordered paid out of the General Fund; and $70 out of the Contingent to Bancroft & Co., for election blanks and expressage on the same.

Sylvania District.

Sylvania district, of which we last week promised an account, was organized June 14th, 1873. It is situated 12 miles southeast of Piper's ranch, Fish Lake valley, and about 15 miles west of Lida mining district. It is easy of access, and has fine facilities for reduction works, wood and water, two very important items, being plentiful. The State line run by Von Schmidt cuts the district through the center, leaving the mines pretty equally divided between the two States, but the reduction works, and consequently the principal business place, will be in Inyo county. The ores are principally smelting, and are found in fissures in a quartzite belt with lime outcroppings interspersed, traceable for several miles. There are, besides, quite a number of rich silver locations. The chief smelting mines are the Liberal, Gladiator, the two Emmas, Transit, Eugenie, Mountain View, Last Chance and the Metalic, with a number of later discoveries further south but on the same belt. Prospecting is going on with a vim, and the district is happily blessed with the right sort of miners, who are determined to see that their ledges have depth to them—sufficient to satisfy the most exacting of mining experts, and the ledges have almost universally presented at the bottom of the 40, 60 and 80 foot shafts a better appearance than on top. The owners of some of the most important developments are Shaw & Manser, Halsey & Hubbard, Morati & Bersy, and W. F. Kincaid. Scott & Fitzgerald of Lida have recently purchased a valuable interest in the district.

No Reflection.

Last week we alluded to the fact that, among other adverse circumstances, we would be compelled to offer a "short" paper because "competent" help was not available. That part was a mistake, because just at the nick of time John Heckel came along and pitched in, and he can set more type than anybody. In point of fact the short paper apology should have been passed last week and brought forward to this. Country newspaper people have now and then various obstacles (not always "unexpected," however) to overcome if they properly fulfill their own desires in making a paper, but they very often find these obstacles rather too much, hence an apology now and then, but oftener none at all, and this last will most likely be the rule henceforth. We will do the best we can; if satisfactory, it is well, if otherwise, that is well, too.

Religious.

Rev. M. W. Pratt, the new preacher in charge of the Owens River district, arrived here on Thursday last, and will enter upon his work at once. Looking back through the vista of nearly two decades, we recall the time when Mr. Pratt first made profession of religion, and though until the present we have not met since, we are sure he will be found an earnest and energetic worker in the Lord's service, and a laborer worthy of his hire. He will hold services to-morrow at George's Creek at 11 A. M., and at the school house here at half past 7, prompt.

New Hotel.

Charley Duval, of Cerro Gordo, informs us that he is preparing to put up a hotel building in that place. From all present prospects, "Bullion Hill" will boast of the largest town in Inyo within a year after the completion of the new water works.

Paper Hanging, Etc.

Parties desiring to have their houses fixed up for Winter, or good looks simply, are referred to Mr. Wm. Goodman's advertisement in this issue. There is no question but that he understands his business very well.

Gone a-Carpentering.

Mr. John Heckel, one of the swiftest compositors in this region, has again abandoned the stick and rule for the plane and square, having thrown up his "sit" for a "job" at the Post.

An Excitement.

It was reported, which report was sustained by very plausible grounds, that a heavy Vigilante Committee from Bishop Creek would call on Welch, the murderer, the evening after his incarceration in the county jail, and place his case within the jurisdiction of Judge Lynch. Under-Sheriff Moore had received orders from Sheriff Mulkey, then at Bishop Creek, to take every precaution for the security of his prisoner, as duty required, and accordingly he summoned a number of citizens to assist him in preserving the majesty of the law. For various reasons he soon became satisfied that he had a very unreliable posse—one that would either surrender at the first demand or desert squarely to the enemy, should such appear. So he notified Capt. MacGowan, at the Post, that the presence of some of his troops would possibly be necessary to preserve the peace. In fifty minutes after receiving the notification the Captain marched his company two miles and a half and had his sentinels properly posted at the jail. This was really a feat for the boys and their commander to be proud of. As a rule, it amounted almost to conviction with everybody that no attempt to lynch the murderer would be made, or that any such committee had been got together, but there was no harm to be on the safe side, so the troops remained on duty till morning, and seemed to enjoy the Court House bivouac first-rate.

New Legal Firm.

Our old friends P. Reddy and Major H. C. Egbert have formed a law partnership. We won't recommend them, for the simple reason that we think they don't need any. See card.

Work Begun.

Contractor Gerrish has commenced work on the Post cemetery, and in a few weeks it will present quite a different appearance.

Gold Mountain.

[From The Austin Reveille, Oct. 4.]

John Frost has just returned from Gold Mountain and Lida Valley, where he has been for some time superintending the work of opening the mines belonging to the company with which he is connected. He informs us that he is sinking on the Independent and Blue Gravel ledges. On the former a depth of 50 feet has been attained, disclosing a solid ledge of 6 feet in thickness. On the Blue Gravel a depth of 30 feet has been reached also disclosing a ledge of high grade ore. One sample which he brought in from the Independent was assayed at the Manhattan mill in this city, and gave a return of $558 per ton. Following are the results of some assays of ore from the two ledges, made by J. D. Pringle of this city: Blue Wing—silver, $31 42, gold, $25 01; Oriental—silver, $188 50, gold, $12 50; Oriental—silver, $417 84 gold, $125 48; Independent—silver, $417 84, gold, trace.

The company with which Mr. Frost is connected contemplates the erection of a mill as soon as warranted by the development of the mines; the machinery is now ready for shipment. A site for the mill has been selected at Lida, where there is an excellent supply of both wood and water. There are about twelve men now at Gold Mountain. Frank Higgs is Postmaster; but is going to resign, as the salary ($12 per annum) is too small, and the duties are so arduous that he is unable to leave the camp.

At Lida Valley, Hiskey & Walker's mill is running steadily, and turning out bullion at the rate of $1,000 per day. The Brown's Hope, Cinderella and Blue Dick locations are being worked steadily, and are producing ore of a high grade. A quantity of ore from a ledge owned by Len Martin and others was worked at the mill and yielded at the rate of $1,100 per ton. There are 75 men at Lida.

Mr. Frost expresses himself as highly pleased with the appearance of the mines both at Lida and Gold Mountain and as having every confidende in the permanence and richness of the mines and the future prosperity of the districts. He intends returning in a few days.

A Child Accidently and Foolishly Shot.

The Gold Hill News of October 3 relates this incident. The father should be put in the lock up for three months: About 1 o'clock to-day the family of Wm. Stutridge, residing on High street, were overwhelmed with grief owing to the accidental shooting of a little son, aged nine months. This terrible and probably fatal accident occurred in this wise: The father had the child on his knee at the time, and was endeavoring to amuse him. A neighbor's child, who happened to be playing about the room, had in its possession a small-sized pocket derringer, which was not supposed to be loaded. The father thinking that the weapon was perfectly harmless, directed the lad to present the pistol to the child's forehead and pretend to shoot. The boy carried out his instructions only too well. Unfortunately the pistol was loaded, and the boy held the muzzle of it so near the child's face, that on its being discharged his forehead was blackened with the powder. The ball struck the little fellow very near the center of the forehead, and passed entirely through his head in a horizontal direction. Doctors Mansen and Hall, who arrived shortly after the accident occurred, made an incision in the scalp and removed the ball from the backside of the child's head. There are but slight hopes of the little one's recovery. The parents are wild with grief owing to the sad and deplorable accident.

Home Made Picture Frames.

Cut strips of stiff pasteboard, about an inch wide, the desired length, clip the ends to a point, and cover with any nice black cloth, like broadcloth or fine cassimere; lap the ends at the corners of the frames and fasten with a white or gilt button. Bind your picture and glass together with strips of gummed paper, and glue on to the frame. Hang against a white wall. Bronze paper, which can be bought for eight cents a sheet, may be used instead of cloth, in which case a short strip across the corners of the frame is a great addition to its comeliness.

—It wasn't one of Job's comforts to have a severe cold, and be told by condoling friends when and where he caught it, as if he didn't know how it was, and just how it felt himself. Job escaped that consolatory experience.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL.

THE SUBSCRIBER TAKES PLEASURE IN announcing to the people of Inyo county that he has purchased and fitted up as a hospital the Beaudry Hotel Building, adjoining the military post at Camp Independence. All the adobes have been removed and their place applied with lumber; the grounds are handsomely laid out with shade trees and clover, and have a pure running stream of mountain water.

There is an excellent bath room and dispensary attached. One room is set aside for the county's sick, leaving ample room for private patients. The Northern Stage Line passes the door, and the place is easy of access from the town of Independence. The charges for board and lodging do not exceed those of any hotel or boarding house, offering equal accommodations, and the establishment has the advantage of having competent help and medical advice always at hand, being close by the house of the post surgeon at the camp.

Title IV, Part I, Penal Code.

SECTION 41. Every person charged with the performance of any duty under the provisions of any law of this State relating to elections who wilfully neglects or refuses to perform it, or who in his official capacity knowingly and fraudulently acts in contravention or violation of any of the provisions of such law is, unless a different punishment for such acts or omission is prescribed by this Code, punishable by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the State Prison not exceeding five years or by both.

SEC. 42. Every person who wilfully causes, procures or allows himself to be registered in the Great Register of any county, knowing himself not to be entitled to such registration, is punishable by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the County Jail or State Prison not exceeding one year, or both. In all cases where, on the trial of a person charged with any offense under the provisions of this section, it appears in evidence that the accused stands registered in the Great Register of any county without being qualified for such registration, the Court must order such registration to be canceled.

SEC. 43. Every person who, after being required by the Board of Judges at any election, refuses to be sworn, or who, after being sworn, refuses to answer any pertinent question propounded by such Board, touching his right or the right of any other person to vote, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 44. Every person summoned to appear and testify, before any Board of Registration, who wilfully disobeys such summons, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 45. Every person not entitled to vote, who fraudulently votes, and every person who votes more than once at any one election, or knowingly hands in two or more tickets folded together, or changes any ballot after the same has been deposited in the ballot box, or adds, or attempts to add any ballot to those legally polled at any election, either by fraudulently introducing the same into the ballot box before or after the ballots therein have been counted, or adds to or mixes with, or attempts to add to or mix with, the ballots lawfully polled, other ballots, while the same are being counted or canvassed, or at any other time, with intent to change the result of such election, or carries away or destroys, or attempts to carry away or destroy, any poll list, or ballots, or ballot box, for the purpose of breaking up or invalidating such election, or wilfully detains, mutilates, or destroys any election returns, or in any manner so interferes with the officers holding such election or conducting such canvass, or with the voters lawfully exercising their rights of voting at such election, as to prevent such election or canvass from being fairly held and lawfully conducted, is guilty of felony.

SEC. 46. Every person not entitled to vote, who fraudulently attempts to vote, or who, being entitled to vote, attempts to vote more than once at any election, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 47. Every person who procures, aids, assists, counsels or advises another to give or offer his vote at any election, knowing that the person is not qualified to vote, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 48. Every officer or Clerk of Election who aids in changing or destroying any poll list, or in placing any ballots in the ballot box, or taking any therefrom, or adds, or attempts to add, any ballots to those legally polled at such election, either by fraudulently introducing the same into the ballot box before or after the ballots therein have been counted, or adds to or mixes with, or attempts to add to or mix with, the ballots polled any other ballots, while the same are being counted or canvassed, or at any other time, with intent to change the result of such election, or allows another to do so when in his power to prevent it, or carries away, or destroys, or knowingly allows another to carry away or destroy, any poll list, ballot box, or ballots lawfully polled, is punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison for not less than two nor more than seven years.

SEC. 49. Every Inspector, Judge, or Clerk of an election, who, previous to putting the ballot of an elector in the ballot box, attempts to find out any name on such ballot, or who opens, or suffers the folded ballot of any elector which has been handed in to be opened or examined previous to putting the same into the ballot box, or who makes or places any mark or device on any folded ballot with the view to ascertain the name of any person for whom the elector has voted, or who, without the consent of the elector, discloses the name of any person which such Inspector, Judge or Clerk has fraudulently or illegally discovered to have been voted for by such elector, is punishable by fine, not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars.

SEC. 50. Every person who forges or counterfeits returns of an election purporting to have been held at a precinct, town, or ward where no election was in fact held, or wilfully substitutes forged or counterfeit returns of election in the place of the true returns, for a precinct, town or ward where an election was actually held, is punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison for a term not less than two nor more than ten years.

SEC. 51. Every person who wilfully adds to, or subtracts from, the votes actually cast at an election, in any returns, or who alters such returns, is punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison for not less than one nor more than five years.

SEC. 52. Every person who aids or abets in the commission of any of the offenses mentioned in the four preceding sections, or who, being present at or cognizant of the commission of either of such offenses, does not give information thereof as soon as practicable to the District Attorney or Grand Jury of the proper county, or to some Justice of the Peace of such county, is punishable by imprisonment in the County Jail for the period of six months, or in the State Prison not exceeding two years.

SEC. 53. Every person who, by force, threats, menaces, bribery, or any corrupt means, either directly or indirectly attempts to influence any elector in giving his vote, or to deter him from giving the same, or attempts by any means whatever to awe, restrain, hinder or disturb any elector in the free exercise of the right of suffrage, or furnishes any elector wishing to vote, who cannot read, with a ticket, informing or giving such elector to understand that it contains a name written or printed thereon different from the name which is written or printed thereon, or defrauds any elector at any such election, by deceiving and causing such elector to vote for a different person or any office than he intended or desired to vote for; or who, being Inspector, Judge, or Clerk of any election, while acting as such, induces or attempts to induce, any elector, either by menace or reward, or promise thereof, to vote differently from what such elector intended or desired to vote, he is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 54. Every person who, with intent to promote the election of himself, or any other person, either:

1. Furnishes entertainment at his expense to any meeting of electors previous to or during an election;
2. Pays for, procures, or engages to pay for any such entertainment;
3. Furnishes or engages to pay or deliver any money or property for the purpose of procuring the attendance of voters at the polls, or for the purpose of compensating any person for procuring attendance of voters at the polls, except for the conveyance of voters who are sick or infirm;
4. Furnishes or engages to pay or deliver any money or property for any purpose intended to promote the election of any candidate, except for the expenses of holding and conducting public meetings for the discussion of public questions, and of printing and circulating ballots, handbills, and other papers previous to such election;

—Is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 55. Every person who, being a candidate at any election, offers or agrees to appoint or procure the appointment of any particular person to office as an inducement or consideration to any person to vote for, or procure or aid in procuring the election of such candidate, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 56. Every person not being a candidate, who communicates any offer made in violation of the last section to any person with intent to induce him to vote for, or to procure or aid in procuring the election of the candidate making the offer, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 57. (§§84, 85, 86). Every person who gives or offers a bribe to any officer or member of any legislative caucus, political convention, committee, primary election, or political gathering of any kind, held for the purpose of nominating candidates for offices of honor, trust, or profit in this State, with intent to influence the person to whom such bribe is given or offered to be more favorable to one candidate than another, and every person, member of either of the bodies in this section mentioned, who receives or offers to receive any such bribe, is punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison not less than one nor more than fourteen years.

SEC. 58. Every person who by threats, intimidations, or unlawful violence wilfully hinders or prevents electors from assembling in public meeting for the consideration of public questions, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 59. Every person who wilfully disturbs or breaks up any public meeting of electors or others, lawfully being held for the purpose of considering public questions, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 60. Every person who makes, offers, or accepts any bet or wager upon the result of any election, or upon the success or failure of any person or candidate, or upon the number of votes to be cast either in the aggregate or for any particular candidate, or upon the vote to be cast by any person, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 61. Every person who wilfully violates any of the provisions of the laws of this State relating to elections is, unless a different punishment for such violation is prescribed by this Code, punishable by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the state Prison not exceeding five years, or by both.

SUMMONS.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE SIXTEENTH Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo. John C. Morrison, Jr., plaintiff, against W. G. Squires, defendant. Action brought in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and the complaint filed in said county of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court.

The People of the State of California send greeting to W. G. Squires. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise, within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint. The said action is brought to recover the sum of Eight hundred and fifty-seven 72-100 dollars in gold coin of the United States, for goods, wares and merchandise sold and delivered to said defendant by said plaintiff, at defendant's special instance and request, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1872, together with interest thereon from said date at the rate of ten per cent. per annum. And you are hereby notified if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment by default against you, in accordance with the prayer of said plaintiff's complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, this Sixteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy three. [SEAL]

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE, FREE FROM ALCOHOL.

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA Vinegar Bitters.

No Person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittant Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most Wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Douglass, Broderic, Baker.

[Ingersoll's Life and Times of Horace Greeley.]

Senator Douglass openly declared in favor of popular sovereignty. He opposed "Lecompton" in the Senate with that persistent pluck for which he was more remarkable than any other of his cotemporary statesmen. He was removed from the position he had long held—Chairman of the Committee on Territories—and his influence with the administration was destroyed. Nevertheless he kept up the fight with most admirable gallantry and with increasing earnestness, richly earning the approbation of his countrymen and receiving the hearty plaudits of the Republicans.

Among eminent men of the Democratic party who sustained Mr. Douglas, was Senator David C. Broderick, of California. Mr. Broderick had risen from an humble position in life. He spent his youth and early manhood in the city of New York, where his natural talents and courageous spirit gave him great influence. Removing to California not long after the war with Mexico he became a prominent politician in the new State, and rapidly grew in intellectual and moral stature. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1856, and there his commanding presence, chivalric bearing, and brilliant parts as a debater, at once gave him prominence and influence. Unless it were by the ruffianly assault upon Senator Sumner, in 1856, by a representative from South Carolina, the utter barbarism of the slave power was not more conspicuously illustrated than in the case of the accomplished and generous Broderick. The slave power doomed him to destruction, and he fell in a duel in September, 1859, slain by the Chief Justice of the State which this victim of a horrible custom had done so much to honor. The death of Mr. Broderick gave occasion to one of the noblest exhibitions of American eloquence, in the appreciative, majestic and profoundly pathetic funeral oration by Edward D. Baker, afterward United States Senator, afterward Brigadier General of the Union army, who met his death in battle gallantly contending against the same power at whose command Broderick himself had fallen.

Fifty-nine Fights in less than two Hours.

On Saturday night four pugilistically inclined gentlemen from Albion, all well versed in "the manly art of self defense," drew a line across the principal public highway leading from this city to Gold Hill, just beyond the Divide, peeled off, and swore that every man should fight who stepped his foot across the "dead-line" during the night—or at least until such time as one of their number should get whipped by one man (for no foul play was allowed or indulged in) or all of them should be whipped by a crowd of passers. The result was fifty-nine fights in less than two hours. The Bulls were successful for a long time, and put heads on some fifty-odd men before they found their match. At last, however, three robust sons of the Emerald Isle happened that way, and being attacked, sailed in and gave the dead-liners (all four of them) an unmerciful beating and took possession of the field. Ascertaining what the subjugated enemy had been up to, the conquerers concluded they would run the circus awhile themselves. They had not long to wait when two other Irish giants came pacing down the hill. One of the new dead-line guards drew his coat across the road in front of his passing countrymen, and the battle opened at once with the most savage ferocity. In less than a minute one of the three conquerors lay senseless in the road, and the other two were feeling it across the hill toward the Bullion works, with tattered and bloody shirts streaming in the wind. When Greek met Greek peace followed, and reigned profound till morning.—Virginia Chronicle.

—The sorrowing survivor of ten successive husbands is one of the notable people of Lewisburg, Arkansas, and even now she is but seventy-three years old.

—Thurlow Weed totally abstained from the Utica Convention. Conkling was enough.

Swamp Laud Jumping.

It is a fact well known that large tracts of good, dry lands, that actually need irrigation a considerable portion of the year, were returned by the surveyors years ago as swamp and overflowed land, both in this county, Fresno and Kern; and that these lands in large tracts have come into the hands of speculators at nominal prices, ranging from a bit to two bits an acre; the surveyors having, it is believed, freely perjured themselves in the interests of speculators. A recent decision, to which we made reference some months ago, makes it look quite probable that upon contesting the title, the rights of those who settled upon these lands will be maintained in the courts, the other title being clearly a fraud. We hear that settlers are now "jumping" these so called "swamp lands" on King's River. They came in force, and there is no getting them off except through the courts. They don't seem to scare worth a cent. They have a faith in the Government title, under which they claim and express a willingness to abide the result. There are other large bodies of land in this valley, held under the swamp land act, which are liable to the same test. Public sentiment is with the settlers, and we look to see this matter tested in the courts at an early day.—Visalia Delta, Oct. 9.

A New Kink.

A few days since the daughter of a well to do ranchman, residing on the headwaters of Walker River, a handsome and well educated young lady about sixteen or seventeen years of age, eloped with a young man of the Piute persuasion who had been working about her father's place. The girl and her dusky lover got considerably the start of the father, and it would seem done from fall traveling toward the wilderness and the warrior's castle of sagebrush on the Lake of Walker, but the father did not let the grass grow under his feet or his horses hoofs. He procured the best horse in the settlement, and rode a distance of 180 miles in 18 hours. He caught his runaway daughter somewhere between Walker Lake and the Sink of the Carson, and snatched her home bald-headed. What became of the gallant "lawyer" we have not learned. The chances are that the irate parent made it so warm for him that he will not hereafter hanker after a white father-in-law.—Virginia Enterprise.

The New Mines.

Last Thursday Visalia was thrown into quite a furore of excitement by the return of several of our citizens from the region of the new mines. They report the region to be up the main branch of the Kaweah river, and about sixty miles in a southeasterly direction from this place. They also report quite a number of prospectors on the ground, and a number of valuable ledges discovered. Some specimens exhibited show free gold in considerable quantity. There are also indications of silver, copper and lead; the latter, perhaps, in the greatest abundance. The lodes are said to be large, and some of them would be easily worked. Several companies have been formed, and further proceedings are being discussed. Already the "sharps" are talking of building a town up there and making a road. We are likely to have lively times in consequence at the opening of Spring. Some talk of making another trip, though the season for work has passed and the dangers of Winter are near.—Visalia Delta.

A Tragedy Indeed.

One of the most heart-rending stories of the year comes from Fond du Lac. A young lady was passing through a piece of ground adjoining a farm house with her lover, when the girl was attacked by a savage dog. Before her escort could protect her the dog had seized her by the breast and tore the breast from the body. When the young man saw the dog shaking a portion of the body of his intended he fainted away. The young lady, however, did not faint. She was so mortified that she seized a fence rail and she went for the dog, and she pounded him until he laid still. When her lover recovered, the young woman was trying to hide one of the screens that people put over plates to keep the flies off. It seems that the dog didn't draw blood, owing to the fashions of Fond du Lac, which it is needless to describe. However, there is great excitement at Fond du Lac, and the young man has broken off his engagement and bought that dog—what is left of him—and is going to set him again.

—Henry Ward Beecher was requested to lecture for the benefit of the Canterbury Educational Association, and was informed that if we would come he might calculate Canterbury would nominate him as Gen. Grant's successor at the White House. He wrote in reply: "I shall not be able to comply with your request, even in view of your tempting offer. If I live until I am nominated for President I shall be so old that Methusalah will be regarded as a young chap."

—The handwriting of the late Chief Justice Chase was very peculiar. He wrote a singularly small and almost feminine hand, which, however, he turned off with great rapidity and nervous force. His private letters, which were more numerous than those of almost any public man who filled a station so eminent, were models of terse and clear English.

Joe Walker.

After a siege of months, Superintendent Colby has succeeded in getting the water sufficiently low in this mine to be able to commence taking out quartz. We expect to hear of the mill starting Monday next. This is gratifying news. The Joe Walker is one of our best mines, and its successful working will give us new life.—Havilah Miner.

THE RESULT.

Although we have not full details of the vote from every precinct on all the candidates, yet the figures below regarding the leading candidates, McKinstry and Reed, are full and correct, except two small precints on the former. McKinstry's majority over McKee, the next highest, is 101, with a chance for an increase of two or three more. Reed, for District Judge, over Laspeyre has a positive majority of 61. Dwinelle and Brunson cut no figure in the fight. Taking the present vote for McKinstry and that of the previous election for the Independent candidate for Sheriff as the criterion, Inyo may be set down as the banner Independent county--at least among the smaller ones. We have no returns from other counties, except that given from Benton, in Mono.

Liberal Dicks.

Judging from the number and value of its newspapers, the city of Los Angeles is a huge institution. As a metropolis, an "inland seaport" with a great "back country" to support her she is simply tremendous. But in some things as a dead failure she is a perfect success. For instance, it would perhaps occur to some that a city demanding of us six dead-head copies of THE INDEPENDENT in order that her citizens may be informed through their press and public library of the probability of "the Inyo trade" continuing to be their exclusive sop, might decently subscribe and pay for more than two besides, or that some of their freighters, hotels, etc., might be reasonably expected to advertise a square or two. There is no hesitation about requesting our "valuable co operation" in any projected enterprise; valuable co-operation is cheap. How The Star, The Express, The Herald and La Cronica, all very excellent papers, sustain themselves in that city is beyond our ken. All down there save the railroad and Olinghouse have our very kindest permission to forever lose sight of the "Cerro Gordo bullion" and "Owens river trade."

Pending Elections.

Numerous important State elections occur or have occurred this month. Pennsylvania, Ohio, Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin were to have held general elections on Tuesday last. Our Judicial election took place on the following day, and like California, all the above States except Pennsylvania had three tickets in the field. Mississippi and Virginia hold elections soon, the fight in the former being between two Republicans, Ames and Alcorn, for the Senatorship, and in the latter between Republicans and Conservatives. On the 3d and 4th proximo Texas, Massachusetts and New York hold general elections. In all these the Grangers or Independents bring new elements to bear, so that previous elections afford no basis for the most expert politician to prognosticate results in those of the present.

"Sold Agin'."

Matt. T. Gisborn, a noted prospector, formerly of Cerro Gordo and whilom mining partner of our junior, has recently sold in New York two-thirds of his celebrated Mono mine, situated at Dry Creek, Utah Territory, for the round sum of $250,000—he still retaining a third. The Mono has been one of Utah's most enormously profitable mines. As a matter of course Matt. is cutting a dash, but his present "raise" has been distinguished from all previous ones by several judicious investments in other than mining property.

Not Flattering.

Late news from Wallapai is not of a flattering character. The best mines appear to be failing at less than 100 feet. We hope, however, the reports of failures in the mines may prove unfounded, for success at Wallapai is success at many other districts in the southern section.

IRRIGATING CANALS.

One of the most important problems for the people of this State to solve, and one that requires immediate attention, is to devise some safe system of irrigation to redeem the vast areas of rich lands to be found in every part of the State, but which are now comparatively valueless by reason of the uncertainties of the seasons, and lack of facilities for irrigating on an extensive scale. The only plan yet proposed or acted upon to compass the desired object is one of subsidies to incorporated companies, nominally of heavy capital. The charters of these companies are, as usual, so framed as to insure them special rights and absolute safety for, and high profits on, their investments. This is natural and reasonable enough in the abstract. The trouble is that in securing these rights to themselves, they leave none for the people in whose advantage they assume to work. These last have to take what is offered, and monopolies, whether railroad, canal or land grabbing, rarely or never have anything to offer worth having, when not enforced by statutes, and it too often happens even statutory requirements are treated with open contempt by just such corporations as now seek to obtain control of the surplus waters of the State for irrigating purposes, and with the control of these, also that of every acre they cover, let the ownership of the latter rest in whom it may. This fact, and its consequences, is the point of the problem. These canals properly and eqitably managed would become public blessings, whether owned by private parties, companies or the State; otherwise, and as now proposed, they can be naught but curses. They originate as bargains ostensibly by two parties for mutual aid and benefit, but in fact, proposed, accepted and of course, executed by and in the interest of but the one, which it is not necessary to specify.

An extensive and expensive irrigating canal has peen proposed for this valley. The business of the county would scarcely warrant the undertaking at present, but the day is not far distant when it will be deemed a necessity. But, in certain anticipation, the franchise may be sought after and possibly be secured at any time. If equal rights to all can be secured and guaranteed in plain words and clear conditions, no objections will be raised, but on the contrary, a general support may be extended when the proper time comes to begin such a work. To see that none but satisfactory conditions are permitted to attach to any franchise that may be worked through for the "Owens Valley Ship Canal" is the business of the Owens Valley farmers themselves; that is to say, it is their affair to see that they become in fact, real parties and free agents in a bargain in which they have such vital interests, instead of, as usual, permitting the party of capital to name all the conditions. We have no further suggestions of our own to offer at present, but will give place to the subjoined pertinent remarks from a late number of The Scientific Press:

It is of the utmost importance then to the farmers of the districts to be watered that they secure to themselves the control of the entire system of canals and their waters. No company of capitalists, should be allowed to get possession and hold the water interests of this or any other country, and our farmers should oppose, in and out of the Legislature and Congress, and in every Farmers' Club and Grange, the granting of any exclusive water privilege for purposes of irrigation.

A railroad company takes offense at the action or inaction of a city or village through which the road passes, and as if to punish the citizens for their temerity, they withhold every possible convenience in their power, otherwise easily derivable from the operations of the road. An irrigating company, holding the power of dispensing its waters where and to whom it may please, may, after a certain district of country shall have been built up from a desert to one of fertility and beauty by their canal, suddenly for some mere imaginary cause, cease to dispense its waters except at a "ring" price, and the very community for whose benefit the canal was made, suddenly finds itself at the mercy of a soulless corporation, to be wholly deprived of the fertilizing waters, or suffer the most onerous exactions.

Our mountain reservoirs and their out-flowing waters should belong to the State, and the State only should control its irrigating canals, as the State of New York does its Erie canal, for transportation purposes; and no other party or power than that of the people, and they entirely apart from speculative capitalists, should ever be permitted a controlling power, either in their construction or management; and we here caution the farmers of the State against any and every attempt of the money power to gobble up this, now infantile interest, but one which is destined to assume gigantic proportions and importance at no very distant day.

There are indications that application will be made to the next Congress asking exclusive rights and privileges for the prosecution of vast schemes of irrigation in this State, with a right to all the water and water way, and as much of the land as their utmost cupidity will warrant. These schemes should be met by resolute and determined opposition. The people should stand up and inch by inch dispute the progress of the power that would crush or enslave us or make us subservient to their avaricious grasp. Better let us have our irrigating canals by slow degrees in the right hands, than that a stupendous monopoly should construct them all in a year, and then hold them as a terror over us.

The Woman Question.

The Congressional Printer has made a contract with Mrs. S. E. Fuller, of New York, to do the wood engraving necessary to illustrate Raymond's forthcoming reports of surveys in Montana, etc. Mrs. Fuller is the head of an establishment of considerable magnitude, and the fact that she was awarded the contract as against so many competitors of acknowledged merit is the best evidence of the character of her work. This is, we believe, the first Government contract of the kind ever awarded to a woman, and the circumstance is worth more in solving the so-called "woman problem" than all the lectures the self constituted champions of woman's rights could deliver in a twelvemonth.

Outrage at Elko.

At Elko, October 12, Col. Harding, toll-keeper of the White Pine bridge, made a murderous attack on a man named Williams, cutting him down with an axe and then shooting him, leaving him for dead. Williams, however, recovered sufficiently to reach town, but will soon die from his wounds. The trouble originated at the bath house, out of which Williams ejected Harding, who persisted in entering the room occupied by the former.

The Cause of Failure.

It is understood in New York that the cause of the suspension of Fiske & Hatch was largely due to advances made to Huntington on Central Pacific Railroad grant bonds, for which there is no market at home or abroad. As Huntington declines sacrificing himself to relieve Fiske & Hatch, their early resumption is deemed impossible.

Oregon Election.

An election for Congressman to fill vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. James G. Wilson, was held in Oregon October 13. James W. Nesmith, Democrat, and Hiram Smith, Republican, were the candidates, and returns so far as received indicate the election of Nesmith by a considerable majority.

Not Sufficient.

The machinery now in use at the Los Angeles Woolen Mills has proved quite inadequate to fill the large supply of orders now coming in. The proprietors have deemed it necessary to order new machinery of greater power and completeness, which is expected on the next steamer.

Scratching in Colorado.

A Colorado paper says the late elections in that Territory surprised everybody. Both Democrats and Republicans, so-called, seemed to have the political itch, and did a large amount of scratching. Candidates were elected upon their personal popularity and merit, not for political reasons.

The Arizona Telegraph.

The San Diego and Prescott military telegraph is progressing rapidly. The post-holes were dug amid great enthusiasm at Maricopa Wells, towards Yuma, on the 12th instant, and the whole line will be in working order to Prescott by the 1st of December next.

Gone to Pioche.

Among many other notables going to Pioche to take part in the great Raymond & Ely-Hermes mining suit is Prof. Clarence King, who goes as an expert to give testimony on the side of the Raymond & Ely.

Alfalfa.

A writer at Anaheim, Los Angeles county, claims that their irrigated alfalfa lands yielded twelve tons of hay to the acre, and speaks of 1,000 sheep having been kept on forty acres of alfalfa for one year.

Affray at Tehechepi.

At Tehechepi, Kern county, on the 6th instant, a shooting and stabbing affray took place between two men named McKenzie and Wilkenstaff. Both were badly hurt, but neither fatally.

Senator Shot.

Pomeroy, the nice Kansas Senator, got shot in Washington, October 11, by ex-Representative Conway for alleged ruin of himself and family. The shot wasn't deep enough to do much good.

Horses Burned Up.

Hay & Cosner's large stables in Boston burned up with 86 fine horses on the 11th instant. The horses were worth from $300 to $1,000 each.

Arizona.

The Prescott Miner says the Indians are leaving Camp Verde Reservation in large numbers, and is confident another war is brewing.

The San Joaquin and Tulare Narrow Gauge.

A meeting of the Directors of the Stockton and Tulare Narrow Gauge Railroad was held at Stockton the 10th instant, at which Engineer Blair submitted a report, in substance as follows: The total length of the eastern survey from Stockton to Visalia is 175.80 miles. The greatest hight above tide water 460 feet; maximum grade ascending south 52.8 feet per mile; average, 28 87 feet per mile; total length of bridging of all kinds, 20,570 feet; total estimated cost, $1,973,166; average per mile, $11,223 23. The western survey is 164 miles in length; the greatest hight above tide water is 373 feet; maximum grade ascending south, 47 52 feet; descending south, 31.68; average per mile, 11 40 feet; total length of bridging of all kinds, 23,582 feet; total estimated cost, $1,877,448 53; average per mile, $11,447 85. The excess of the average cost per mile of the western line over the eastern is in consequence of the greater amount of bridging required on the former. The Directors did not vote on the adoption of either line. A committee was appointed to draft a bill to be submitted to the next Legislature to authorize the several counties to subscribe to the stock but not in the form of donations under the present law. The capital stock of the company is fixed at $500,000. The amount of stock subscribed to date is $188,000, of which 10 per cent. is paid in. The cost of surveying has been $5,728. It is understood that the bill authorizing counties to subscribe will except San Joaquin. The next regular meeting of the Board will be on the second Wednesday in November.

Heavy Bullion Shipment.

A cable dispatch from London to New York says that, on the 14th inst., "two hundred and ninety five thousand pounds of bullion were shipped to-day," but whose is not stated. Also, "sixty-two thousand pounds were withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day, nearly all for America." A possible explanation of these things is perhaps found in the gratifying but almost incredible statement that Tom Scott, the railroad king, sold in London forty-four million of the Texas Pacific bonds during the highth of the panic in Wall street. Tom may not be a whit more honest than the Central Pacific folks, but his success at such a time is a telling commentary on their lugubrious howlings

Indians Killed.

A gentleman who left Prescott, Arizona, on the 8th instant, arrived in Los Angeles on the 14th, and gives the following information: "Troops and Indian scouts under the command of Lieutenant Schuyler returned to Verde on the 5th, after a ten days' scout for Shay and his band of Indians, who deserted the reservation about ten days since. They encountered a part of the band near the mouth of the east fork of the Verde, and killed fourteen warriors The exact whereabouts of Shay is unknown. This is about the tenth time he has left after surrendering."

A Fiasco.

Donaldson, who was to have gone with Prof. Wise in the Graphic balloon, after that failure fitted up another air ship, and on the 6th instant filled it with gas, necessaries of all kinds and two companions, and sailed out to cross the seas over. While passing over Connecticut his balloon got caught in a gale, and striking the ground Donaldson and his companions jumped "ashore," and left the balloon to go it alone. So ends attempt No. 2 to reach Europe in a balloon.

A Rough Response.

A committee waited on Mayor Havemeyer of New York to see what could be done about modifying the contract system so as to give the 50,000 persons who were last year depending upon the Commissioner of Charities some means of earning their own bread, reported that the Mayor would do nothing, and that he said that he did care if one million of people were without the chance of earning their livelihood this Winter.

Stock Gambling.

Mr. Beecher has been lecturing on Stock Gambling in Boston. He says of the gamblers: "They have no moderation, and only live in the fiery passions of the street. But thousands of innocent men are ruined by them, and it is a burning shame that they should be allowed to carry ruin to innocent victims. If public opinion could not restrain them, a law should be passed that would."

The Meanest Outrage Yet.

Some malicious scoundrel, for whose cowardly meaness the English language has no word to properly express, revenged himself upon a San Francisco stable-keeper named Stewart, by administering poison to some thirty-five of his horses, most of which have died, and the survivors are rendered useless. No clue as yet has been obtained of the wretched perpetrator.

Won't Stand the Test.

The Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention proposes to make it a crime to bore a fellow--that is, a legislative or official fellow, and to punish it with a severe penalty. In exceptionable instances, no doubt, official fellows need some such protection, but we fancy that as a rule many of those who complain of being bored would object to the proposed law of protection, since it would deprive them of a constitutional right of listening to "arguments"--backed by coin--on matters in which they need all the information attainable. They will pronounce it a blow at free speech, and vote it incompatible with the Federal Constitution. The following is the proposition which has been approved in Committee of the Whole of the Convention:

The practice of boring shall be defined and punished by law, and shall include any corrupt solicitation of members of the General Assembly, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof, and any occupation or practice as a common borer for or against the passage or approval of laws. The punishment for the offence shall be by fine and imprisonment.

Acquitted.

The jury in the case of Thomas Curtin, slayer of William Johnson, the seducer of his daughter, Hannah Curtin, returned a verdict at midnight, October 16, of not guilty. The result was loudly applauded by the spectators. Judge Dwinelle discharged the prisoner, and remarked as he left the bench "I must say, Mr. Curtin, I did not regret the verdict." The crowd around Curtin was so great that he could scarcely make his way out of the Court room.

Duel in a Billiard Room.

By the arrival of the steamer Pacific from Lake Superior we learn the particulars of a shooting affray that occurred at Houghton a few days since. It appears that James Allen, one of the proprietors of the Douglas House at Houghton, became involved in a quarrel with a young man named Charles Edwards, while playing at cards. They finally agreed to settle the matter in dueling. They therefore placed themselves in opposite corners of the billiard room at the Douglas House, where the trouble originated, and blazed away at each other. They each fired two shots, and one ball from Edwards' pistol struck Allen in the back, without, however, inflicting more than a severe flesh wound. Allen then turned around, as is supposed, with the intention of firing at his adversary, when Edwards fired a third time, and the ball struck Allen in the face, close to the bridge of the nose, fracturing the bones and burying itself in his head near the base of the brain. At last accounts Allen was alive, but a telegram has been received here to the effect that he was dying.—Detroit Tri une.

Fight With a Bear.

Rasmussen, of El Monte, while deer hunting in the Arroyo Seco Canyon, on Friday morning last, suddenly found himself confronted by a full-grown she bear and two cubs. The old one immediately advanced on Rasmussen, evidently intending to give him to her young for their morning meal. Rasmussen fired but missed his mark, and before he could reload Bruin was upon him and scratched his face, hands and side in a shocking manner. Being powerless to fight the bear at such close quarters, Rasmussen tried the virtue of a "yell," and succeeded in scaring his would be destroyer. He picked up his hat and gun and proceeded home, feeling grateful that he had escaped with so little damage. Sensational bear stories are very much in vogue, but the above is a literal relation of a narrow escape.—Los Angeles Herald, Oct. 7.

A New Sort of a Bath.

A bath in hot sand is the latest discovery offered by a therapeutist of London, as an "infallible cure" for rheumatism. He claims that the advantage of this mode of treatment consists, especially, in the fact that it does not suppress perspiration like the hot water bath, but rather increases it; and another advantage it possesses is, that it does not interfere with the respiration of the patient, as does the steam bath, or Turkish bath. It is asserted that the body can endure the influence of such a bath for a much longer time, and a much higher temperature can also be applied. It can be used for infants, and permits of an easy application to a part or to the whole body. If this remedy shall prove efficacious for so serious an aliment, it will indeed be a boon to a large class of sufferers.

Columbus Wagon Road.

Mr. A. McLeod, late superintendent of construction on the Carson and Columbus wagon road, is in town, and "gives in his experience." He does not hope to see the road completed during the coming Winter, and says the amount of money raised at Carson is insufficient for the work. That portion of the road which has been built out from Columbus to Teal's Marsh is badly washed out—impassable, in fact—and will require a very considerable expense in repairs before it can be used even for buggy teams. The Carson Appeal, from which we have taken all our items about this road heretofore, maintains a withering silence in regard to the matter lately, and does not keep us posted as to recent progress on the upper end. —Columbus Miner, Oct. 11.

—"What shall I give my boy to make him honored and respected?" writes an affectionate father. Education and precepts of morality were once required to accomplish this purpose, but a diamond pin now covers the ground.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL GIVES IN A WEEKLY form all the features of a monthly magazine. Its weekly issue brings it a more frequent visitor to the family than is the case with a monthly periodical, while, in the course of a year, a much greater aggregate and a larger variety of papers are furnished than are given in any of the regular monthlies. But, for those who prefer it, The Journal is put up in monthly parts, and in this form its scope and variety, as compared with other magazines, become conspicuously apparent.

PRICE—10 Cents per Number; or $4 00 per Annum, in advance. Subscriptions received for Twelve or Six Months. Subscription price of Monthly Parts, $4 50.

Any person procuring five yearly subscriptions, for weekly numbers, and remitting $20, will be entitled to a copy for one year gratis; fifteen yearly subscribers, for weekly numbers, and remitting $50, will entitle sender to a copy for one year gratis.

The postage within the United States is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office where received. In remitting by mail, a postoffice order or draft, payable to the order of D. Appleton & Co., is preferable to bank notes, as, if lost, the order or draft can be recovered without loss to the owner.

Volumes begin with January and July of each year. D. APPLETON & CO.,

SUMMONS.

IN THE JUSTICE'S COURT OF THE THIRD Township, in the county of Inyo, State of California. R. A. Loomis, plaintiff, vs. A. Dry, defendant. The people of the State of California send greeting to A. Dry, defendant: You are hereby required to appear before me, at my office in Third Township, in the county of Inyo, in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff and answer the complaint in said action, on file in my office, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county, or if served out of this county, within twenty days. The said action is brought to recover the sum of ninety-five dollars, U. S. gold coin, on an implied contract for the direct payment of money, for goods, wares and merchandise sold and delivered, and one hundred and forty two dollars, U. S. gold coin, on an assigned account from J. Hitchcock to the above named plaintiff. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will take judgment against you for the said amount of $237, together with costs.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of said Inyo county, greeting: Make legal service and due return hereof.

Given under my hand this 16th day of October, 1873. R. L. PETERSON,

Justice of the Peace of said Township.

SUMMONS.

IN THE JUSTICE'S COURT OF THE THIRD Township, in the county of Inyo, State of California W. C. Colomber, plaintiff, against A. Dry, defendant. The people of the State of California send greeting to A. Dry, defendent. You are hereby required to appear before me, at my office in Third Township, in the county of Inyo, in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff, and answer the complaint in said action, on file in my office, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county, or if served out of this county, within twenty three days. The said action is brought to recover the sum of two hundred and thirty dollars, U. S. gold coin, on two expressed contracts for the payment of money, to-wit: thirty dollars due on a prommissory note, assigned by J. G. Dodge to the said plaintiff, and two hundred dollars, balance due on account stated. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as above required, said plaintiff will take judgment against you for the said amount of $230, together with costs and damages.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of said Inyo county, greeting: Make legal service and due return hereof.

Given under my hand this 16th day of October, A. D. 1873. R. L. PETERSON,

Justice of the Peace of said Township.

F. K. MILLER, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Special Notice.

All subscriptions and transient advertisements must invariably be paid for in advance. Advertisements, to insure insertion, should be handed in on or before 6 o'clock P. M. of each Friday.

The Four Winds.

These all joined forces on the day preceding the election and taking the North Pole for a starting point, came on a howling. People's eyes were filled with dust and their mouths with words the same as ministers use but differently arranged and accented. Good mothers sat in their dust proof (?) houses, and aimed by solacing smiles to cheer the desponding hearts of their smutty-faced little ones, but rarely or never succeeded in effecting more than a smurky grimace. The dads looked daggers and bottled lightning, and wondered if boiler iron could be made impervious to dust and sand. Cross-grained women and sich were in their glory. Here was an occasion worthy their best efforts at disagreeableness, and they too joined chorus in saw-file harmony with Boreas, and piped from sheer happiness—at least they might have done so, if they had wanted to.

Needs a Calaboose.

The circumstances preceding the shooting of George Watson last Saturday plainly show the need of a lock up at Lone Pine. They have good peace officers there, but they can do little or nothing in restraining petty offences against the peace, which generally lead to something serious, as in the case referred to above, without a calaboose. It frequently happens there, as elsewhere, that parties get on the rampage justifying an arrest and confinement in a lock up long enough for them to cool off, but hardly warranting the expense, time, trouble or punishment of a term in the county jail. But for a swindler Cerro Gordo would now have had a good calaboose. Another effort to build one ought to be made there, and a similar effort is no less a consideration for Lone Pine.

The Water Prospect.

Forty-five men, under the foremanship of Mr. Martin Mee, are now busily employed on the Cerro Gordo Hope, to-wit: the water works, and in six weeks more it is confidently expected this needed element will be running into town. The three pumping engines are in place, and their powers have been put to a working test and found perfectly satisfactory. Though we have mentioned the fact before, we will again state that the water before taking the pipes which convey it 11 miles into town, has to be raised a total hight of 1,800 feet, which hight is equally divided among the three engines. The work of laying the pipes is very great, from the necessity of burying them deep in the ground as security against frost.

Not Decided.

It appears that the application of the Union Mining Company for a new trial in the Union-San Felipe suit has not yet been heard by Judge Belden, the case being set for some day during the coming week. Mr. Reddy has been requested to attend and assist in the argument, and with this object in view started for San Francisco on Wednesday last, depositing his vote before starting. It will probably be two weeks or more before the result of the application is known here.

The Virtue of Advertising.

We have been thinking strongly of advertising for a boy for this office, but by reference to a "born" notice it will be seen we have measurably attained the desired object without the advertisement, which logically proves there is more virtue in advertising than some people wot of, especially as this one is as nice a nine-pounder as any sage-brush region can produce.

Demanding Attention.

Our old-time frights, the earthquakes, are renewing their claims to notice. At least we had a slight one on Thursday morning, noticed by but a few persons, and another at a quarter to 10 on the following morning, which was a shake up of no mean pretensions. These are the first we have remarked for a number of months.

Fire Alarm.

The other morning while the wind was blowing so violently the lining of Mrs. Wallace's dwelling caught fire from a stove-pipe just set up, and flamed up in a most threatening manner. By the active exertions of a number of persons present the flames were soon extinguished without material damage except to the lining.

Stopped for Repairs.

The Swansea furnace, after a continuous run of three months, shut down for repairs a few days since, but as we are informed by Superintendent Van Arsdale is now ready to fire up for another long run.

Quarterly Meeting.

Elder Nims, the Presiding Elder of this district, will hold quarterly meeting here, beginning Saturday, November 1.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. Pratt will preach one week from to-morrow at George's Creek at 11 A. M., and at this place at 7:30 P. M.

And Another.

A man named George Watson came to a violent death in Lone Pine late on Saturday night last, under circumstances substantially as follows: Watson and a man named Lindsey Lewis, both well known bad characters, had just returned to Lone Pine after several months' absence—made necessary by a former shooting affair—and announced their determination of running the town for a while themselves. During the day they conducted themselves most outrageously, using the most obscene language in the streets, and violently abusing everybody, without regard to age, sex or condition. Among other operations was a combined attack on George, an inoffensive, English-speaking Indian, whom they kicked and beat in the most brutal manner for no earthly cause. Constable Henry Stevens arrested them once during the day at the point of the pistol, compelling them to give up their arms, but he gave these back and released them after receiving a solemn pledge that they would behave themselves. For this and a former arrest Watson manifested a special animosity towards Stevens, seeking every opportunity to draw him into a difficulty, Lewis, in his cowardly manner, assisting—taking occasion to shoot holes in the floor of Peterson's saloon, a trick he had performed on a previous occasion. About 10 o'clock at night an altercation took place between them and Constable Stevens, in the saloon mentioned, where there were a large number of persons, each and all of whom came in for a share of the violent abuse at the hands of the pair. Watson, while daring Stevens to come out in the street to fight, drew his revolver, cocked and presented it at the crowd, and swore he could "shoot any son of a —— in the house," and would do it if any man made a move. At the instant of this insane demonstration the report of a pistol was heard and Watson dropped dead, his revolver falling to the floor by his side. Lewis broke and run at once, and has not been heard of since. Coroner Lank held an inquest on the following day, the jury rendering a verdict to the effect that deceased came to his death by a gun-shot wound, inflicted by some person to them unknown, the ball entering the left temple. Vale! Our readers will probably remember that this Watson was the man who, with Johnny Stewart, the Columbus murderer, stole down the canyon from Cerro Gordo just before the commencement of the great shooting muck of last February. Since that time he has "done" all the principal mining camps of Nevada—Columbus, Belmont, Eureka, Pioche and Cornucopia, sailing under the name of Rains. But his correct name appears to have been Watson, and he hailed originally from Antioch, Contra Costa county.

J. W. Fly.

A few days since divers and sundry Piutes went before Justice Campbell at Big Pine and made oath that "all Injun men heap catchem whisky at Reinhackle's." Now "Reinhackle's" is a saloon kept by the gentleman whose name heads this article, and it has been known for a long time that all festive Indians far and near had been in the habit of resorting there when they were in funds and felt the need of a stimulant. Mr. Fly had been warned many times that his way of conducting business didn't look well, but he thought it was all right. To find out whether it was or not, a formal complaint of selling liquor to Indians was made out against him, upon which he was brought before Justice Campbell, and, as there was any quantity of Indian testimony plain and direct to sustain the complaint, Mr. Fly was sentenced to a fine of $50 and ten days in the county jail. In accordance with this he came down on Thursday last and was duly installed as a county boarder.

Kearsarge.

There is a case pending in the Nevada courts which will be of decided interest to some of the original Kearsarge owners hereabouts, it being an action by C. H. Van Gorder against John Gillig to recover money on his "unassessable stock" in proportion to the amounts expended on the property by Van Gorder, Winters & Co. on their stock. From Judge Hoffman's ruling on this point, in the Kearsarge bankruptcy case, there can be no such thing as non-paying partners or unassessable shares in a mine, and on the strength of this several other Nevada parties have already paid Van Gorder's demand in full. As another legal item of possible interest to our readers, we may state the fact that some two weeks since, in Judge Sawyer's court, Van Gorder obtained judgment against J. Earl for $4,500. It is now supposable that, under the peculiar circumstances, Charley is indirectly interested in the great Land Grab.

More Explorations.

A party of distinguished San Francisco scientists, including an artist, passed through here yesterday en route to the Dome. The object of the visit and the names of the party we shall endeavor to give on their return; also, some matters of interest connected with their rough trip over the Sierra from Yo Semite hither.

Fish Springs.

John Bell's arrastra at Fish Springs is running most of the time on excellent ore, and is doing well. Mr. Houard, Sr., has discovered a fine ledge of decomposed quartz in the vicinity of the other mines, which is considered very valuable. The ore displays free gold in quantities.

Refitted.

The Bishop Creek Flouring Mill has been extensively refitted with new machinery and now guarantees as good flour as any imported, no matter where from. We can say that this mill has furnished us most excellent flour—inferior to none that we have used.

The Vote at Benton.

Following is the tote of Benton precinct, Mono county, at the late election: For Justice Supreme Court—Dwinelle, 1; Bronson, 1; McKinstry, 26; McKee, 11. District Judge—Reed, 23; Laspeyre, 14. County Judge—Kingsley, 7; Poe, 31.

Benton.

Affairs at Benton are said to be quite flourishing, Mack's, Witherell's and the Pioneer mills are all in full operation, the latter, at Montgomery, being run on tailings. Mack's mill is running on first-class ore from his mines, and is turning out bullion at a big rate.

Crops.

The farmers through the valley have finished threshing their wheat and barley, and find the yield considerably lighter than usual. The same remark applies to many fields of corn, which is now being gathered.

Returned.

Mr. Earl returned from below Thursday last. He thinks there is a great deal of foolishness being said and published about swamp land operations. Perhaps.

—The value of advertising was never better shown than in a recent case at Montreal, where, while a compositor on The Witness was setting up an advertisement for a lost canary the bird flew in at the window.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL.
THE SUBSCRIBER TAKES PLEASURE IN announcing to the people of Inyo county that he has purchased and fitted up as a hospital the Beaudry Hotel Building, adjoining the military post at Camp Independence. All the adobes have been removed and their place applied with lumber; the grounds are handsomely laid out with shade trees and clover, and have a pure running stream of mountain water.
There is an excellent bath room and dispensary attached. One room is set aside for the county's sick, leaving ample room for private patients. The Northern Stage Line passes the door, and the place is easy of access from the town of Independence. The charges for board and lodging do not exceed those of any hotel or boarding house, offering equal accommodations, and the establishment has the advantage of having competent help and medical advice always at hand, being close by the house of the post surgeon at the camp.

—Talmadge's latest: "I do not believe that the power of human song has yet been fully tried. I believe that if you would roll the Old Hundred and the Doxology through Wall street it would put an end to the panic! I believe that the discords and the sorrows and the sins of the world are to be swept out by a heaven born hallelujah."

—A telegraph operator at Elmira, N. Y., last month summoned a doctor from Wellsburg, thus: "Come at once to see procession of Carrie Spencer's menagerie." The message when repeated, read, "Come at once with prescription—case of cerebro-spinal-meningitis."

—The death of the great painter, Landseer, recalls the anecdote relating to Sydney Smith, who, being asked to sit for his portrait to the delineator of the canine race, replied, "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?"

—Mrs. Patterson, who presided over the domestic economy of the White House during the term of her father, Andy Johnson, has added new lustre to her laurels by taking the premium for the best butter at a Tennessee Fair.

—A contemporary says that: "Stray leaves from soon coming orange blossoms flutter around in prophecy of weddings to be." Let 'em flut. It's none of our funeral.

—A Quincy compositor, not entirely up in the Hebrew language, set up the Jewish Day of Atonement as "Jim Skippur." His funeral is duly announced.

—Gen. N. B. Forrest has been in New York, and he says he never saw any demoralization among men in the army equal to that on Wall street during the late panic.

—A Kansas man heard robbers, and not having any shot, he loaded his gun with pills, and getting a range on one of the band, he dropped him.

—Olive Logan says the sight of a woman's ankle on Wall street would put a quietus on any panic by drawing all the crowd away.

—The Ultramontane clergy in Germany are now preaching that the coming of the cholera is due to the expulsion of the Jesuits.

—A Maine farmer was recently detected selling lumps of tallow, thinly coated with butter, as the genuine product of dairy.

—A Boston lawyer has lived to the age of ninety years, notwithstanding it is said the wicked shall live but half their days.

—"Ho, muggin; ho, muggin, from a forrin' shore," is the way a Topeka belle warbles a popular song.

—A Boy twelve years old who stole a can of oysters at Dover the other day, was held to bail in the sum of $4,000

—I. X. Pect, has dawned as a correspondent.

—A Rochester female has sworn to marry Phil Sheridan or die.

—The fashionable umbrella is more attenuated than ever.

Didn't Do It.

Grant hasn't nominated Conkling for Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. We don't believe he will. He wouldn't, having good sense, inflict such a calamity upon the American people. Conkling comes under the classification of "small fry."—S. F. Chronicle.

PROSPECTUS.

Prospectus for 1873—Sixth Year.

THE ALDINE,

An Illustrated Monthly Journal, universally admitted to be the Handsomest Periodical in the World. Representative and Champion of American Taste.

NOT FOR SALE IN BOOK OR NEWS STORES.

THE ALDINE, WHILE ISSUED WITH ALL THE regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it has been bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there are the chromos, besides!

ART DEPARTMENT.

Notwithstanding the increase in the price of subscription last Fall, when THE ALDINE assumed its present noble proportions and representative character, the edition was more than doubled during the past year; proving that the American public appreciate, and will support, a sincere effort in the cause of Art. The publishers, anxious to justify the ready confidence thus demonstrated, have exerted themselves to the utmost to develope and improve the work; and the plans for the coming year, as unfolded by the monthly issues, will astonish and delight even the most sanguine friends of THE ALDINE.

The publishers are authorized to announce designs from many of the most eminent artists of America.

In addition, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic success, and greatest general interest; avoiding such as have become familiar, through photographs, or copies of any kind.

The quarterly tinted plates, for 1873, will reproduce four of John S. Davis' inimitable child-sketches, appropriate to the four seasons. These plates, appearing in the issues for January, April, July and October, would be alone worth the price of a year's subscription.

The popular feature of a copiously illustrated "Christmas" number will be continued.

To possess such a valuable epitome of the art world, at a cost so trifling, will command the subscriptions of thousands in every section of the country; but, as the usefulness and attractions of THE ALDINE can be enhanced, in proportion to the numerical increase of its supporters, the publishers propose to make "assurance double sure," by the following unparalleled offer of

PREMIUM CHROMOS FOR 1873

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE, who pays in advance for the year 1873, will receive, without additional charge, a pair of beautiful oil chromos, after J. J. Hill, the eminent English painter. The pictures, entitled "The Village Belle," and "Crossing the Moor," are 14 x 20 inches—are printed from 25 different plates, requiring 25 impressions and tints to perfect each picture. The same chromos are sold for $30 per pair, in the art stores. As it is the determination of its conductors to keep THE ALDINE out of the reach of competition in every department, the chromos will be found correspondingly ahead of any that can be offered by other periodicals. Every subscriber will receive a certificate, over the signature of the publishers, guaranteeing that the chromos delivered shall be equal to the samples furnished the agent, or the money will be refunded. The distribution of pictures of this grade, free to the subscribers to a five dollar periodical, will mark an epoch in the history of Art; and, considering the unprecedented cheapness of the price for THE ALDINE itself, the marvel falls little short of a miracle, even to those best acquainted with the achievements of inventive genius and improved mechanical appliances. (For illustrations of these chromos, see November issue of THE ALDINE).

THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT

Will continue under the care of Mr. RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, assisted by the best writers and poets of the day, who will strive to have the literature of THE ALDINE always in keeping with its artistic attractions.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance, with Oil Chromos free.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rate; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local agent, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

AGENTS WANTED.

Any person, wishing to act permanently as a local agent, will receive full and prompt information by applying to

SUMMONS.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE SIXTEENTH Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo. John C. Morrison, Jr., plaintiff, against W. G. Squires, defendant. Action brought in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and the complaint filed in said county of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court.

The People of the State of California send greeting to W. G. Squires. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise, within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint. The said action is brought to recover the sum of Eight hundred and fifty-seven 72-100 dollars in gold coin of the United States, for goods, wares and merchandise sold and delivered to said defendant by said plaintiff, at defendant's special instance and request, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1872, together with interest thereon from said date at the rate of ten per cent. per annum. And you are hereby notified if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment by default against you, in accordance with the prayer of said plaintiff's complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, this Sixteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three.

MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE, FREE FROM ALCOHOL.

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

Vinegar Bitters.

No Person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittant Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most Wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

A Fiendish Attempt to Murder Three Men.

[From The Bakersfield Courier, October 18.]

We are indebted to Dr. Mix for the particulars of one of the worst crimes and the condign punishment of the perpetrator, ever committed in this county. Frank Stillman, one of the men employed at the San Emigdio saw mill, situate at the summit of the pass of that name, about 11 miles from the ranch of John Funk, on or about the close of last week, fell in with a Mexican, called Ramon, at the Adobe station, 12 miles south of Bakersfield, where had been employed for two months previously and just been discharged. Ramon professed to be in search of a new place, and the inquiries he made of Stillman led to his informing him that he might perhaps obtain employment at the San Emigdio ranch, and that if he accompanied him he would use his influence to obtain it. On the way he was not as prudent in his conversation as he might have been, and permitted him to learn that he had some money in his cabin at the mill. Failing to obtain work at the ranch, the Mexican continued on with Stillman to the mill, that being the most direct route to places where his services might be in request. They arrived there on Monday evening, and he was invited by Stillman to share the hospitalities of his cabin, also occupied by his brother Gasper and E. McDonnell. The cabin was small, probably not more than 14 or 15 feet square. He gave him a share of his bed, spread on the floor, and the Mexican lay beside him, covered with the same blankets. As soon as he believed his unsuspecting hosts were asleep, he attempted to murder them all, with the design of possessing himself of their money and other portable effects of value. He commenced with his bed fellow, who after receiving several severe but not fatal stabs, finally escaped him. The next victim was McDonnell, on whom he inflicted several stabs, one of which may prove mortal. In the meantime Gasper, awakened by the noise, threw himself on the Mexican to overcome and disarm him. But in the darkness, which was almost total, he received several stabs and slashes that soon proved fatal. The other parties in the meantime had possessed themselves of arms, and the assassin was forced to betake himself to flight, carrying with him a Henry rifle. Several shots were fired at him after he had escaped from the door, but without effect. The next day a pursuing party was organized. They had no difficulty in following his trail, and came suddenly upon him in his place of concealment, about half a mile distant, where he was probably waiting to obtain what was necessary for his further flight, as he had left his horse and part of his clothes behind him on the night before. He had time to fire only one ill-directed shot before they closed in on him. While one man seized and turned aside the muzzle of his rifle, another returned his fire with a double barreled-shot gun. Both charges, of fine shot, took effect in his side. He was then disarmed, captured and led away. But such was his ferocity that, shortly afterward, observing as he thought a little inattention on the part of his captors, he seized a club and again attempted fight. His strength, however, was ebbing so fast that he found his murderous will was all that was left him. Little could be elicited by questions. All that was definitely learned was, as above indicated, that after murdering the three men, his object was to possess himself of their money. He died a few hours after being taken. It is difficult to imagine a more dastardly and atrocious crime, or a situation of greater horror than that in which the three victims found themselves when awakened from their slumbers.

Views of a Practical Farmer.

An old farmer of Yolo county writes a sensible, practical letter to The Democrat. The curse of California has been the effort to run big farms:

We aim to farm on too large a scale, skimming over too much land, running it in grain year after year, thereby diminishing the soil, while we add nothing thereby to keep it up. The better plan, brother farmers, in my judgment (say a farmer owns 160 acres of laud) would be to divide it up into 40-acre lots, then summer fallow 40 acres to commence with the first year, let 40 go to hay, put in 40 more with Chili clover, and pasture the other 40 acres; the next Spring plow your pastured 40 for summer-fallow, let your first 40 go to hay, and pasture your clover and last year's hay land; and by this process you will have clean land and good wheat or barley, as the case may be, besides keeping up the quality of your land. By this style of farming we can keep a good span of horses, which will do all the work that is needed, and we can, if mares, raise a couple of good colts every year, which will be an income of $100. On this same land we can keep 10 cows and calves: the calves at one year old worth $100, the milk and butter $200. We can keep 50 head of hogs and 50 head of ewes, the hogs to bring at the end of the year $5 per head, the ewes to raise 50 lambs at $2 per head, worth $100; the wool from the old sheep $50. Besides, we can keep 200 fowls, the profits from which will be $200. Now the hay and straw will keep your stock; your 40 acres of grain put in by this method of farming will produce, one year with another, 30 bushels to the acre, which will make 1,200 bushels, counting this grain at $1 per bushel would be $1,200. Counting one-half for expenses you have $600 left; now add all this together and you have $1,600 clear for your labor. This you can do yourself, without any hired help except when cutting and threshing your grain, for which the expenses are already taken out.

By this kind of economy and industry you can lay up some money every year, where the family is not too large and expensive. Try it, farmers. I have made the figures low, allowing for dry years and wet ones. We must do our own work, farm less, raise more stock and save expenses in order to be a prosperous people. Let us impart practical ideas to one another and thereby improve our condition socially and financially, and in due time we may become a happy people.

How to Do It.

If young men will drink liquor, we insist that they do it gracefully. A great many accomplished bar-tenders and polite by-standers have their risibilities excited to a degree dangerous to proper saloon decorum, by the awkward manner in which upstart green 'uns take their grog, to say nothing of the danger of strangulation incident to starting a horn of brandy down the wrong way. The following is the propdr way to do the business. It may come a little awkward at first, but practice will make it easy, and the habit of doing the thing gracefully and easily will save you a world of ridicule from many of the evils which crazy temperance people are always charging as sure to follow drinking. Stand up straight, like a man, your left side to the bar, take the glass firmly and neatly between the thumb and fore fingers of the right hand, letting the little finger drop down to near the bottom of the glass, swing the glass on a plane exactly corresponding to the top of the bar, until it is precisely before you. Just then throw your head back a little, push the chin forward, so as to leave the throat in a full, open, easy position, draw a full breath through the nostrils, and with a graceful curve raise the glass until the rim is within about three inches of your chin. Now is the supreme moment. Just here turn your eyes upward, think of your mother and open your fingers instead of your mouth. If anyone laughs it will be an insult which you should resent by not going there again.

Great Danger.

In a recent case of breach of promise in New York, Judge Neilson, of Brooklyn, used the following remarkable language: "In an engagement to marry, the contract can be entered into between lovers without his asking in words the question whether she would marry him, and without her answering in words that she will do so. * * This contract or engagement can be made without such words. If the facts and circumstances are sufficiently full and significant to amount to the engagement, were they or could they be articulate, the spirit of the law supplies the lacking speech." If this be so, what becomes of tete-a-tetes in bay windows, walks home from church, and sleigh-rides on the boulevards? When is a young man or a young women safe? Is it not imcumbent upon the court making such a decision to state the exact limit of the "Thus far and no farther," else when is ardent Colin, or even phlegmatic Colin, safe? Some limit must be assigned, or every bachelor in the community, young or old, will be a Benedict, and without remedy.

—The income of Jones of Nevada is $800,000 a year from mining sources. His election to the United States Senate cost him nearly a year's income.

—Wheat is worth 90 cents a bushel at Winterset, Iowa and rye 15 cents a glass.

Mercury in the Human System.

Prof. Hyatt delivered a lecture on mercury in Vienna recently, when he exhibited the leg bone of a man whose death had undoubtedly been hastened by mercury. On striking the bone heavily upon the table, out fell thousands of little glittering globules of mercury—bright metalic mercury—which rolled about on the black surface before him, collecting here and there into drops. The mercury had been absorbed during life, undermined the man's system, and proved fatal to him. The mortality among those who work in mines of quicksilver, or in the works where it is reduced, is known to be frightful. In the celebrated mines of Idria, the men worked alternately one month in the mine and one month in the smelting house. But notwithstanding this it appears that of the hundreds employed there, one fourth became salivated.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE GRAB.

We print in another column of this issue an "Address to the Public" from Mr. Earl, in which he endeavors to explain his position and object in the proposed swamp land grab. He invites investigation; we hope his invitation may be accepted and acted upon by every citizen of Inyo county. It is not a matter of concern to farmers alone, but almost equally to all classes alike. We have here a cool proposition to inflict upon Inyo more than her proportion of the essential curse of the State. To quote the words of a contemporary:

Those people who imagine the railroad to be the lion in the path of our march to prosperity, are blind to the pit being dug under our feet by the land grabbers, and the assistance given these aristocrats by officials in defiance of law and justice. The thrusts of the railroad dagger are but flesh wounds; while the slow poison of the land monopolists will eventually find its way to a vital part, if the remedy guaranteed by our Constitution is not applied in time. In a few years more the Irish land system will be reproduced in this State, unless there is immediate legislation to prevent such a calamity. A community of tenants can never be the basis of a free government. The Irish have suffered generations of misery because the lands they occupied were owned by a few aristocrats, on another island, who could dispossess them whenever they saw fit.

And on this other island, as we learn by the lectures, now in course in New York, by Charles Bradlaugh, the eloquent English Republican, "the agricultural population of England is in a worse condition than any other in Europe, except, perhaps that of Russia," and all because a few men own all England and Scotland; full 15,000,000 acres of land, which would richly repay cultivation, but are now, and for centuries have been, laid waste for deer parks and pleasure grounds for wealthy lords and aristocrats. It may be legal there, and by perversion of well intended laws, is probably legal here, but still we can not repress the notion that a man who owns land enough for a small kingdom, has no better right to it than the birds which fly over it and the squirrels and gophers that infest it. The extent of the land monopoly in this State is absolutely frightful. A dozen or more men aspire to become landlords of hundreds of thousands of farmers; they have obtained at a nominal cost the paper title to the greater part of the lands in California, and if they succeed in their plans we will have the Irish system with a vengeance. They have simply made a rush in advance of the emigrant, gobbled up what land could be obtained, and sought to squeeze an enormous profit from him. There are nice laid plans to get from him every cent he can earn and put it beyond his power to be the absolute owner of the ground he may have purchased, but this is not by means of subsidies to railroads only, but in others, principally the grand irrigating schemes, now on the tapis in other portions of the State, and swamp land grabs in this.

In respect to its system of land laws and land ownerships, California, by the cupidity, stupidity, avarice and venality of its Legislatures, at least as the passive agents, is the worst cursed State in the Union. What with its Spanish grants, for which the General Government is responsible, its college and other scrips and, worst of all, its swamp land donations, as perverted in use and application, to say nothing of land subsidies to railroads and proposed irrigating canals, it is fast approaching the condition of affairs that has ground the life out of the middle and lower classes of Ireland and Great Britain.

Since the adoption of the American Constitution it has been the primary aim and object of our Government to avert the very conditions referred to by reserving the public domain for the actual use and occupation of its citizens of the poorer class, to kill off the feudal system that the aristocrats of those days and the shoddyites of the present have continuously endeavored to fasten upon it. So far as law on its face could or did effect this object, the revised statutes of 1830 abolished the last vestige of the feudal system by the adoption substantially of the land policy of the present day. This policy limits the proprietorship derived directly from the Government to the maximum of 320 acres; practically a homestead and a pre-emption right to each actual settler and occupant. At no period, and less now than ever, has it been the aim of the Government to dispose of her lands for the sake of the direct revenue, but only for that to be derived indirectly by the actual occupation and improvement, which could only be effected by express limitations to small tracts to each and every one of her citizens. To carry out the liberal, sensible and just views of our rulers, the Executive has at all times withheld from public sale all surveyed (and unsurveyed) lands from purchase for a time sufficient to to give the actual settler the first choice, and to this policy and fact, above all others, are the Western States especially indebted for their millions of separate proprietorships and consequent high prosperity.

But with a high sense of justice to its soldiers, sailors and to the rights of the rising generation in facilities for obtaining an education, came the bounty land, college and school warrants, and with them came the land-grabber, as the curse of both present and future. As but a limited amount of grabbing was possible under the general law, State Legislatures became the tools of the land sharks, and by their manipulations of them, the sharks of all grades and ranks, from the biggest down to Josiah, have found it practicable to subvert the very best laws of our Government—those affecting the rights of poor men and the best interests of the country at large, and have been and are now grabbing not only sections but townships by the dozen of the very best lands of the State.

The California State law of 1868, in reference to the disposal of the swamp lands to which it was entitled under the Arkansas act of 1850, gave no protection whatever to actual settlers on any moist lands which, by any possible perversion of law or broad falsification, could be ranked as swamp. It was segregated in the interest of the grabber, in whose interest the laws were passed, and the settler was ousted almost before he was aware that any such move had ever been inaugurated. The next Legislature relieved some of the opprobrium by giving the settler the preference for ninety days, and this period, by the last Legislature, was extended to six months. But while the settler is protected to that extent in his immediate possessions, the hogging game—that is the only term which properly expresses it—goes on all around him, on every side.

In a single newspaper article it is out of the question to point out in detail the attendant evils of the various land-grabbing systems of this State, or to show the real extent of the actual perversions of the benificent land laws of the National Congress. By usage there is hardly a limit to these possible perversions.

What are we to expect when, as in the case now before us, not only county and State, but Federal officials conspire to rob the people of this Government—and the Government itself, of course—of their rightful inheritance? Mr. Earl, as Register, says that he is as such official, authorized to hunt up and turn over to the State (i. e., to the sharks), all lands in his district that at any period of the year may be too wet for immediate cultivation. Right on that point, as exemplified in his impending operations, we take issue fairly and squarely. But passing that for the present we will take a look at the bid he, in this issue, offers for the birthright of our settlers present and settlers to come.

Sop 1. "By relinquishing the Government title and purchasing of the State the settler saves his pre-emption and homestead privileges for a future time."

That is to say, if he will come forward and make oath the fields he owns, and for years has cultivated without ever having had his planting delayed or harvests ruined by "our melting snows of June and July" to half the extent similar results are produced by ordinary rains elsewhere—if he will make oath that such fields are swamps, his exhausted pre-emption right will be restored. To what purpose? By the aid of this oath the grabber has secured as his own every foot of surrounding lands of similar character, which includes all worth having, and where, under our flag, with such a rule of law admitted, can his renewed right be worth the paper for the application? He can secure with it a tract of dry sage brush, perhaps. Not much; he can't live upon and improve two locations at once, and as his work of reclamation must be carried out to perfect his title under the State, and the required occupation of the sage brush is out of the question. But how long, under this new application of law, before the grabber goes for the sage brush, too? Even now he asserts the right, and certain it is with far more of reason in beneficial results, to reclaim the dry lands from their dryness and thereby secure title to same as in reclaiming the moist agricultural lands from their alleged superabundant wetness. The law that can be warped to permit the one to-day, will by subsidies or otherwise, render possible the other to-morrow, and the United States had better quit the land business at once, at least, so far as homestead and pre-emption lands are concerned.

Sop 2. Mr. Earl invites the settlers to come forward and confer with him before he goes below to look after the State and National Legislatures, as he will give information gratis and assist in procuring titles from the State "on the most reasonable terms."

This means that any willing to take stock in the grab on the terms named above, will be allowed a larger or smaller slice according to service rendered in procuring the segregation of the whole as State lands. The settler can help do this and yet retain his Government title, in which case the latter indemnifies the State in the amount of the original purchase—minus the stealings by the sharks; or he can buy of the State, recover his pre-emption right and the indemnity, minus perquisites to sharks and expenses. It makes no difference to the Government which he may elect to do—the fraud upon it is the same. Is that the reason its land officers are paid salaries—to act as special attorneys for the State, or to be exact, for the sharks, since the State don't get a cent? The writer of this as one of those officers, begs leave to say, however, that he don't interpret his instructions in that way. Among several advantages (?) to accrue directly to the settler willing to swear that his farm is swamp, will be the privilege of some visits more or less "say to Independence" when required to give the testimony that will inevitably cause him to pay monthly pasturage on his every head of stock not restricted to his own premises. But we must pass on to Sop 3, and the nub of the whole thing and most outrageously false, in its intended implication, of all. It reads:

"It would add to our taxable property in this county at least one million dollars."

That is to say, these lands which are now so worthless that the General Government wishes, according to one of its officers, to waive all cognizance of them, has an average tax valuation of $8 to $10 an acre! We heard a prominent gentleman, who can figure commercial percentages to a dot, indorse the million dollar estimate and grab warmly, and pronounce people who don't think the same as stupid, anti-progressive asses, standing in their own light in opposing the schemes of this great and good man. Great is Allah of Inyo and his prophet is no sardine! The profits of his business is contingent upon the number of his customers. His plan to increase these is to shut off all chance for additional hundreds of small ownerships in our vacant lands, each ownership averaging four customers for his or somebody else's wares, and each, though of but moderate means, returning a profit on his trade equal or more than equal to any one of the three or half dozen rich or would-be rich grabbers to whom he would give the whole. One absentee, non-producing owner in lieu of hundreds, not to say thousands, of resident small owners, whom, if no obstacles are thrown in the way, we will have sooner or later as certain as the sun shines, is the seeming desire of this seeker after customers. He wishes well to this section, this prophet does, we are well satisfied, therefore we earnestly commend the results of the Irish land system to his attention. But the increase of taxable property: Without water to irrigate the greater portion of these "swamp" lands, an increase in their product is impossible; the water can be obtained by no plan yet proposed that will not end in a grab of the high, dry land with the other; the whole is now taxed to its utmost to support tax-paying live stock of local owners. What more could it do as the exclusive private domain of the few? It could and would be made to do this in every case where the owner was not himself a large stock owner: be a tax levy on the people for pasturage for stock now ranging free, with these certain sequences, one or all in due course: a dimunition in the number of taxable stock, a possible monopoly, and a certain advance in price of butcher's meat, with or without the monopoly, because the cost of maintaining the stock, according to the proposed rates of pasture charges, will be from $2 to $4 per head extra each year.

The land being reduced to private ownership is taxable. Its nominal cost is one dollar, and actual cost twenty cents an acre; it is returned as wild, unreclaimed swamp land, much of it as worthless, with title unperfected, and certain to so remain for some years, though the right of possession and use remains absolute. San Joaquin lands, held in similar large bodies by speculators, selling to actual settlers at $10, stand on the Assessor's books at 10 cents an acre on which taxes are to be paid. Taking the average of these of Inyo together, allowing for the enhanced rates induced by the Code, and all the most favorable probabilities in the count, and we are confident the highest average tax value on these lands for years to come will not exceed 50 cents an acre, and far more likely not as much as 25 cents, or three-fourths of a cent per acre tax paid per annum—an aggregate of say $750 a year toward the one million estimate of tax values.

What does the county gain should we sit calmly down and permit these men to take title in fee simple to all our vacant lands? An additional blade of grass, another acre tilled, another settler, another horse or cow, another dollar of revenue, any advantageous general result? There is no gain in the first and second, and assuredly a loss in all the rest. Given all for a railroad or any work of like nature, and we have a hope of gain in our present possessions; given all to the sharks as demanded and we have the death-blow to immigration, a depreciation of property, certainly no hope of enhancement or advancement in values of any kind tending to promote the general welfare, a gain in nothing, a loss in all. "This snake must be scotched." We are forced to forego further remark for the present, but as investigation is asked for, this is not the conclusion.

SCHOOL MONIES.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found Superintendent Symmes report of State and County School Moneys apportioned to the several districts. This apportionment was made by the State Superintendent before the reports of the County Superintendents for 1872 were received. Mr. Symmes, as County Superintendent, has no legal authority to make any changes in the apportionment, otherwise Round Valley would receive its full pro rata, which is now withheld for the reason that that district did not maintain a three months' school that year, and therefore by law forfeits its school money. There was no school kept there because it was impossible to obtain a teacher. During a period of six months or more the County Superintendent exerted himself to obtain a teacher, but could find none willing to take the school for three months only, or thereabouts, and with the available funds on hand, no engagement could be made for a longer period. The money on hand amounted to just $400, and it would take just twice that to justify a teacher of the proper qualifications under the law to be at the expense of coming from Oakland, or elsewhere below, to take the school, and there was not one in the county not already engaged. There are and were a number of persons in the county competent enough to teach that and similar schools, and they would gladly have been employed, but they did not hold, or could not obtain the certificate of scholarship necessary to entitle them to their wages out of the State and county funds.

There are a good many persons who seemed disposed to saddle the fault of all this upon the County Superintendent and the Examining Board. If people will take the trouble to examine the law for themselves, they will see that such judgment, especially referring to one or two occurrences of the past, is most unjust and unreasonable. The Examining Board have hardly any discretion whatever in such examinations. The law fixes the percentages for the different grades of certificates, the studies for each, the questions and the forms of the answers. The questions to be answered are equally a sealed book, up to the moment the examination begins, to both the examiners and the candidates, for, until that moment, neither knows or can know of what they consist. The answers to each question, which is substantially "Yes" or "No," has to be written opposite each, and when summed up is subjected to the scrutiny and final acceptance or rejection of the State Board, regardless of the judgment of the minor examiners, which last amounts to nothing more or less than a board of clerks sworn to record answers as given. If 70 per cent. of the questions are thus marked properly answered the candidate is entitled to a second grade county certificate, and if they are not thus answered he is entitled to no certificate, and if examiners were to grant him one either by false entries or on a lower per centage, they would not only violate perfectly plain provisions of law, but their oath to well and truly perform the duties of their trust. If such a board—teachers of the young, not only from text-books, but, presumably at least, as to their life duties as law abiding citizens of the future—if such a board can be persuaded to violate their plain duties to gratify merely the wishes of an individual, or to favor the temporary convenience of a community, they are not fit for that or any other trust.

We know and everybody else knows that the range of studies for second grade certificates is greater than the need of country schools demand, and that it is for this reason many competent teachers for such schools find the average percentage of answers to questions so high as to totally bar them from obtaining such certificates. But let the fault of this rest where it belongs—on the law itself, and not on those sworn to administer it to the best of their knowledge and ability.

We have referred to this matter on a former occasion, quoting at that time the law relating to the duties of examiners. This was in connection with the application of Mr. Haun, and also Mr Jackson, for certificates. Both complained of the rigidness of their examination. The first desired the Board to waive the examination and give him a certificate, because he felt himself quite competent, and doubtless was, to teach the school that had been tendered him. This could not be done as a matter of course. He then took some papers and got along with them very well, but finally postively refused to take any more, although his percentage, so far as he had gone entitled him to his certificate. The Board urged him to continue, but he quit and went home, and for this the examiners have been held responsible. Some say that they refused the certificate, knowing that any district failing to get a teacher would in consequence forfeit its school money, which would revert, not pro rata, according to their way of putting it, to the several districts, but to Independence. Mr. Jackson, as above stated, secured his certificate, but thought the Board was unduly rigid. These circumstances were made an element in his favor as a candidate for County Superintendent against Mr. Hardy, and in the same connection were made to bear against Mr. Symmes, the present Superintendent, as a candidate for County Treasurer. We have no complaints to make as to the result, but must say in all truthfulness, that, so far as it was contingent on the manner in which they, as examiners, performed their duty, it was the most unjust and unreasonable ground for voting against candidates that has yet transpired in this county. It was simply tabooing men for doing their simple but bounden duty; but we are well satisfied that with all but two or three leaders it was through a real misapprehension of facts and circumstances that caused the opposition to Mr. Hardy, so far as his acts as a member of the Board of Examiners was involved, and that was not a little.

Laws Relating to Swamp Lands.

To THE PUBLIC.—I give for the benefit of the people of this district the following law passed by Congress in 1850:

"Approved September 28th, 1850. Entitled an Act to enable the State of Arkansas and other States to reclaim the Swamp Lands within her limits." Congress grants to the State of Arkansas "the whole of those Swamp and Overflowed lands, made unfit thereby for cultivation, lying within her limits."

The 4th section of said act extends thereof to "each of the other States of the Union in which such swamp and overflowed lands, known and designated as aforesaid, may be situated." The States accepting the benefit of said donation were authorized to adopt a mode or base by which such lands were to be determined and selected. California has passed laws for the selection of said lands. See Political Code, Sec. 3440 and extending to Sec. 3488. This will give the whole process of applying and and reclaiming.

Congress passed an act in 1855, approved March 2d, 1855, authorizing the President of the United States to issue patents to those who have made entries of public lands, claimed as swamp lands prior to the issue of patents to the State, "provided, that where the State shall have disposed of any land thus claimed, no patent shall issue until the State shall have relinquished her claim thereto, in such case the State shall be indemnified for such land. See section 3442 of the Political Code; it reads as follows:

"Settlers upon swamp and overflowed lands belonging to the State, who occupy the same for farming or grazing purposes, and whose occupation is evidenced by actual inclosure, or by ditches or monuments showing the actual extent thereof are preferred purchasers for such lands for six months after segregation."

The Commissioner's ruling tells us that, "This act clearly and unequivocally grants to the several States those lands which, from being swampy or subject to overflow, are unfit for cultivation. In this class is included, also, all lands which, though dry part of the year, are subject to inundation at the planting, or harvesting season, so as to destroy the crop, and are therefore unfit for cultivation, taking the average of the seasons for a number of years, as a rule of determination."

It is the duty of the Register of the Land Office, and he is so instructed whenever he discovers any lands that come under the class belonging to the State, to inform the State authorities of the same.

I will now say for the information of those gentlemen that want to get business of this kind, and to our press, if they desire to give truthful information to the people of the manner that the lands are set off, the application can be made by one citizen for any number of townships. This application is made before the County Surveyor, asking for all the swamp land that may be found in said townships, or sections, describing them. The Surveyor-General of the State asks the Surveyor-General of the United States for same; he publishes a notice in a newspaper nearest the land, say THE INYO INDEPENDENT, setting a time and place to meet the settlers, say Independence. The settlers on said land will show the character of the lands embraced in the application; if found to be of a class that comes under State lands, the settler may purchase of the State at $1 per acre. Or he may continue and ask of the Government to give him title. Should the press throw out sparks of distrust, to be breathed from one to another, and draw upon fancied dangers to be fed by gossip, or shall we be advised to calmly investigate and see if the people and the county are not to be benefitted in this so-called grab? I ask for an investigation and have no doubts in being able to show that the lands sought to be entered are State lands, and should belong to the people of this county.

In the last named case the Government will give the patent and pay the State for the land. Where lands have been found to be State lands the settlers in many instances have preferred to purchase of the State, as they pay the money into the County Treasury, and then it is drawn and expended on the lands to reclaim them. Further, by surrendering the title from the Government, and purchasing of the State, they save their pre-emption or homestead for some future time. I, for one, place quite a value on my pre-emption and homestead privilege, and will try and preserve them for some future day.

The settler, by releasing the Government and purchasing the State title, runs no risk in losing his lands, as he or she, the occupant, is a prefered purchaser for six months from the day of segregation. See Sec. 3442 of the Code, above quoted. The next question is, when does this six months commence? It commences at a time when the United States Surveyor General maps the country set off, and files maps in the General Land Office at Washington, in the United States Surveyor-General's office of the State, and in the local Land Office of the district where the lands are situated. There is a large quantity of lands in this county of a class that comes under swamp land that the State should own or have its pay for.

Shall we have these lands set off to the State, and have owners that we may collect taxes from them? It would add to our present taxable property at least one million of dollars in this county.

What proportion of lands were there in this valley, before we made ditches for fences, that the water flowed over at the time of the melting of our snows in June and July? All the lands that the water passed over at that time can be claimed as swamp and overflowed, and the settler and the people of this county have the benefit of the money paid for them, provided the people will act together.

All persons desiring the benefits of purchasing under the State, I will give them all information without any charge. Should they desire me to perfect their titles for them I will do so, on the most reasonable terms. Any parties desiring information can write or come in person. There is no hurry as the season is advancing and it will be well to let the matter rest till Spring before asking the United States Surveyor-General to publish and fix a time for hearing.

I now expect to be at Sacramento in December, and in Washington in January and February. I mention this that parties desiring to confer with me may have an opportunity of doing so before I leave.

I notice that the Commissioner of the Land Office has recalled patents from the Central Pacific Railroad Company for 22 sections of land, stating that said lands were claimed by the State.

There is no intention in my plans to interfere with titles of lands in others, therefore there will be no necessity for teeing lawyers. J. EARL.

The Party of Scientists.

We made mention last week of the arrival of several gentlemen who had gone to visit the new Mount Whitney. On their return they paid us a very pleasant visit, during which they related many facts of interest connected with their mountain explorations, some of them pertaining to our own section. The party consists of Dr. A. Kellogg botanist, W. Sims and John Muir They left Yosemite Valley September 15, for the purpose of exploring the high Sierras in the region of King's and Kern Rivers. They crossed the Chiquito Joaquin near its head, then crossed the canyons of the North, Middle and South Forks, then followed the canyon of the North Fork of Kings River from its head a distance of about ten miles, to where it became inaccessible for animals. A few miles farther down they crossed the canyon after hard scrambling and trail building. From the top of the divide between the Middle and North Forks they pushed on westward and followed the divide to the confluence of the North Fork with the main river, a few miles below the confluence of the Middle and South Forks; thence they pushed up the South Fork through the groves of sequoias (Big Trees) at Thomas' mill, and into the King's River Yosemite; thence across the range by the Kearsarge Pass into Owens Valley. They ascended Mounts Tyndall, Whitney, Fisherman's Peak, Mount Humphreys, and many other high summits about the heads of the San Joaquin, King's and Kern Rivers. The principal objects of the expedition are the study of the ancient glacier system of the high Sierras, botany and general geology. Dr. Kellogg is the botanist, and he is delighted with the flora of this region, among which he finds a number of specimens hitherto unknown to scientific record. Mr. Muir is quite a practical enthusiast on the glacier origin of our mountain gorges and valleys. It is doubtful if there is another man on the coast who has done as much real hard mountaineering or has climbed as many tall peaks in scientific research as Mr Muir. He has contributed a number of interesting articles to The Overland Monthly and other publications, which, no doubt, many of our readers have seen, relating to the glaciers of the Sierra Nevadas. He it was who made the trip through the great Tuolumne Canyon, reported by Whitney as impracticable. An account of this trip appeared a short time since in The S. F. Bulletin. Mr. Muir records the discovery of no less than forty living glaciers in this portion of the Sierras. His report of his explorations will be a work of great interest, and will doubtless add much to the present knowledge of the world on the particular subject of which it will treat. He is a fearless and powerful man physically, and of the right age and temperament to pursue his laborious undertaking to a successful issue. For several years past he and the Doctor have been living in the Yosemite Valley. Surprising as it may seem, they report the existence of another valley on King's River, within a day's ride of this place, which in imposing grandeur, general appearance and size, is the equal in all respects, except in the lack of such a lofty waterfall, of the original Yosemite itself.

Among other mementos of former visits to "Fisherman's Peak" (which name, by the way, they don't think appropriate), was the following record on a half dollar, which we give verbatim:

"NOTICE.

GENTLEMEN—Hoever is the looky finder of this half a dollar is welkom to it.

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 17, 1873.

MR. EDITOR—The following is the apportionment of State and county school moneys. The State school money was apportioned by the State School Superintendent on the census returns of 1872, before the annual reports of County Superintendents for 1873 were due at his office, and I do not know of any law authorizing me to change the apportionment:

Board of Supervisors.

The Board met in adjourned session Monday, October 20. Present—T. K. Hutchison, President; A. N. Bell and W. L. Hunter.

The Board proceeded to canvass the returns of the votes of the general election, the canvass of the same having been delayed until the present, there not having previously been a full Board to take action upon certain points relating to the admission of the returns of Bishop Creek precinct.

After a full consideration, and it not appearing to the satisfaction of the Board that the manner of holding the election at Bishop Creek was in accordance with the requirements of law, it was decided to reject the returns of said precinct, Messrs Hutchison and Hunter voting to reject, Mr. Bell to admit.

By a full vote the returns of Fish Springs were also rejected, for the reason that the certificates showing the numbers of the votes received by the several candidates was not signed by any member of the Election Board.

By a full vote the returns from Lone Pine precinct were rejected on the grounds that the poll list, making part of the said precinct, was not correct, and did not comply with the law, inasmuch as there was no certificate by the Election Board of the number of votes cast for any candidate.

The returns of all the other precincts were counted except that portion of the Cerro Gordo vote which was cast for Assessor, which did not bear the certificate of the Election Board that any such officer had been voted for.

The following is the official canvass of the vote at the general election:

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE, FREE FROM ALCOHOL

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
Vinegar Bitters.

No Person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittant Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most Wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

The Curse of California.

The following from The Chicago Post, covers the whole ground, and explains our views to a nicety:

A Washington dispatch mentions the issue from the General Land Office of a patent for an old Mexican grant in California, covering six square leagues in San Luis Obispo county. It is added that there are now only two of these Mexican grant claims on the docket at Washington, but about a hundred and fifty of them are still to come up, being delayed awaiting surveys or other formalities in California. Congress could not do a better thing for that State than to take such action as may be necessary to summarialy squelch these claims, nine-tenths of which are utterly fraudulent, either by indemnifying the honest claimants to a moderate amount and sending the dishonest ones to the penitentiary or in any other feasible and constitutional fashion. And in addition to that, there should be legislation, either State or national, to compel the cutting up of the six or seven hundred great ranches, the claims of which have already been confirmed. Land monopoly is even a worse curse to California than railroad grabs and she cannot hope for anything like substantial prosperity and rapid development until the system which puts whole counties into the hands of single grantees, and renders it impossible for the cultivators of the soil to become its owners, is completely abolished. Canada a dozen years ago, found herself compelled to abolish the seignoral tenure, in order to get rid of a similar nuisance. It is a wretchedly poor policy which surrounds the soil of a new American State to a system which belongs to a long-past age, and of which older communities have had serious trouble in relieving themselves.

Gone to Take a View.

The legislators of Tuolumne county left Sonora on Friday morning to meet the officers of the Chinese and Yosemite Turnpike Company, who were to proceed with them to the valley, that they may personally inspect the trail now being built from Gentry's to the foot of El Capitan. This road is of importance to us, legislation will be asked at the coming session, not for subsidy or aid in the shape of money but for reasonable privileges. The company want the representatives to practically understand their necessities, and the representatives feeling the necessity of full knowledge have gone to take a view. The railroad interest and nearly every officer exerting any power in connection with the grant have made distinctions against this enterprising company. The company asks for nothing but a fair chance with equal rights, and will expect that from the next Legislature. —Union Democrat.

Chase as a Barber.

Men of talent often fail from turning their talents in a wrong direction. Chief Justice Chase, for example, would never have made a successful barber. He lived for awhile in his youth with his uncle Bishop Chase, who prepared him for college. One morning he told the budding Salmon to kill and dress a pig. The incipient statesman was not much of a butcher, and when he came to the delicate operation of scalding the pig, horror! the hair set. But in his extremity he bethought himself of his uncle's razor, and in due course of time had the porker shaved from tip of snout to tail-end. The Bishop on his return complimented his nephew on the neatness with which he had performed his task. When, however, the old gentleman came to shave himself, his cherished razor was found in a sad plight. An investigation followed, and young Salmon received some very serious advice.

—A mild Winter is predicted in the North west, because the corn husks are thin.

—A spread eagle orator of New York State wanted the wings of the bird to fly to every town and county, to every village and hamlet in the broad land, but he wilted when a naughty boy in the crowd sang out, "You would be shot for a goose before you had gone a mile!"

How a Young Woman got her Money.

[From the Chicago (Ill.) Times]

But one woman succeeded in fairly melting one of the directors. She was a young woman, not particularly pretty, perhaps but interesting, and she had tears in her eyes, and fifty dollars in the bank. She rushed frantically to one of the directors and asked him if she could not draw her money.

"I am very sorry, madam," said he, "but I cant help you to it just now."

"But I must have it immediately," she returned passionately. "It's all I have in the world."

"Well, my dear madam, you must have patience as well as the rest."

"But mine is an urgent case, and I can't wait, because———"

"Well, because what?"

"Because," said she, with a smile on her lip and a tear in her eye, "because I am going to be married, and I've got to get some things. The man I'm going to marry hasn't a cent to pay the minister, and he has only one leg, and so I've got to see to everything myself."

The benevolent director dove into his pocket and produced his private purse, out of which he paid her the amount, and she went on her way rejoicing.

The Congressional Chaplaincy.

The following extract of a letter written by Horace Greeley while a member of Congress, in 1848, which we find in Mr. Ingersoll's graceful and impartial Life of Greeley, is no anachronism in these days of Credit Mobilier and Chaplain Newman:

On the third day, the Senate did not even succeed in forming a quorum, out of fifty-seven or eight members, who are all sure to be in for their pay and mileage only twenty-nine appeared in their seats; and the annual hypocrisy of electing a chaplain had to go over and waste another day. If either House had a chaplain who dare preach to its members what they ought to hear—of their faithlessness, their neglect of duty, their iniquitous waste of time, and robbery of the public by taking from the treasury money which they had not even attempted to earn—then there would be some sense in the chaplain business; but any ill-bred Nathan or Elijah who should undertake such a job would be kicked out in short order. So the chaplaincy remains a thing of grimace and mummery, nicely calculated to help some flockless and complaisant shepherd to a few hundred dollars, and impose on devout simpletons an exalted notion of the piety of Congress. Should not the truth be spoken?

Greeley as a Fillibuster Chief.

On reaching California, Mr. Greeley discovered that the military authorities of Mexico were in arms against him. Some paper had published a burlesque statement, at the time the journalist was traveling over the plains, that he was coming to California to take command of all the filibusters, and to invade and conquer Mexico. The Mexican commander at Mazatlan took this hoax as a matter of dead earnest, and issued a solemn proclamation, warning the people against this Horace Greeley—"a most diabolical, bloodthirsty, and unmerciful man." "This dangerous man," continued the Mexican, "is not of the common school of filibusters: they wish for plunder, he for blood and murderous deeds."—Ingersolls Life of Greeley.

—A lady took her son a lad of some five years to church. After the minister had been preaching about half an hour, the little fellow grew sleepy and began to nod. The mother roused him into attention several times by pushing: but as it seemed a hopeless case, she concluded to let him sleep undisturbed. After a while the little fellow had his nap out, and saw the minister still holding out. He looked up in his mother's face and innocently asked, "Mother, is this Sunday night, or is it next Sunday night?"

—A little shaver was sitting near his mother, who was picking over raisins, when she was called out of the room, and as she left said: "Now, sonny, don't touch any of those raisins when I'm gone." Presently the mother returned and inquired: "Well Charley, did you take any raisins?" "No, mama." You know if you did, God saw you." "Yes, I know he did, but he won't tell!"

—"So yer mother's dead, is she?" inquired a bootblack yesterdy of a rather solemn faced lad, who had come back with his "kit" after an absence of a day or two. "Yes, she is," replied the boy, and then straightening himself up he continued: "And dad did the fair thing by her—seven more hacks than Mrs.—— had the other day."

A correspondent of The Boston Transcript says, on looking over an address of the Hon. William Sullivan, delivered to the Suffolk Bar in 1825, he finds that early in colonial times a jury, if they were not satisfied with the opinion of the court, were allowed, by law, "to consult any bystander."

—It is the general impression that Columbus discovered America, but The Chicago Post knows that he could not have discovered much of it, because he made no mention of Chicago in his report.

—According to the latest definition, a bachelor is a man who has lost the opportunity of making a woman miserable.

The Borax Miner.

We find in the last issue of the above named paper a string of as gratuitous falsehoods in relation to the killing of Watson by R. A. Reddy, and also of mean and unwarranted imputations upon this paper, as we have ever seen in print. Now, just on the eve of going press, when this article first came to our notice, it is out of the question for us to give The Miner's statement a notice in detail. That its "reliable" informants, no matter whether their statements were made by letter or in person, were actuated by a mean and lying spirit, having an object entirely foreign to the ostensible one, we are absolutely certain. We pronounce The Miner's statement and conclusions, no matter from whom or how derived, untrue and unwarranted in every essential particular except as to the killing itself, as we shall next week prove so far as proofs are possible outside a court of law.

No Senator.

It is the opinion of The Pioche Record that the California Legislature will not elect a United States Senator this Winter. The conclusion is based upon the almost equal strengh of the three political parties represented in that body, and the improbability of a compromise on a satisfactory candidate. The fact that the successful man, who ever he might be, would not take his seat until December, 1875, is also alluded to as a reason for non-action. But then what is to become of the law of Congress governing the election of United States Senators in all the States of the Union? That law convenes the two Houses of the Legislature in a joint session at a certain specified time, and requires that, in the event of no choice, the balloting shal be continued at least once a day throughout the session. The idea advanced by The Record involves a bigger farce than the Legislature of the Golden State is likely to enact.

Politics in Virginia.

The contest in Virginia has degenerated into a simple and clearly drawn warfare for political power between the whites and negroes. The Richmond Inquirer, in a recent editorial on the subject, says that "the contest in which our people are now so earnestly engaged, with white men on one side and black men on the other, is neither more or less than a fight between the races for power in our State. There is no question of National policy involved in it; no principles of Federal legislation are embraced; no issues immediately associated with the conduct of the General Government are comprised in it."

Sandwich Islands.

The King of the Sandwich Islands, scarcely warm in his seat, is apparently making preparations to vacate his throne by dying. This bothers his Kanaka-Yankee Cabinet. They have no available timber to make another King out of. However, at the latest dates his Majesty was getting better.

The volcano Kilauea is in full blast the lava streams running incessantly. Still greater eruptions are anticipated.

Literary.

A new novel by Christian Reid, author of "Valerie Aylmer" and Morton House," will be commenced in Appleton's Journal of the date of October 25th. The title is "A Daughter of Bohemia." It depicts life in a Southern city, and exhibits all that dramatic power and constructive talent which have marked the previous novels of this author, and given her a high place among American novelists.

The Steal.

General Butler predicts that there will be a dozen bills to repeal the salary act introduced within ten minutes after Congress assembles. No man better than the Essex statesman knows the cheap tricks of demagogues.

Specie Payments.

Government is beginning the work of returning to specie payments by paying out silver coin in lieu of greenbacks. For this purpose a very large coinage of silver dollars has been ordered at the several mints.

The Tariff.

The Farmer's Convention, recently in session in Chicago, having a representation from some ten or more Western States, adopted, among others, a resolution demanding the repeal of the protective tariff.

LAND LAWS.

We submit the following as our own interpretation of the laws, United States and State, relating to the swamp land grants, that we have been able to find after a personal research as thorough as time and circumstances would permit. We only aim to give in our own language the salient points of the several acts referred to. The act of March 2, 1849, grants to the State of Louisiana, "the whole of those swamp and overflowed lands, which are or may be unfit for cultivation," and the act of September 28 of the following year extended similar privileges to the State of Arkansas and all other States where such lands might be found.

"The object of these grants were to enable the States to construct the necessary levees and drains to reclaim or render practicable the cultivation of wamps and periodically overflowed lands. Without considerable expenditures of money, and in a systematic manner, none of these lands actually intended to be included in these grants were or could be considered of any value whatever. As appears by the Commissioner's and State Surveyor's reports for 1869, a principal end to be gained, independent of giving the lands themselves a money value, was to remove their miasmas and thereby render habitable the adjacent uplands. This point is worthy of note as showing the real character of the lands intended to be conveyed by the acts named in contradistinction to those it is now assumed to cover.

Commissioner Wilson, in consideration of the wide range given the Arkansas act as applied to California, especially where the meteorological conditions and circumstances generally are so different from that of other States, is forced to conclude that "the commendable motives which gave rise to the swamp grant have not, it is to be regretted, met with that realization in the fulfilment which its projectors hoped for," and warmly recommends some additional National Legislation to better define the lands intended to be conveyed in these grants.

The basis for selecting the lands to be conveyed by these acts was left to the option of the States. Michigan and Wisconsin adopted the field notes of the survey (United States); the others, including California, decided upon special examinations, and, when necessary, surveys at their own expense.

In the two first named the field notes are prima facie evidence of the character of the land. In none of the others are these notes a bar to a contest as to the character of the land.

The act of March 2, 1855, reserves to the United States the right to issue patents to individuals who have claimed the lands under the pre-emption or homestead laws before the same were patented to the State, but if the claim of the State antedates that of the individual the latter cannot obtain a patent from the United States unless the State shall first relinquish its claim. In other words, the party has to look to the State for his title. This act further provides indemnity to the State for all lands proved to be swamp "within the true intent and meaning of the act aforesaid," which have been previously disposed of by the United States.

Referring now to the Commissioner's circular to Registers and Receivers, dated November 21, 1850, we deduce the following, first giving place to the same ruling quoted by Mr. Earl, to wit:

"This act clearly and unequivocally grants to the several States those lands which, from being swampy or subject to overflow, are unfit for cultivation. In this class is included, also, all lands which, though dry part of the year, are subject to inundation at the planting, or harvesting season, so, as to destroy the crop, and are therefore unfit for cultivation, taking the average of the seasons for a number of years, as a rule of determination."

Under the Arkansas act it is directed that in determining the character of the lands the lowest legal subdivision, 40 acres, is made the unit, so to speak, of the list. It is specifically stated in the act, and sustained by the circulars of the above date, and also of December 21, 1853, and also Land Office Report of 1855, that it has to be shown that the greater part of each and every forty acre lot is "wet and unfit for cultivation" before it can be listed to the State. If the greater part, say 21 out of the 40 acres, is dry land, the whole of said 40 is rated as such, though it should be the only one of that description in one entire section or township. Though the greater number of the 40 acre lots in a section or township are proven to be swamp, it must be understood that none of the remaining dry ones of that section or township are affected. As before stated each 40 is to be judged without reference to its neighbors in listing it as swamp, and then, in order to be subject to State location, it must be joined by at least three other forties, a quarter section being the smallest isolated subdivision subject to State location under any grant.

The local land officers are required to make a list of the lands thus granted to the State. The maps (field notes) already on file in the office are especially named as the only reliable data for for this purpose. "If the authorities of the State are willing to adopt them as the basis of the list you will so regard them. If not, and these authorities furnish you satisfactory evidence that any lands are of the character embraced by the grant, you will so report them." Further than this the Register of the local office is no where authorized to become the especial attorney of the State, nor any person, in an endeavor to seek out wet lands, not mapped as swamp, to turn over to the State and the grabbers.

Here, if space permitted, we would explain the method of surveying by which the surveyor for the State is governed when setting off such lands; it is enough to say that the 40-acre rule above given is the test to decide to which class every portion of the land embraced within the lines run or cut by them, is to be decided. Any talk about "curvatures," "ordinates," and original survey corners, being connected by straight lines to embrace larger areas of dry land to go with the swamp to the contrary notwithstanding.

The instructions dated January 22, 1858, say, in effect, that all lands represented on the plats (original) as swamp will be certified to the State. Should the latter claim lands not mapped as such, it is made the especial duty of the Register and Receiver to take testimony as to whether the greater part of each forty-acre subdivision is or is not subject to periodical overflow, either at the planting, growing or harvesting season, or is or is not generally so wet as to materially injure or destroy staple crops. If satisfactorily proven to be swamp on this basis, it will be listed to the State, and not otherwise. The lists of all such selections are to be kept open to public inspection in the local land office. If after six months any portion of this list remains uncontested by the filing of an objection, it will be certified to the State without further action.

Any person desiring to contest such selection, can go before any officer authorized to administer oaths, when it is not convenient to go before either the Register or Receiver, and make affidavit under oath to the above effect, which affidavit is to be filed with the Register and Receiver for transmission to the General Land Office, which office in due time (by the local officers) orders a hearing, of which at least thirty days notice is to be given, the order and forms of questions, etc.

Though in substance already given, we transcribe in full the two following paragraphs of the circular last referred to:

"The evidence must be satisfactory to you that the lands demanded by the State are of the character granted by the law. Where that evidence is not contained in the field notes, you should require the testimony of competent and disinterested witnesses, who should be required to testify that they understand the manner of surveying and marking public lands; that they have examined the lines and corners of the lands in relation to which they testify, and so much of the same as to enable them to state, of their own personal knowledge, that the greater part of each forty acre lot claimed by the State is swampy, or subject to such overflow as to render it unfit for cultivation. On such testimony, if satisfactory to you [Register and Receiver] you will certify the lands to the State.

"In reference to the necessity of an examination of the land in each subdivision claimed, I would remark, that in all instances a partial and in many a complete examination must be necessary to enable agents [the State's] to certify under oath that the 'greater part of each forty acre lot of the body of land in relation to which they testily, is wet and unfit for cultivation.' The only exception, of course, being in cases where a region of county is notoriously swampy or subject to overflow."

In the last paragraph is found grounds for the allegation of "broad falsification" against the wholesale grabbers and would-be grabbers, at which some of them feel much hurt. Without such minute examinations it is impossible to segregate the so-called swamp lands of this valley and not swear falsely.

Here is a nut, to be found on page 542, 33 California, for Messrs. Earl, Powell & Co. to crack:

"If land subject to overflow at the date of this act [Sept. 28, 1850], and annually thereafter, was such that a crop, either wheat, rye, barley, oats, corn, buckwheat, peas or beans, could be raised on it, it was not swamp and overflowed land within the meaning of the act donating such lands to the State."

The foregoing synopsis of the swamp land law may be relied upon as substantially correct, at least so far as our ability to interpret the English language can make it so. It covers pretty nearly the entire ground. From it may be deduced a plan of action to avert the impending grab, which by no possible sophistries can be shown to be ought, if accomplished, than a disaster to the best interests of this county.

IRRIGATION MATTERS.

At the Denver (Col.) Irrigation Convention, among other important resolutions, there were some which assert that the National Government should grant to the States and Territories the right of way for canals, ditches and reservoirs, over all public and private lands, wherever necessary for promoting agriculture or mining; that full power should be conveyed over all streams and lakes; that the right should be given to tax all lands benefitted by the general irrigation; and that each Western State and Territory should establish an Irrigation Board to superintend improvements, assess taxes, and otherwise manage matters connected with its system of irrigation. In a lengthy letter to The Denver News, on the subject of irrigation, Mr. N. C. Meeker, of the Greeley colony, Colorado, refers to the irrigation in Utah, and accepts as a fundamental principle the conclusion, arrived at by long experience, that water belongs to the people. The Salt Lake Herald thinks that "this is a necessary standpoint from which all legislation must spring, the State or Territory, as representative of the people, claiming the right of eminent domain and legislating accordingly. No progress in a grand scheme of irrigation can be carried out unless this principle is acknowledged, and no permanent and undisputable system of rules and regulations for the management thereof can be adopted without it."

Mount Whitney Again.

[COMMUNICATED.]

CERRO GORDO, Oct. 28th, 1873.

ED. INDEPENDENT: Much has recently been said and written about 'Fisherman's Peak," "Mount Whitney," the "Dome of the Continent," the "Dome of Inyo," and the "immortal three" who were the first (?) to scale the summit of the loftiest peak in Uncle Sam's dominions.

Since these three, the "immortal three," have their honors secure, I propose, in a small degree, to examine their accounts, thinking, perchance, that criticism may provoke inquiry into the manner and method adopted by these ingenious climbers to excite a willing public into the belief that these inimitable climbers were the first to ascend Mount Whitney. I say profess to have accomplished in one half day what required two days for other parties to accomplish. As the story runs, they were on the summit of the mistaken Mount Whitney on the 14th of August, 1873. The next morning they left their camp located in the canyon to the southwest of this mountain, and proceeded to climb "Fisherman's Peak," arriving on the summit shortly afternoon. That tells the story. From this same camping ground A. Leyda and myself were two and one half days in reaching the summit of Mount Whitney, and Clarence King (so he informed me) was nearly three days in going over the same ground. To be sure the route once known can be traversed in a day, providing no time is lost. But no stranger to the locality ever traveled it in that time. On the summit of "Fisherman's Peak," as the story runneth, the "immortal three" found "a natural basin in the rock, filled with ice and snow around about." I can inform the "immortal three" that at that time no "snow," nor "ice," or "a natural basin in the rock filled with water" existed on the summit of Mount Whitney. And I have yet to find the individual—among the many who have been there since—who has seen this notable landmark on the summit, of Mount Whitney, claimed as existing on "Fisherman's Peak."

As the role speaketh "the summit is flat-topped and composed of granite.' i e: the summit of "Fisherman's Peak." The summit of Mount Whitney, is not composed of granite, "neither is it flat-topped."

According to the story they, the inimitable climbers, ascended Fisherman's Peak on the southwest side One might descend Mount Whitney on the west side, or the east side, or the north side; but the attempt to do so would not, probably, be conducive to the longevity of the individual attempting it.

Now we come to the question, are "Fisherman's Peak and "Mount Whitney" identical? Most decidedly they are not. Else if they were, how can these ingenious climbers account for the fact that they left no tracks there? Or did they visit it spiritually—by proxy, in the guise of that sheep-herder's delight?" Or was it in imagination that the perturbed spirits of the inimitable wandered off thither?

Perturbed spirits, methinks I see thee still:

On the 15th day of August, 1873 Mr. A. Leyda and myself ascended Mount Whitney and at that time not a solitary track of man, horse or mule, was to be seen anywhere within four miles of Mount Whitney, The only tracks to be seen were those of that mountain loving fellow the Bighorn; a solitary sheep had, about a month previous, ascended to the very summit of Mount Whitney leaving his mark on its very crest. It is not improbable that in former days when this land flowed with milk and honey for "Poor Lo," that individual may, in his pursuit of game, ascended to the summit of Mount Whitney—an admirable place to corral the Bighorn.

With a copy of the Geological Survey Report before us, we determined by the aid of our compass its topographical position to be identical with that assigned to Mount Whitney by Prof. Brewer and Hoffman of the Geological Survey. Our observations (as I am since informed) conformed to a single second with the observations made in 1864, under authority of the State Geological Survey, and at that time named Mount Whitney. Our barometer and level found it to be the highest peak in that grand cluster, and higher than any other peak in the United States of which we have any record. Herr Van Carl Rabe was probably laboring at an oar in the same boat with the "immortal three" when he stated to Prof. Goodyear that he made the first barometrical measurement of Mount Whitney.

When Herr Van Carl Rabe came to Cerro Gordo he came to me to inquire about the route to Mount Whitney which resulted in my going with the Belshaw party as guide.

We were to leave Cerro Gordo on the 3d of Sept. and I promised to take them to the summit of Mount Whitney by half past nine o'clock on the morning of the 6th of Sept., and in accordance with that, Mr. Rabe made arrangments in Lone Pine to have observations taken there, commencing on the 6th at ten o'clock A. M. In carrying out this programme it was necessary to know the exact route in order to be on the mountain at the time specified. So well was this programme carried out that the Belshaw party arrived on the summit of Mount Whitney within just five minutes of the time specified. I state this not egotistically—but for the benefit of the "inimitable three," who have insinuated that Mr. Leyda and myself were not there as represented. Furthermore, were it necessary I could inform these itinerant climbers of the fact of my report being in San Francisco at least ten days before the "inimitable three" ever laid claim to the honor of climbing "Fisherman's Peak."

When the Belshaw party visited Mount Whitney, they, one and all, searched the country over for some trace or track of the redoubtable climbers; but not a trace or a track could be found anywhere. The tracks left by Mr. Leyda and myself were as distinct and plain as though made but yesterday. To prove that these tracks were ours, and not theirs, I often pointed out our course a long ways in advance and on reaching the spot our tracks were there, and none others. Tracks are an evidence which cannot be obliterated except by the Winter storm. Hence if the "immortal three" had been on the summit of Mount Whitney previous to the 6th of September their tracks would still be there to prove it.

Wherever "Fisherman's Peak" may be is a matter of little consequence to anybody; but the fact is indisputable that in the most expert descriptions given of it by the "immortal three," they have completely failed in indicating its locality more than it is in the Sierra Nevadas, and is the highest peak in the United States. Query: how high is "Fisherman's Peak?" How do they know it to be the highest even in that vicinity? We may sum it up thusly: They climbed a mountain supposing it to be Mount Whitney and exercising a prerogative—a prerogative without precedent—they assumed to throw the name of the distinguished scientist—Prof. Whitney—overboard, and create a classical name from the dirt of their calling, thus calling it "Fisherman's Peak." The distance from the sublime to the ridiculous has long been measured by a single step, but in the action of the "immortal three" an infinitesimal point does it.

Call it "Fisherman's Peak," the "Dome of Inyo," or, gentlemen, what ever you please; but that little piece of board sticking in a crevice on the summit of Mount Whitney and bearing this inscription.

"MOUNT WHITNEY.

Ascended and measured on the 15th day of August, 1873. Barometrical measurement (above sea level) 17.25—15,300 feet. Wm Crapo, Abe Leyda."

This is corroboratory of its name—a name given in honor of a distinguished scientist; a name that will bear its impress on the maps of our country hundreds of years hence, and many long years after the names and deeds of the "immortal three" have passed into oblivion.

Borax.

The borax fields in the southern portion of this county, on the Owens River road, near Ball's Station, are represented as containing an article of much better quality than that found at Columbus, and that the field is quite as extensive. It is represented that the borax from the Kern county fields can be put into the market at about half what it costs the Columbus company to get their product into market. This is a very important item. We are informed that the erection of works will soon be commenced by the parties owning these fields. The ground stripped last summer by Chapman & Co., has now a fine second "crop."—Havilah Miner.

To Whom It May Concern.

The following, which needs no explanation, may be worth the attention of some who may see it here:

WAR DEPARTMENT.
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON October 10, 1873.

[General Orders No. 102.]

The President of the United States commands it to be made known that all soldiers who have deserted their colors, and who shall on or before the first day of January, 1874, surrender themselves at any military station, shall receive full pardon, only forfeiting the pay and allowances due them at the time of desertion; and shall be restored to duty without trial or punishment on condition that they faithfully serve through their term of enlistment.

Gritty.

The Arizona Miner in one sense is the grittiest paper we have ever seen. In being carried across those vast sandy wastes, its folds, though in a close wrapper, are literally filled as full of sand as they will hold. But if any paper on the coast needs to have plenty of "sand in its craw," it is one printed among ye noble red men of Arizona.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL GIVES IN A WEEKLY form all the features of a monthly magazine. Its weekly issue brings it a more frequent visitor to the family than is the case with a monthly periodical, while, in the course of a year, a much greater aggregate and a larger variety of papers are furnished than are given in any of the regular monthlies. But, for those who prefer it, The Journal is put up in monthly parts, and in this form its scope and variety, as compared with other magazines, become conspicuously apparent.

PRICE—10 Cents per Number; or $4 00 per Annum, in advance. Subscriptions received for Twelve or Six Months. Subscription price of Monthly Parts, $4 50.

Any person procuring five yearly subscriptions, for weekly numbers, and remitting $20, will be entitled to a copy for one year gratis; fifteen yearly subscribers, for weekly numbers, and remitting $50, will entitle sender to a copy for one year gratis.

The postage within the United States is 30 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office where received. In remitting by mail, a postoffice order or draft, payable to the order of D. Appleton & Co., is preferable to bank notes, as, if lost, the order or draft can be recovered without loss to the owner.

Volumes begin with January and July of each year.

Acknowledgment.

Accompanying the communication published last week respecting the "Dome of Inyo" was a piece of fine grained granite labeled thus: "Highest point on the Dome of Inyo; taken thence, Aug. 18, 1873, by C. D. Begole, A. H. Johnson, and John Lucas." We place considerable store by this little piece of rock, being, as we believe, that much of the point nearest the skies of any in the United States. We consider that those gentlemen have established their right by first exploration, to give a name to this mountain, and think their selection a good one, though for convenience it will probably after awhile lapse into "Mount Inyo," simply.

Personals.

V. A. Gregg, Esq., returned Saturday last from below, bringing with him his lady and two children, whom he had gone there to meet. A brother of Mr. J. W. McMurry, with family, has arrived at Big Pine, where he proposes to make a home. They are from Illinois. Seth Sneden and lady have gone to the Bay. D. E. Hunter goes to Benton to locate. Lieut. Haskell, late of Camp Gaston, paid this, his old stamping ground, a flying visit last week, ere reporting for duty with his company at San Diego.

Some more of Whitney.

Elsewhere will be found a reference to the communication on Mount Whitney that was published last week, since that was in type we have another disputing the claims of those boys as original explorers. We were disposed to accord the honor to them, but in the face of all their contradicting statements, we now conclude that we don't know anything about it.

New Stock.

George Stevens is in receipt of a fine stock of parlor and other stoves of different sizes and styles, and similar things pertaining to a tin and hardware establishment. Among these we notice an ingenious thingummijig for beating eggs that beats any other for the purpose we have seen.

Gone Below.

Superintendent Wingard of the Silver Sprout has gone to San Francisco. He leaves men at work on his mines, which, we are assured, display a vast amount of splendid ore. There is no doubt but that the series of lodes known as the Silver Sprout are really good and substantial mines.

The Blaney House.

The increase of business at the Blaney has necessitated an addition to the lodging department. The law office and rooms in Broder's new building recently occupied by Snelling and Laspeyre, have been fitted out for this purpose by Mr. Thompson, and very nice rooms they are.

County Court Calender.

The following is the only case docketed for the next term of the County Court, which meets next Monday: M. W. White, appellant, vs. Taylor & Cochran, respondents. Reddy & Egbert for appellant; Bennett & Gregg for respondents.

Fire.

The kitchen pertaining to Mr. Earl's former dwelling near the Post, caught fire from a defective stove pipe, Thursday morning last, but through the active exertions of the boys of Co. D, who were soon on hand, it was saved from total destruction.

Sold Out.

Louey Munzinger has sold out his interest in the Germania Brewery, Lone Pine, to his former partner, John Lubken, and John Myer. Louey don't know for certain, but he says he thinks he will go into the newspaper business—which is a business as pays.

Spelling School.

Every Wednesday evening a large number of folks, young and old, get together at the school house, and have old, fahioned spelling schools, which afford both instruction and amusement.

Gone Home.

The junior started Sunday last on a two weeks visit to Virginia City—once, but not now, his "home," since never more will he be welcomed there by a mother's smile.

Ready for Business.

The Court-room and offices are all now in order for business. We consider the Judge's bench, built by Mr. Gerrish, a model of neatness in design and finish.

I. O. G. T.

This order is doing some very commendable work in this place about these times. Success to it.

Quarterly Meeting.

The appointed Quarterly Meeting begins to-day. Preaching to-night by Elder Nims.

District Court Calendar.

The following cases are docketed for the District Court, commencing Nov. 3:

Panamint—The Route and Mines.

[Correspondence of The Inyo Independent.]

Olanche, Inyo Co., Cal., Oct. 28, 1873.

Mr. Editor: I have just returned from a short trip to the Panamint Mining District.

Leaving Little Lake in company with the renowned prospector Bob Stewart and two others, well supplied with the "O. B. Joyful," we struck off due east, passing over sand and lava most of the way.

THE ROUTE.

About 20 miles from Little Lake you strike the first water; twelve miles farther you come to another spring—excellent water—in a canyon; passing down this canyon you come to Panamint Valley; crossing the valley you come to what is known as "Post Office Spring," at the base of Panamint Mountain. Leaving the camping place, you bear a little north of east, 3½ miles brings you to the mouth of Surprise Canyon. Upon entering this canyon you are struck with the rough, unfinished work of a volcano of the unknown ages; passing up the canyon you arrive at the newly laid out city known and recorded as

PANAMINT CITY.

The canyon is not over three hundred yards wide where the town site is laid put, but is about two miles in length. After you arrive at the city you gaze at the craggy peak hoping you may discover a chunk of plata sticking out that you might slily pocket, and thus quickly repay yourself for the horrors you have after drinking a keg of bad whisky, and the fatigue you endure in making the trip—but you can hope away.

THE MINES.

But little work has been done on any of the mines or lodes, but what have been worked show a large body of good ore. By the politeness of Bob Stewart I visited some of the prominent lodes.

"THE LITTLE CHIEF"

has some work done on it, and shows a body of ore some four feet in widtn. The assays made go from $196 to $806. This mine is bonded for $10,000; is owned at present by Tipton & Co. The next ledge we come to is the no work done of any account, but it shows a good body of mineral. This ledge is owned by your humble servant, which accounts for no work being done. In crosssing over the hill we passed over quite a number of small ledges; nearly all show good indications. The next ledge we come to is the

"NORTH CHIEF;"

and it is a huge ledge, "you bet!" It will average twelve feet in width, and can be traced, I think, three miles. If you don't believe the assertion, just take a trip commencing at the north extreme and follow along the croppings up and down its craggy knobs, until you lose it on the south end, you will think it ten miles, and your head will feel somewhat dizzy. There are quite a number of locations on this lode. The northern portion shows the greatest amount of mineral. Among the locators are Bob Stewart and Kennedy. The former bonded his interest in this ledge and the "Wonder" lode for $35,000. The north end of this ledge is owned by Kennedy & Co., and is known as the "Wyoming."

The next lode of note we visited was the

a big name but it deserves it. It runs nearly parallel with the famous Marble Lode, at a distance, I should judge, on a bee line, of about two miles. This ledge shows more mineral than any in the camp or district. I believe I can safely say, without stretching my conscience a great deal, that there is enough ore in sight to keep running two years.

The smallest lode I visited showed mineral. There are some locations made some six or eight miles north, which show good ore, and the owners say they can make a stake if they can keep on top of the "bed-rock" until they can develope their mines sufficiently to bring them into note.

There are quite a number of

sufficient for smelting, should their ores be such that cannot be reduced by mill process. The district has abundance of wood for fuel and sufficient water for all purposes.

The altitude of the town site I believe Mr Kraus, the surveyor, said was about 7,000 feet; geographical location: Township 23 S., Range 44 East.

A wagon road can be made from Desert Springs to the mouth of the canyon for about $1,000, and up the canyon to the town for some $12,000.

I think in a year or two

PANAMINT WILL BE ALL THE TALK

on Montgomery street, among the stock-brokers of San Francisco.

I will just say that I never met with kinder treatment than I received at the hands of the open hearted, noble miners of this district.

SUMMONS.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE SIXTEENTH Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo. John C. Morrison, Jr., plaintiff, against W. G. Squires, defendant. Action brought in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and the complaint filed in said county of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court.

The People of the State of California send greeting to W. G. Squires. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the county of Inyo, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise, within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint. The said action is brought to recover the sum of Eight hundred and fifty seven 72 100 dollars in gold coin of the United States, for goods, wares and merchandise sold and delivered to said defendant by said plaintiff, at defendant's special instance and request, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1872, together with interest thereon from said date at the rate of ten per cent. per annum. And you are hereby notified if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will take judgment by default against you, in accordance with the prayer of said plaintiff's complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the District Court of the sixteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the County of Inyo, this Sixteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy three.

Vinegar Bitters.

No Person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most Wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Poverty in Europe.

[From "Old and New."]

The extreme poverty of the lower classes in Europe is calculated to create discontent, and the vast difference between them and the rich to suggest readjustment of social relations. Here we have at once the ground and the motive of socialism.

The poor are miserable beyond anything we of America can conceive. The workingmen, owing to the lowness of their wages, live from hand to mouth, feeling themselves fortunate if they can provide for the moment; they do not dream of laying up anything for the future. If they lose a day's work they are accordingly on the verge of beggary. In this misery, moreover, they have not the consolation of poor Americans, who, although they must begin poor, never expect to remain so long. Nor have they have they any hope that their children will ever rise out of their condition; for the son conventionally takes up the trade of the father, lives in the same class of society, and generally in the same town, for a whole decade of generations.

With this state of things they experience several important evils. In the first place, the people cannot generally marry. Servants, waiters, coachmen and persons of that class, rarely, if ever, think of marrying, believing themselves fortunate if they can support a single person. Most mechanics do not marry, and those who do, put it off until late in life, the usual age for marrying being from twenty five to thirty years. The sad necessity which imposes this delay on many has given rise to it as a custom for all. The marriage of the workingman, when it does occur, generally entails more misery than comfort; for then not only himself but a whole family stands in a perpetual fear of beggary. This evil, moreover, gives rise to a greater. The unmarried, and so all, during their early manhood are much given to licentiousness. The state of mistress is the common condition of servant girls, poor widows and often shop girls, who in this way alone can eke out a subsistence for themselves and their aged parents, or it may be orphan brothers and sisters. A poor young girl in Europe is generally allowed to be ruined until proved to be virtuous.

Again, the manner of living among the workingmen is equally deplorable. Their dwellings are the garrets, cellars and back buildings, all of which are small, or else partitioned off into small apartments, dirty and unhealthy. Many take up their abode in cabins in the open square, or along the wider streets where they sit during the day exposing petty articles of merchandise. In Rome, Naples and many other southern cities they often live out doors altogether, lying about in the sun, and sleeping at night in the squares and parks. In Sweden, Poland and some other northern countries, they take up lodgings with the cattle. Those who carry on their own business, as shoemakers, often do all their own work in the streets. In Naples, for example, you can see them arranged with their tools along the pavement from one end of the street to the other. I have noticed whole squads of sewing girls, sometimes with sewing machines, thus stretched along the pavement, also bakers, cooks, saddlers, coopers, coppersmiths, etc., all plying their business in open air for, lack of shelter of any kind.

The dress and general appearance of this class are no better than their dwellings. Much of their clothing is second hand apparel that has been thrown off by the rich. The general characteristic of a poor man's dress in Europe is good stuff in a bad condition. Here we see persons literally in rags. In Thuringia the children often go entirely naked; in Italy, the poor children go nearly so. The common blouse of the workingman all over Europe is what we call a coarse shirt. They largely wear wooden shoes, and bind their feet with rags for stockings.

The food of this class is likewise bad, and rarely ever sufficient for them, there being much suffering from this cause. Cheese takes largely the place of meat in Germany, and fat of butter. It is not uncommon in the rural provinces for a man to come home after a hard day's work and to a supper of unbolted rye bread and the salt water in which herring had been pickled. Only those in better circumstances can eat the herring. The stems and leaves of cabbages, turnips and other vegetables are eaten by this class; also horse meat, blood, entrails, snails and the like. In Italy they feed on coarse mush, and are disqualified for any hard work whatever. This class do not generally eat at tables but "take a piece," as we would say, each one eating when he feels like it, or can get it. They do not always eat in the house; but may be seen at all hours eating in the streets. A chief reason for so much beer and wine drinking in Europe, is that with something of this kind the working classes can make out to swallow their dry crusts.

Silver in the Sea.

[From The Boston Journal.]

The poet tells of the gems that shine with "purest ray serene" in dark unfathomed caves of ocean; but it is not in those inaccessible depths alone that the treasure of the sea is hidden. There is untold wealth diffused throughout the immensity of its waters, as secure from human avarice as if it were in the abysses which plummet never sounded. Its very diffusion puts it out of reach. The fact that it is everywhere makes it nowhere. Some years ago, certain French chemists demonstrated that sea water contains an appreciative amount of silver. They decided that, if it is equally distributed, there must be at least two millions tons of the precious metal in the whole ocean, or more than has ever been dug from the earth. And experiments made at widely distant points, prove that it is thus uniformly diffused. The water of the Pacific, off the coast of Chile, as analyzed by an English chemist, gives the same result as the Frenchman had obtained from the waters of the British Channel.

The silver in the sea is only one out of a thousand illustrations of solid substances made invisible by chemical processes. And we must not suppose that it is minute particles of matter that can be thus lost to sight in transparent liquid. A silver half dollar (a mythical piece of money to our young readers, but the old folks can tell them how large it is, or was), can be dissolved in a very small amount of nitric acid, which, if pure, is colorless liquid. Coin soon vanishes, and the liquid is as clear and as transparent as ever. Many dollars' worth of silver might thus be concealed in a gallon of what would seem to be nothing but water. Other metals and, indeed solid substances of all kinds, may be dissolved and made to disappear in a similar way. There is no visible form of matter which chemical agencies may not render invisible. What we commonly call the destruction of matter is merely this metamorphosis from the seen to the unseen. When wood or anything else that has been burned, it has simply undergone a chemical change which removes it from our sight. Not a particle of matter can be really destroyed, unless by the power that called it into existence. The silver in our transparent liquid is not annihilated if we pour it into the sea; it is lost to us, but the silver is there, like the millions of tons of kindred metal that were already mingled with the waters. In like manner the coal and wood we burn, except a small residium of ashes, have become viewless gasses, and blended with the aerial ocean of the atmosphere. On the clearest day the air above us is laden with thousands of tons of carbon in this transparent condition. It is there, though we cannot see it, and plants are continually turning back into visible form again. This is the key to the mystery of their growth, which is mainly the withdrawing of carbon from its gaseous state of carbonic acid, and making it a part of their own structure.

We have said that the silver in the sea is useless, because it is diffused through so vast a bulk of fluid. But the fact that it has been possible to detect it, when thus diffused, shows that if chemical agencies can make solid substances vanish from our sight, they can, on the other hand, compel a body thus concealed to show itself, even when it forms only the minutest proportion of the mixture. The delicacy of chemical tests is almost beyond belief. A single drop of colorless liquid may instantaneously produce a well defined red, or blue, or yellow throughout the entire mass of the latter; and yet it may be less than a hundreth part of a grain of some solid substance in solution, that is made to give such unmistakable evidence of its presence:

—One of the fruit dealers of Portland caught an urchin stealing nuts, and proceeded to execute condign punishment. The boy begged to be released, because he had just been vaccinated from a fresh cow. What has that to do with it?" shouted the infuriated fruit dealer. "She was a hooking cow and I got it into my blood," was the whimpering reply.

—A young student wants us to tell him, if W-o r c-e-s-t-e-r spells Wooster, why R-o-c h-e-s-t-e r does not spell Rooster. We give it up, as we are not engaged in getting up dictionaries.

—A Western editor's statement, "We are living at this moment under absolute despotism," is attributed by his contemporaries to the fact that he has just been married.

"I'll Tell Yon."

An amusing instance of childish humor used to be narrated by a Mr. Campbell, of Jura, the subject of it being his own son. It seems the boy was much spoiled by indulgence; in fact, the parents were scarcely able to refuse him anything he demanded. He was in the drawing room on one occasion, when dinner was announced, and on being ordered up stairs to the nursery, he insisted on going down to dinner with the company. His mother at first refused, but the child persevered, and kept saying, "If you dinna let me I'll tell yon." His father then for the sake of peace, allowed him to go into the dining-room. He sat at the table beside his mother; and when he found every one getting soup, and himself omitted, he demanded soup and repeated, "If I dinna get some. I'll tel yon."

Well, soup was given, and various other things yielded to his importunities, to which he always added the usual threat of telling yon." At last when it came to wine, his mother firm and positively refused to let him have some. He then became more vociferous than ever "about telling yon;" and as he was still refused, he declared, "now I'll tell yon;" and at last roared out, to the great amusement of all present, "My new breeks were made oot o' the the auld curtains!"

—Mark Twain, a few months after his first baby was born, was holding it on his knee. His wife said, "Now confess, Samuel, that you love the child!" "I can't do that," he replied, "but I am willing to admit I respect the little thing for its father's sake."

—A fascinating young lady, at one of the resorts, on being asked recently if she had ever read Shakspeare, tossed her pretty head with the answer, "Shakspeare, of course I have; I read that when it first came out."

Some More Testimony.

BELMONT CAMP, Inyo Co., Cal., Oct., 30, 1873.

MR. EDITOR:—Now, sir, for the whole thing. I see in your last issue that the celebrated fishermen of Lone Pine challenge me for the proof of my statement. In the first place, Abe Leyda and W. Crapo were on the Dome some days before we started, and Mr. Crapo volunteered to pilot Mr. Rabe there; they are the two who built the monument.

Now then for my proofs. In the first place they went from old Mount Whitney, across a big canyon, and ascended the Dome or "Fisherman's Peak." Well, now, that is impossible, for I defy any man living to do that. You will have to travel over 20 miles of as rough a road as God ever made to get where you can get up; in the next place the top of the Dome is nothing like what they said it was—a big bank of snow, and a big rock with a hole in it and the hole full of water. There was no snow within a thousand feet of the top, nor a rock with a hole in it. And again they say that they came down on the west side; now, sir, a mountain sheep could not get down on that side; and again it took Mr. King three days to get into to where the ascent is made, and Crapo and Leyda the same time, the first time they went up; so if that party went up in half a day, I think that they would do well to try and climb the Kaweah Peaks, as no one has ever yet been on them. And still another, when we were coming home Mr. Charley Johnson told and showed Mr. Hunter a different peak altogether, that Al. showed him was the one they were on.

Labor Report.

A friend, who is fond of statistical research, figures out the following labor report for the State of Massachusetts for the last year: Average daily wages for skilled mechanics and employees in manufacturies, was, for males, $2 42 females, $1 07; children, 68 cents. They had 288 days work during the year. Unskilled laborers had employment for only 248 days, at an average; of $1 70 per day.

Receiver Appointed.

P. A. Chaltant, editor of this paper and Receiver at the Land Office here tendered his resignation of the Receivership several months since, but until the present week, had no idea who was to be his successor. By a dispatch in The Alta we learn the position has been given to Thomas May, the owner of the building in which the office is located.

Promoted.

Lieut. Colonel George Crook (o Arizona fame) has been promoted to the rank of Brigadier General U. S. A., vice Philip St. G. Cooke placed on the retired list for long and faithful service, having been in the army since, July, 1827. Gen. Crook entered the army July, 1852.

Coin and Currency.

The United States Treasury now pays out coin for greenback checks, but in no case more than five dollars on each check. It does not redeem greenbacks with coin. Greenbacks are now quoted, selling 92¾, buying 93½.

Pioneer Celebration.

The Pioneers of Gold Hill and Virginia cities held, October 31, a grand celebration of the ninth anniversary of the admission of Nevada into the Union.

—One of the young officers at the lava beds received a letter from the girl he left behind him, which contained this tender paragraph:—"And if anything should happen to you, do make some arrangements to have your hair recovered and sent on. It is the exact color of mine, and I can't get a pair of curls of the right shade anywhere."

APPORTIONMENT OF SCHOOL MONEYS.

In the November number of The California Teacher we find an extended report or article relating to the present unjust system of apportioning school moneys in this State. We have barely had time to glance at this article as yet, but as the subject is of especial importance in this county we shall endeavor to give a full synopsis soon of that portion wherein he suggests a remedy through Legislative action.

By a recent decision of the Supreme Court, as we are told, Boards of Supervisors have no authority to fix taxes in accordance with the separate needs of the different school districts; they can only order a uniform tax, the per cent. being the same in all. In this county there are two districts having census children enough to entitle them to public money under the present law sufficient to maintain an eight months' school without an additional tax. The remaining districts, having but few children, are entitled to only about half enough, and consequently will have to do without schools a good portion of the time, and some of them altogether as qualified teachers cannot be obtained for such short terms. On this account such districts forfeit the money standing to their credit, though in amount it may have been sufficient for a three, four or even six months' school, provided a teacher could be obtained. As the basis of the apportionment is not the property values of the districts or counties, as it should be, the tax falls unequally and unjustly with respect to benefits received. The heaviest tax paying district in the county may not, without a special tax, be able to have a three months' school, while another with only half as much property, can, with State and county money, run one the whole year, all by reason of the difference in the number of the census childern in each. In such cases an extra but uniform tax laid by the Board to enable the district having the smallest number of children (though with the greatest amount of property), to maintain a full term school increases the already sufficient fund of the other in the same ratio, giving it a u surplus, and an undue proportion of which is taken directly out of the pockets of the taxpayers in the first.

It costs $1,000 in this county to maintain a full term (eight months) school. We will assume, and not be far from the truth, that the number of children in Independence district entitles it to but $500, and by the same rule Lone Pine gets $1,000, which is all that is required. Independence, though paying the larger tax, must close its school at the half term, or vote a district tax at an extra cost of at least twenty per cent. for its assessment and collection, or, under the uniform tax, Lone Pine and similar districts will be taxed in its proportion to raise a unnecessary extra $1,000. Of course that plan won't do; to hold an election to vote a tax for the deficiency is often impracticable, never satisfactory, and always expensive. We can conceive of no general law that can give more satisfactory results, in this regard, than one investing the Supervisors with power to lay taxes suited to the needs of the respective districts. Professor Bolander, in this report, suggests several important changes in the school law, but none so far as we have yet observed, that exactly touches the points above refered to, except in the matter of a more equitable apportionment of moneys already provided for. We think something ought to be done to reduce the percentage of answers in certain studies which alone bar many competent teachers for primary schools, which studies can be better spared than the teachers whose exclusion they cause.

True Enough.

If a man can do as well for himself as any Life Insurance Company can do for him—as people sometimes are mistaken enough to assert—then by good reasoning, ten thousand men attempting, each for himself, to construct a railroad to bring his farm nearer to market, can effect as much as the ten thousand combining, and a million drops of water, scattered as dew, can move as much machinery as when united in a stream. No man can procure a single meal without using the help of others. A particular crop fails, in some section, every season; but this is offset somewhere else. Somebody's plans fail every day, but the prosperity of the mass never does; somebody dies prematurely every day, but the mass will surely live out their full time. If a man undertakes to provide for himself, his plans may fail at the last stroke as easily as at the first; or he may die prematurely, and where then are his plans? If he has insured his life, however, the mass take his and do not feel it; what he has failed to do for himself, others do for him.—Ex

The Reddy-Watson Affair.

The Columbus Miner of October 25, has a column purporting to be a true version of the above affair, the sum of which is that E. A. Reddy committed a cold-blooded murder in killing George Watson, whose true name was Bulger Rains; that Reddy shot him merely to see him "squirm," not having had any difficulty of his own with him previously; that Watson, except when in liquor, was a peaceable, inoffensive man; that he had had a misunderstanding with only Constable Stevens, known as "Russian Steve," whom he had been "joshing;" that Watson did not try to hurt the papoose, but was merely trying to play with it; that he nor Lewis did not strike or hurt the Indian at all; that they did not start out to, or say that they would "run the town;" that Watson had not at any time previous to the moment when he invited Russian Steve to come into the street to fight, "so that nobody else would get hurt," exhibited a weapon of any kind; that this was the sixth man Reddy had murdered; that notwithstanding THE INDEPENDENT says that Lewis broke and run, he remained there all the time, but that the Coroner refused him permission to testify; that THE INDEPENDENT's version is false in every particular, "which taken in connection with the statement published in THE INDEPENDENT some time since exculpating certain alleged horse-thieves makes many believe there is a screw loose somewhere in the management of THE INDEPENDENT."

The Miner vouches for the truth of its statements, because they are derived directly from parties lately from Lone Pine, in whom it has the most perfect reliance. We now assert that the reliable informants of The Miner deliberately lied in almost every one of these statements, or else the "reporter" of that paper has misrepresented their reports.

In order to show how much of truth and how much of error there is in the several statements concerning this affair, we shall consider the above in connection with the pettifogger's card published in these columns over Lindsey Lewis' name, and also our own version. In regard to this card we will say first, that it is negatively supported by affidavits of several responsible parties. Two of them certify Lewis' statement to be correct. They make no qualifications. Neither of these men, and but one of the others who certify to its correctness "so far as they heard," were anywhere near the scene of the occurrence—some of them not even in the town. They do not say that they were, but that is the clear inference, whether so intended or not. The one that was present was asleep in the saloon, and when put on the stand disclaimed all knowledge of the principal events of the evening. Our own statement contained several errors in literal or immediate application. We are now certain our informants told the exact truth as near as may be relating to the affair itself and of the antecedents of both Watson and Lewis, extending back for a period of six months or more, but in writing up that account we got the dates and events mixed somewhat. For instance, Lewis says he "didn't shoot any hole or holes in the floor of the saloon." No, he only stood at the door of Begole's saloon, early that morning, and fired two shots in the air in the direct line of the Union Hotel, in the meantime proclaiming himself "Chief." For this little display Constable Stevens, at the point of the pistol, made him give up his revolver and put him under arrest. It was in March last, or about that time, when he shot a hole or holes in the floor of Dan. Williams' saloon. It was also about that time that he and Watson hacked the stage in which they were riding with their bowie knives, and while passing through the streets of Lone Pine fired their pistols in the streets. It was at that time, also, they were arrested by this same Russian Steve, disarmed and fined in the sum of $20. It was at that time that Russian Steve kept a shot-gun convenient for their benefit. It was soon after that, though probably not due to that circumstance, that both left for Columbus. After getting sober, Lewis went to the owner of the stage and offered, and we believe did pay for the damage the pair had done the stage, which was one redeeming act, though it was done to prevent prosecution. In addition to that both were liable to imprisonment for resisting an officer but were let off.

Watson, who was "peaceable and inoffensive when sober," went to gambling in Columbus and other northern towns, during which he won some thousands of dollars from a party in Columbus who, in lieu of the cash gave his note for a balance of some $1,200, which note Watson is said to have had at the time of his death. It is also true that he went to Belmont, got into a fight with a butcher there, to avoid further trouble from which, a friend loaned him the horse which he rode back to this county, the said friend having come here in search of the horse, but so far without success.

Lewis returned some weeks in advance of Watson, and we hear nothing of any misconduct on his part until the morning of the day on which Watson met his death. He had been gambling and drinking on the night previous, and commenced early in the morning proclaiming himself chief and flourishing his revolver, which he soon after fired off as above stated. There being no lock-up, and as he gave his word to behave himself, the constable, Russian Steve, let him go. Here, at this point, we will remark, occurred the circumstances which led us into the statement that Watson was one of the parties concerned in the Cerro Gordo affair of February. Walker, who was one of that party, appeared on the scene at this time, interfering in some manner on Lewis' account, and it was in this connection, as mentioned by our informant, that we wrongly substituted Watson for Walker.

Lindsey Lewis went to the room where Watson was asleep, which adjoined that occupied by several women, and there made use of language of the most obscene character. For this Watson called Steve to account afterwards. That is, for allowing his prisoner to come to his room and use such language. Soon after both Watson and Lewis went to the different saloons, and after the former had got pretty drunk, he addressed himself somewhat in this style to Lewis. "You! you chief; Lindsey, you chief?" and while flourishing his bowie to give force to his remarks, cut a slight wound several inches in length across Lewis' arm.

Later in the day Watson caught an Indian child by the hair and swung it around as a person does in trying to wring a chicken's neck off; he finally sat it on Peterson's counter and proceeded to pour whisky down it. Ned Reddy interferred in behalf of the child, and with very few but earnest words made Mr. Watson desist from his outrageous cruelties to the papoose. Soon afterwards a lady, for whom the mother of this papoose was doing some washing, addressed Watson to know why he had been so brutal. She received in response the most obscene and insulting address from Watson it is possible for a human brute to make use of. This, in connection with Lewis' remarks in Watson's room in the morning, in the hearing of, if not addressed directly to the women in the adjoining room, pretty much sustains our remark of their abuse of persons without regard "to age, sex or condition."

Soon after this event (we believe it was after), Watson saw Indian George standing against Peterson's bar. He said to George, "Your name is Peterson?" "No it is not," was the reply. "You lie, you d—d ——," and catching him by the hair commenced to strike him in the face, saying at each blow and raising his voice finally to a yell, "Peterson! Peterson! Peterson!" This was supposed to be intended for R. L. Peterson, who stood behind the bar at the moment, and whose "heart's blood" Watson had previously and repeatedly said he intended to have. He had told Lindsey Lewis, also, that if he (Lewis) didn't kill Russian Steve he would kill him. He had also stated to more than one person during the day that he was for blood. That either himself, Lewis, Russian Steve or Ned Reddy should be a subject for a funeral before the sun rose the next day, or words to the effect that he intended to kill one of these before he slept.

Early in the morning, and afterwards during the day, Watson had been "joshing" (to use The Miner's words) Steve by threats and insults in reference to a shot-gun Steve had placed behind the bar on this occasion, and also for a similar act in March. During the day, while going from place to place, Lewis and Watson had been boasting of their prowess and ability to manage things to suit themselves, so that peacably disposed persons made it a point as much as possible to avoid all contact with them.

The father of the papoose complained of the treatment of his child, and asked protection. To show the esteem in which Mr. Watson was held, we have it from good authority that several of the best citizens of the town advised the Indian to get his gun and "lay" for Watson, and it is stated as an actual fact that this was exactly what the Indian was doing—waiting with gun in hand for Watson to step outside at the very moment the bullet from another hand gave him his quietus.

About dark or thereabouts Lindsey disappeared from the scene; our informant (in the original account) stated that he "saw no more of him." It was an accidental misstatement or misunderstanding of our own in assuming that he left at the time of the shooting. In the saloon during the evening, Watson's conduct was in keeping with that of the day, though nothing worthy of special remark occurred, except that while leaning across the counter he told Peterson he would have blood before morning, and repeatedly, as if to provoke a fight, and apparently with direct reference to Ned Reddy who was playing billiards, asserted himself the chief and afraid of no man, etc., and in the same strain denouncing the people of Lone Pine and the ranchers of the vicinity, all in terms too vile to repeat.

The "joshing" with Steve (just for fun, of course) finally culminated in an offer from the latter to lay aside his arms and official capacity and go into the street to fight it out. Watson assented and stepped to the door. Steve gave his pistol to Reddy, and had just thrown off his heavy blanket coat, Watson standing at that moment with his revolver drawn to the level of his elbow, with Reddy, Steve and Peterson in his front, the last two almost directly in line, Reddy being a few feet to their right and nearer the center of the room. Watson, though directly concerned with Steve, had asserted several times during the day, as we have before stated, that he would have the life of some one of these three. Steve and Peterson were both unarmed, it may be Watson drew for one of them, but more likely for Reddy, since it is fair to suppose the desperado knew the latter held Steve's pistol. Watson's pistol, however, never reached the full present until he dropped dead with a ball through his temple.

Coroner Lank held an inquest on the following day at which fourteen witnesses were put under oath and each in turn, and in response to the direct question, "Did you or did you not see any person fire the shot that caused the death of deceased," swore postively that they did not.

We had reason to believe that every person in the town of Lone Pine at all cognizant of the circumstances justified the deed. And now we ask on what or whose authority does The Miner come forward and pronounce this "a cold-blooded murder, committed by E. A. Reddy," or any other man? Whatever our own moral convictions may have been as to the identity of the individual who done the shooting, we considered then, after due reflection, and consider now, that we would not be justifiable in assuming to know more than the dozens who were actual eye-witnesses. Let these people on whom The Miner relies so confidently, or anybody else, no matter who, come forward with their testimony if they think they know enough about the circumstances as to justify them in asserting this to have been a cold blooded murder committed by any person in particular.

We will also be pleased if our friend of The Miner will explain for our benefit the connection between our exculpation of the horse-thieves he refers to and the present affair. We will state for his information, that our remarks relating to the horse-thieves appeared not less than two weeks after their case was dismissed the court, and also that they were published in a firm conviction of their truthfulness, and, furthermore, that it was so done without the knowledge, request or perhaps even the desire of any person directly or indirectly concerned in any manner whatsoever.

The Miner, while accusing us of misrepresenting and extenuating actual occurrences, does precisely the same thing but in the opposite direction, and in doing so goes so far beyond as to admit of no comparison. We confidently believe that The Miner man has been victimized by its "reliable" informants and for a very mean purpose.

We have perhaps given this matter more space and time than it is worth, but having done so much we will add a word or two in relation to each of the three prominent actors.

It is certainly untrue that Ned Reddy ever killed six men, as alleged by The Miner. In Sonora, Tuolumne county, some years since he was beset by three men, each of whom he wounded, but none mortally. Three years since (in January 1871) he shot and killed Thomas Dunn in Cerro Gordo. After due examination, the case was dismissed, the killing being pronounced justifiable, upon which point no question, to our knowledge, even in popular rumor, has ever been raised. The Miner can credit him with the taking off of Watson if it chooses.

Watson's real name is Rains. He was an illegitimate son of Calvin Rains, who now lives in Sonoma county. While living with his father a difficulty of some sort between them caused the son to cut his father with an ax, the heinousness of the act being extensively commented upon in the Petaluma papers of the period. Afterwards an affray occurred between him and John Strong in Napa, for which George was arrested and laid in jail for about one year. He is also credited with having killed two brothers named English in a dance house in Napa, but this is possibly an error. When sober he was not considered either a dishonest or particularly dangerous man. When drunk, as he often was, he was violent, quarrelsome and a bad, dangerous man, and in addition to those mentioned, has been a party in numerous other ugly scrapes. Strong, above referred to, was himself killed by one Bromfield, all of the same ilk. It has been a standing prophecy for years, as we are told by persons acquainted with Watson,s history from his childhood, that he would "die with his boots on."

Lindsey Lewis is not considered a bad man, nor criminal in any sense further than in such foolish displays, when in liquor, as those mentioned here, which cover all the allegations of that character against him, so far as we know or have heard.

The Owen's River Trade.

We infer by this from The Bakersfield Courier, November 1, that some unscrupulous Los Angelos people, fearing the loss of the Inyo trade, have been tampering with The Courier man. By keeping him up to the work of advocating a change, with now and then a reference to the Kern and Inyo Forwarding Company, those Los Angelos fellows know they have done all that is necessary for their own security:

Geographical considerations taken in connection with the completed line of railroad up the great southern valley of this State show conclusively that the natural route of this trade is through Kern County. If it is kept out of this channel and retained in the slow circuitous, slow and expensive one via Los Angelos it is effected by means of a constant process of uphill work and straining against the logic of inflexible circumstances. We have the best reason to believe that this is beginning to be severely felt by the parties most directly concerned, and that they are seriously considering some means of bettering themselves which can only be done by looking in this direction. They all admit it must take this route sooner or later, and the question, the more it is considered the more pertinent it becomes, why not submit to the inevitable at once? We believe, from movements now on foot, that there is a disposition to yield to this inexorable logic, and that we have it in our power to materally hasten so desirable a consumation.

We might say much about not only the importance but the growing importance of this trade; how it would stimulate all our interests, agricultural, grazing, mercantile, and even mining, and enhance the value of real estate, were it necessary or were we not pursuaded it is better understood by most of our people than by us.

Sylvania and Lida and Gold Mountain.

[From The Columbus Miner, Nov. 7.]

Mr. R. J. Hubbard, who has been in Columbus for several days past, gives us the following items of news.

SYLVANIA.

Work on the mines has been suspended for the last three or four weeks, the boys being busily engaged builidng houses and making other necessary preparations for thoroughly prospecting their mines during the winter. The mines of this district have all the characteristics of the best lead and silver producing districts of the State, and the natural advantages for reducing ores are unsurpassed. There will probably be smelting works erected within a few months.

LIDA.

The little mill is kept steadily running on rich ores, of which there are an abundance in the surrounding hills. If the mines of this district were thoroughly prospected there would be sufficient ore produced to supply several mills, but the "chloriding" system of mining has been adopted to a great extent, and this class of miners generally keep on ore very near the surface but as surface ore gets "short," deep mining will commence and then the camp will be "on top." The town of Lida is situated in a small valley or flat, the hills surrounding being well timbered and there is an abundance of good water for all purposes. The superior advantages of this camp for reduction works must make it the business centre of southern Esmeralda.

GOLD MOUNTAIN.

Superintendent Frost of the Manhattan company has a number of men employed on their mines with the most flattering prospects. The company intends building a mill shortly.

From S. M. Booker, County Assessor who returned from Lida, yesterday evening, we have the following additional items:

The Lida Mill is now on ore taken from Lida mines.

The mines in Lida and Gold Mountain are all looking well and yielding exceedingly rich ores.

It will be remembered that the Lida Mill was shut down during the months of July and August, in consequence of the law suit. Since the mill has started this time, it has produced $20,000.

The principal circulating medium at this camp is silver bars, having their value stamped on them and varying from $1,50 to $7,00. The method is somewhat inconvenient, but it serves the purpose.

The Manhattan Company are developing their mines at Gold Mountain, which are looking well and assaying up into the thousands. They propose erecting a twenty-stamp mill at Lida for the reduction of their ores from Gold Mountain. These two camps, or districts, will soon be of considerable importance to this county.

Just as Mr. Booker was leaving Lida, he was informed of a dangerous, if not fatal accident. Mr. J. S. Stevens, foreman of the Cinderilla mine fell down the shaft of the mine, a distance of or sixty feet, and was taken out insensible.

—Marshall O'Donnell, when on his dying bed, being asked by the priest if he forgave his enemies, faintly replied: "I haven't any; shot them all."

The Courts.

As all the important business of both the County and District Courts has been postponed until next week, we find nothing of sufficient interest to justify an extended report. Counsel for E. P. Welch moved a continuance of his case until next term, claiming that a witness of vital importance to his welfare was now in Arizona, and could not be got here before that time. The point he wished to prove was that he had received a severe hurt from a horse, and that his physician, Dr. Farnsworth, the witness referred to, had told him he would always be liable to fits of insanity, the same as that he was laboring under when he killed Moore. The continuance was refused. His counsel entered a plea of not guilty as charged. The case comes up on Monday next, a venire for fifty jurors having been issued, who are to come from the lower end of the county.

Come in.

Two deserters from the United States army have already surrendered themselves at Camp Independence under the President's Proclamation. That proclamation (published last week), as we learn by a circular received from the War Department, affects several thousand men now living on this coast. Of these, nearly twenty-five hundred have deserted since 1871 from regiments stationed on this coast. Printed descriptions of all these have been placed in the hands of all Marshals and Deputy Marshals of Districts, Sheriffs, Magistrates and police officers. It would be far better for all deserters to accept this liberal offer than to live in constant fear of arrest and certain punishment.

Narrow Escape.

Mr. H. L. Childs, head sawyer at the Black Rock mill, came very near losing his entire hand a few days since. He was trying to do what all sawyers know to be a dangerous operation, that is, to tighten a nut on the guide while the saw was in motion. The wrench slipped and was caught and cut in two by the teeth, which at the same time inflicted some severe hurts on Childs' fingers, but luckily no permanent injury was inflicted. It was a close call for a full hand, though.

Grand Jury's Report.

The late Grand Jury make a number of commendable recommendations in regard to the jail, taking care of the indigent sick, etc. The principal point in regard to the latter is to devise some method that will prevent persons, able to take care of themselves, from imposing upon the county, as such persons frequently do. The report in full will be found in another place in this issue.

Rebuilt.

Mr. Beaudry has been engaged for some time past in tearing out the old works of his furnace, deepening the foundation some four feet and replacing the works anew. The new furnace is considerably larger than the old one, but we cannot say how much its capacity is supposed to be increased thereby. The change has involved a large amount of labor and expense.

Bullion.

From A. K. Briggs, late from Olanche, we learn that on an average about six large teams load daily at Cartago with bullion, but with the constant accessions from the furnaces the piles are not sensibly diminished. Some 3,000 bars are stacked up there ahead of the teams, besides still greater amounts remaining at the furnaces.

Installation.

The following officers, for Busy Bee Lodge, I. O. G. T., who were elected at the previous meeting, were last night duly installed; W. C. T., John Heckel; W. V. T., George Gill; W. S., Peter Hubig; W. F. S., John Baxter; W. T., Margaret Lewis; W. M., Lulu Lewis; W. I. G., —— Thompson. Quite a number of new members were iniatiated at the last two meetings.

Two Men Killed In Cerro Gordo.

Two Mexicans were shot and instantly killed by a countryman named Antonio Mesa, in Cerro Gordo on the 6th instant. It occurred in this manner: Mesa and one of the men killed, named Miranda, were standing at the bar of Mrs. Moore's dance house; Miranda asked Mesa for five dollars he claimed to be his due. Mesa held a five dollar bill in his hand, which Miranda attempted to grab, and in doing so tore it in two. Mesa told him to come in the street and he would pay him, and, starting out himself, went some distance up the street to the other dance house after his revolver, as it afterwards appeared. Miranda, while standing in the door where the other had left him, saw Mesa returning with his revolver in his hand, at which Miranda drew his revolver and tried to shoot, but his pistol missed fire. Mesa then fired, but missing Mirandi shot an old Mexican, known as "Old Pi," through the head, killing him instantly and immediately firing a second shot sent a ball through Miranda's heart. Mesa was soon after arrested and taken before Justice Van Kleek, with what result we have not yet heard, but he will doubtless be committed for murder. This makes five men shot, four killed outright, in this county in as many weeks.

No Quorum.

The Honorable Board of Supervisors failed to connect this week, the appointed time for the regular term, but one member Mr. Bell, having reported for duty. We do not know that any business more important than action upon accounts due, required attention at this session, but those things of themselves are of considerable importance to parties in interest. It is to be hoped the term will not be allowed to lapse entirely for it upsets public confidence very much, and has bad effects in several ways independent of this matter of bills.

Counsellors.

J. G. Howard, Esq., of Los Angeles, has come up from that place, as counsel for E. P. Welch, under indictment for murder. Mr. Howard is reputed an excellent lawyer, but he has rather a bad case on his hands now to hope for a decided success. Judge Snelling will assist District Attorney Van Decar in the prosecution. Hynes, under assault to commit murder, being unable to hire counsel on his own account, was adjudged counsel by the court, with privilege to make his own selection. He chose P. W. Bennett

But Little Done.

But little business has been done in the District Court during the week, owing to the absence of Mr. Reddy who appears in all the principal civil actions. Finding it impossible to be here in time, he telegraphed a request to opposing counsel in these suits, Bennett & Gregg particularly, to postpone them until next Monday when he expects to be here.

Pastoral Visit.

Elder Nims, accompanied by his estimable lady, arrived last Saturday. He is a popular and able preacher, and he and his lady are always welcome visitors to this portion of his district. After visiting George's Creek and Lone Pine, and transacting the usual quarterly meeting and church business, they started on their return home to Washoe City.

Accident.

A few days since a little son of F. P. Ball, Lone Pine, accidently shot an arrow into his brother's eye, or so near it, as to greatly endanger the sight. It is much to be hoped that the little fellow may be spared the irreparable misfortune of losing his eye, but it is said to be a hopeless case.

Deferred.

Our Lone Pine communication is unavoidably deferred until next week; and in the same connection we may remark that we are also compelled to pass the general news, and some local matters of interest, all for reasons not especially necessary to specify.

Arraigned.

Lindsey Lewis was arraigned in Judge Hannah's court this morning on a charge of misdemeanor in having exhibited a deadly weapon in a rude and threatening manner. At request of counsel, R. B. Snelling, he was given until Monday to plead.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. Pratt will preach at George's Creek at 11 A. M., and in this place at 7 P. M., one week from to-morrow, November 16.

Sold Out.

Mr. Jos. Schalten has sold his farm near the Post to a party whose name we did not learn, and his saloon property to Lafe Gill.

Farm for Sale.

By advertisement elsewhere in this paper, an opportunity is offered any one to purchase a large farm.

Unfortunate.

We think Mr. Earl is to be commiserated—that is, if he does happen to have any schemes on foot worthy of public support or in any manner contingent upon it—Mr. Hardnut, editor of the swamp organ at Bakersfield now comes to his rescue. If common report is to be believed, there is no man in the State who can by his public endorsement as effectually damn a friend, politically or socially, as the gentleman above named. Fortunately for Mr. Earl, who may sometime be among the people of Kern, this henchman of the swamp-landers does not vouch for his moral attributes, hence people who know how to appreciate his indorser, will not deem it so necessary to look after their small valuables when his indorsee is around. Mr. Earl, unless he considers his scheme a forlorn hope, will certainly notify his brother grabbers of Kern to call off their Danite at once or his is a ruined cause. Mr. Hardnut is as much an object of pity as of contempt; he is a tool of unscrupulous masters and can't help himself. For doing their bidding he has to take kicks which are justly theirs—but he stands them well so long as their is a hope of a quarter. We are credibly informed he is a man of large brain, but unfortunately, it was originally dumped in without the least regard to order or decency, those portions representing truth and honesty being entirely left out, and this is why he became the editor of the grabbers' organ, and feels proud to know he has secured enough to sustain life and has yet escaped the Penitentiary. As an editor he is easily biased; a scurrilous bias may be secured for 25 cents cents upwards; political range as high as $240, hence Mr. Hardnut is not at all times dependent upon his masters. The favorite method over there to ruin a man politically or socially is to purchase Mr. Hardnut's cordial bias in that adversary's favor. Within the limited sphere of the organ this plan rarely fails to throw a fatal suspicion on the object of its praises, so, in political times especially, Mr. Hardnut enjoys considerable revenue from this source. Mr. Earl is a friend of Mr. Hardnut and also very thick with Mr. Hardnut's masters, the noted grabbers of that region, and this fact renders it difficult to account for the appearance in their organ of the following masterly effort, unless it is that they have turned traitors to their late pal and want to ruin his chances in Kern, or their Danite has, for a consideration, done the entire gang. Much as we are opposed to Mr. Earl, we'll swear we had no hand in securing Mr. Hardnut's aid to bust him out or belittle him in this manner. It is too mean a plan for us to adopt, because it hurts him among respectable people not directly concerned. Here is the unkind thing:

Mr J. Earl eliminates himself through The Inyo Independent of the 25th ult., in regard to the Swamp Land Law. His article, occupying little more than a column, is extremely able logical, [those pulpy brains!] and cleverly and concisely written. He proposes to apply for the segregation of certain [cultivated] lands in that county as swamp lands, believing, if they are so set off it will result not only to the advantage of [grabbers] those by whom they are held and occupied [advantage same as giving dollars coin for dollars scrip] but to that of the county generally. This position he establishes by [assertions] statements so plausible and well put as to appear, if not impossible at least extremely difficult to controvert [hear an ass bray!]. Nevertheless, the editor of The Independent seems to feel himself competent to the task, and approaches it through three columns and a half of his paper, culminating and closing this prodigious preiminary effort, with the two following portentious sentences that must have had a paralyzing, terryfying effect on Mr. Earl. He says:

"This snake must be scotched." We are forced to forego further remark for the present, but as investigation is asked for, this is not the conclusion.

We have read this opening phillipic carefully through, and venture to express the opinion that he has probably scared Mr. Earl much more effectually than he has succeeded in proving his scheme a bad one for either the individual or collective interests of the people of Inyo. In fact, we are either ther so dull, or he is so unfortunate in the use of language, that we absolutely fail to collate either one valid or tangible objection, argument or even an idea, out of the whole mass of incoherent words spread out before us. In fact, we are about forced to the conclusion, after having been long an attentive and amused reader of The Independent, that the editor thereof is a "conspicuous failure" whenever he attempts anything of a higher grade in literary execution than the simplest and plainest relation of facts in a local item comprised of the fewest and simplest incidents. *

We give place to the above merely to show to what expedients a hireling editor is compelled to resort while making a pretense of earning his ill-gotten wages in trying to bolster nefarious schemes and schemers. But the poor soul is as much to be pitied for his paucity of ideas and unenviable position, as condemned for lack of principle. He seems not to appreciate the fact that years of agueish struggles have reduced that large brain to a pulpy state, and that he is so nearly a gibbering idiot that he has to resort to identically the same words and phrases in his every "argument" with his contemporaries. His respectable friends (if he has any) dare not offer him a word of advice for fear his public acknowledgments might be their ruin.

Report of Grand Jury.

To the Honorable the County Court of the County of Inyo, State of California:

Your Grand Jury for the November term of your Honorable Court, having completed their labors, respectfully report the result thereof.

We have examined two charges for the crime of murder, and have found one true bill of indictment for that offense. We have found one true bill of indictment for the crime of an assault to commit murder. We have found one true bill of indictment for exhibiting a deadly weapon in a rude and angry and threatening manner. We have ignored one charge for the crime of murder. We have examined the county jail, and find two prisoners confined therein. We find the jail kept in a neat and cleanly manner, and the prisoners properly cared for so far as the nature of the rooms will permit. We find the iron floors in the cells cold and uncomfortable, and recommend that they be covered with plank. We also find the ventilation of the cells to be insufficient, and recommend that steps be taken to improve the same.

We have examined the books of the several county officers and find them kept in compliance with law. We also find the cash on hand to tally with the Treasurer's book, the amount being $8,284 49. We would respectfully call the attention of the County Judge, County Auditor and the County Treasurer to the provisions of sections 4,154, 4,220, 4,221 and 4,222 of the Political Code of the State of California.

We would also recommend that the Board of Supervisors make more economical arrangements for the care of the indigent sick of the county; and we further recommend that no one be received at the hospital at the county's expense until they have filed with the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors an affidavit, taken before some qualified magistrate, that they are sick, without means and unable to take care of themselves.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. B. Curtis,
Foreman.

Independence, Nov. 6, 1873.

Lida Valley.

A Lida Valley correspondent, writing under date of November 3, furnishes these items:

The Horse-racing season is about over in this place. A race was made between the roan and Stonewall, for $1,000 (one horse was bet against the other and they were valued at $500 each) the trainer of the roan being fearful of being left on foot, attempted to "dope" Stonewall, was caught in the act, and that night he with the roan started East where all fine running horses are congregated, so ended this race. Next a forty year old colt was matched against a 3 year old colt imported by L. Lasky of Lone Pine. This race was won by the 3 year old. This ended the races during the day.

On last Tuesday I. S. Stevens underground foreman for Messrs Hiskey & Walker started up the shaft on a ladder with some tools in one hand; when 35 feet from the bottom he lost his hold and fell to the bottom, badly bruising his back, hips, arms and legs; no bones broken. Two men were at work in the bottom at this time; he came in contact with Hoteby's (alias Tennessee) shoulders as he was stooping over at the time, but not injuring him in the least. This undoubtedly saved Stevens from being smashed to pieces, and as it is, it will be some time before he will be able to get around.

Last night one —— Davis (who is playing "Irving" by accusing himself as being one of the party who shot and killed one Edwards in Utah this Summer), got tired of the camp, concluded to leave went into the stable of Messrs. Hiskey & Walker and helped himself to a horse, saddle and bridle. In leaving he lost his way and came back through town just after day light, and started in a northeast direction on the trail to Montezuma. Mr. Walker started in pursuit some forty minutes behind and overhauled him about 8 miles out. Davis had a Sharp's repeater and a pistol; looking around he noticed something in his pursurer's right hand; he jumped off the horse and threw up his hands. On returning to camp he expressed a desire to go to Big Pine thence to Cerro Gordo. He was allowed to emigrate. It is not necessary to give a description of him as your Sheriff will soon make his acquaintance.

Lida.

The Polar Bear.

The bear of the Arctic regions does not hug like other bears, but bites at his opponent; and he declines to eat his captive until life is quite extinct. Like a cat, he plays with his victim. Among the Esquimaux of Greenland he plays strange pranks, often creeping upon the hunters when busy fencing a seal, and tapping him on the shoulder with his powerful paw. It is then the unfortunate man's cue to feign death, so that when Brownie retreats a few steps to enjoy the prospect of his entended meal, the gun can be got ready before he returns again to the attack.

—A school committee in Illinois brought charges against one of the local teachers, the specifications of which are as follows; "1. Immoirality; 2. Parshality; 3. Keeping disordly schoal; 4. Carrying unlafle weepings." The man who wrote this charge intends to keep the "schoal" himself next session.

A Monopolist Interviewed

The New York Herald has interviewed the chief of monopolists, Commodore Vanderbilt. The account of it is highly amusing because of the assumed contemptuous indifference of the Commodore to anything Western farmers can do. Possibly, some day he may be brought to a truer estimate of the "Granger Movement." There is an old proverb to the effect that a sure way of getting beaten is to despise one's enemies. Some day the Commodore may see the force of it. Says The Herald:

Our commissioner ushered himself in and announced to the Commodore that the business was to interview him on on the Granger movement, and learn his opinion of its probable effect on the great competing railroads.

"The Granger movement!" said the Commodore. "What the Devil is that?"

"The Farmer's movement out West," responded The Herald man.

"Well, I dont know anything about it. Haven't paid any attention to it."

"It is a movement against the railroad corporations, Commodore, and I should think you would know all about it."

"But I don't. I never read one of their articles. They are down on the railroads, are they?"

"It seems so. They complain generally of high and exacting tariffs, too much special legislation, and of various privileges enjoyed by railroads and used for purposes of extorting unfair prices from farmers."

"They do, eh?" said the Commodore, knocking the ashes from his cigar. "Well, as to special legislation, I agree with them. If they are in favor of making only general railroad laws, I'll be willing to back 'em. Further than that I don't care what in the devil they do. The Central can hold its own."

"I suppose you will be able to secure bread and meat even if the farmers succeed in all their demands?"

"I might subsist somehow. But as to general railroad legislation, I'll be willing to do anything the other railroads have to do. 'No special legislation' is my cry as well as the farmers'. They have already specially legislated me into carrying passengers for two cents a mile when other roads charge three."

"Why has a special distinction been made against you?"

"Oh, I suppose there are reasons. The Lord knows what they are. The farmers didn't do it, you understand. But I don't know anything about this—what did you call it—Granger question. You see I don't think I can be of no service to you there, sir."

"Then pray tell me if prices have been affected any by the movement, prices of transportation?"

"I don't know really. The farmers complain of charges for local transportation, of something or other of that sort. But I hardly ever attend very closely to railroad matters nowadays. If farmers are opposed to special legislation, all right, The Central can stand anything the other railroads will. Let 'em give us general railroad legislation, and after that I don't care what they do. So you see I don't know enough to be of any service to you."

Living in High Altitudes.

The higest inhabited spot in the world is the Buddhist cloister of Hanle (Thibet), where twenty priests live, at the enormous height of 16,500 feet. There are other cloisters at a nearly equal hight, which are inhabited all the year round, in the province of Guari Khorsum, upon the banks of the lakes Monsarour and Bakous. In these equatorial regions one can live easily for ten or twelve days at an altitude of 18,000 feet, but not for a longer time. In August, 1855, the brothers Schlagintweit, exploring the glaciers or the Ibi Gamin in Thibet, encamped for ten days at these elevations, which are rarely reached by a human being. At first they suffered a good deal at 17,000 feet, but gradually became accustomed to 19,000. In 1856 they ascended as high as 24,339—the highest altitude man has ever reached on land. The hightest inhabited point in America is the post house of Ape, in Peru, 14,377 feet. Potosi, in Bolivia, which has a population of 100,000, is 13,323 feet high. The highest land in America is the Aconcagua, in Chili, 22,422 feet. But this is only a baby peak compared with the Gaurisankar (Himalaya), 29,003.

A Moral Pointed with Thistle Seeds.

A story is told of a woman who freely used her tongue to the scandal of others, and made confession of what she had done. The confesssor gave her a ripe thistle-top, and told her to go out in various directioni and scatter the seeds, one by one. Wondering at the penance, she obeyed, and then returned and told her confessor. To her amazement, he bade her go back and gather the scattered seeds; and when she objected that it would be impossible, he replied that it would be still more difficult to gather up and destroy all evil reports which she had circulated about others.

—The following queer advertisement is from The London Times: "KANGAROO—Any portion of the leopard or the boar would do, or part of the pig, but abstain from the leopard's heart and the parts next to it; for the caudle will not be out then. The lion is too savage to be tamed. Don't forget the baboon's biscuits."

—"My dear doctor," said an Irishman, "it's no use your giving me an emetic. I tried it twice in Dublin, and it would not stay on my stomach five minutes."

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABLE, FREE FROM ALCOHOL

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

Vinegar Bitters.

No Person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittant Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most Wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Eviction.

Charles Bradlaugh, in a late speech, gave the following account of an eviction he once witnessed in Ireland:

Did you ever see an eviction? I have. In my checkered life I have been a private soldier, and between 1849 and 1850 I was in the County Cork, stationed at Ballancholly. Those of you who are Irishmen will want no description of that beautiful valley of the Lee which winds between the hills from Cork, and in Summer seems like a very paradise, green grass growing to the water's side, and burnished with gold in the morning, and ruddy to a very crimson in the evening sunset. I was one of a troop to protect the law officers, who had come with the agent from Dublin to make an eviction a few miles from Inniscarra, where the River Bride joins the Lee. It was a miserable day, the rain freezing into sleet as it fell—and the men beat down wretched dwelling after dwelling—some thirty or forty, perhaps. They did not take much beating down; there was no flooring to take up; the walls were more mud than aught else, and there was but little trouble in the leveling of them to the ground. We had got our work about three parts done, when out of one of them a woman ran and flung herself on the ground wet as it was, before the captain of the troop, and she asked that her house might be spared—not for long, but for a little while. She said her husband had been born in it, he was ill of the fever, but could not live long, and she asked that he might be permitted to die in it in peace. Our captain had no power; the law agent wanted to get back to Dublin—his time was of importance, and he could not wait; and and that man was carried out while we were there—in front of us, while the sleet was coming down—carried on a wretched thing—you would not call it a bed—and he died there while we were there. And three nights afterward, while I was sentry on the front gate at Ballancholly Barracks, we heard a cry, and when the guard was turned out we found this poor woman there a raving maniac, with one dead babe in one arm, and another in the other, clinging to the cold nipple of her lifeless breast. And if you had been brothers to such a woman, sons of such a woman, fathers of such a woman, sons of such a woman, would not rebellion have seemed the holiest gospel you could hear preached?

A Noble Sacrifice.

Among the first who hastened to the relief of the Shreveport sufferers was a beautiful young lady of Philadelphia, who was willing to brave even the terror of death to give aid and comfort to the helpless victims of the terrible scourge. She was Agnes, the daughter of a retired naval officer, deceased, and was adopted by S. and Agnes Arnold, of Philadelphia, when scarcely three years old. At Shreveport her noble bravery and devotion gained for her the title of Angel Agnes. One night while walking with a sick child in her arms, she fell down a stairway, and fractured her spine, and died in great agony. Only a few days previous, her intended husband who had followed her to Shreveport, died with the fever. Both bodies will be brought to Philadelphia for burial.—

A Virginia Lady.

A veteran of the war thus sketches a Virginia lady: "She was six feet long, with an ugly angular face, the color of putty. Her nose was long and thin. Her mouth was like a gash in a frost-bitten squash; flopping open it revealed three long front teeth, blackened with smoke and calomel. On each temple were three little flat, blue blue colored curls, which seem to have been made and put there under the pressure of a ton to the inch. She had no other hair or hairs on her head. A black clay pipe, with a long clay stem, was held tightly upside down between her snags. Her eyes resembled two large pewter buttons dipped in lard. Her frame was the only thing she retained of what may once have been a good sized body."

—Young folks grow most when in love. It increases their sighs wonderfully.

"Bloody Morris"

[From The Tulare Times, Oct. 25.

Little "Bloody" Morris—as he was called in Visalia, where he lived a long time, prior to 1861—has been creating quite a sensation in San Francisco by imprisoning witnesses in a case against the master of a ship charged with cruelty to seamen, by marching them through the streets heavily ironed, depriving them of food and otherwise treating them in an outrageous manner. We think Morris is a bad egg. While in Visalia his character certainly admitted of great improvement. From what we learn he was known as a disreputable sort of a bully, who gambled, got drunk, had many rows, killed a man or two, among them Shannon, a former editor of The Delta' assisted in intimidating others by hanging them until nearly dead, when they complied with his wishes, and who was always ready to cut or shoot somebody when he had the best of it, although there is plenty of testimony to show that he lacked bravery and wouldn't fight when he tackled a man he couldn't scare, and who "went for him," when he tried to run one of his bluffs. This was instanced particularly in one case where he assailed a peaceful man, but was knocked down and begged "like a dog," In business he was a kind of one-horse pettifoging lawyer. At the outbreak of the war he was in San Francisco without money character or friends. He resolved patriotically to sacrifice himself on the altar of his country, in her hour of need. He did so by working into the martyr's position of Quartermaster, three thousand miles from the scene of danger. He was naturally shrewd and stuck strictly to business and the close of the conflict found him worth several hundred of thousands of dollars in Government greenbacks. He was now rich and could command political influence. President Grant—a soldier himself, ever mindful of the interests of our country's brave defenders, rewarded his meritorious services in the hour of peril by appointing him U. S. Marshal for the State of California. Thus patriotic virtue finds its reward at the hands of grateful Republics. This recent exhibition on the part of Morris has called forth biting criticism from the press all over the State, and it may be that the pressure will be so great that General Grant will remove "Bloody" from the high position now made luminous by his occupancy thereof.

"All Hands Below"

The New York Christian Union tells this story:

A good story is told of a parrot who had always lived on board a ship, but who escaped at one of the southern ports, and took refuge in a church. Soon afterwards the congregation assembled, and the minister commenced preaching to them in his earnest fashion, saying there was no virtue in them—saying that every one of them would go to an endless perdition unless they repented. Just as he spoke the sentence, up spoke the parrot from his hiding place:

"All hands below!"

To say that "all hands" were startled would be a mild way of putting it. The peculiar voice and unknown source had much more effect upon them than the parson's voice ever had. He waited a moment and then, a shade paler, he repeated the warning.

"All hands below!" again rang out from somewhere.

The preacher started from his pulpit and looked anxiously around, inquiring if anybody had spoken.

"All hands below!" was the only reply, at which the entire panic stricken congregation got up, and a moment afterward they all bolted for the doors, the preacher trying his best to get there first, and during the time the mischievous bird kept up his yelling:

"All hands below!"

There was one old woman present who was lame, and could not get out so fast as the rest, and in a short time was left entirely alone. Just as she was about to hobble out the parrot flew down, and alighting on her shoulder, yelled in her ear:

"All hands below!"

"No, no, Mr. Devil!" shrieked the old woman, "you don't mean me. I don't belong here. I go to the other church over the way"

Sentenced to Death.

Pablo Martinez who was found guilty of the murder of Charles White at Malloch's brewery, sometime last May, was sentenced to be hung at Visalia on Friday, the 5th day of December. The result of this trial will somewhat restore confidence in our courts as a means of punishing criminals. It may in fact be looked upon as a response to the sentiment of our people as recently expressed at the polls. The jury were an intelligent set of men, but no more so than most others, with perhaps one or two exceptions in each. The evidence of his guilt was clear. His attorney made an eloquent appeal in his behalf. Setting forth his friendless condition among a people of another language; prejudiced, and unable to make others understand or to be himself understood. —Visalia Delta.

—A school committee in Illinois brought charges against one of the local teachers, the specifications of which are as follows; "1. Immoirality; 2. Parshality; 3. Keeping disordly schoal; 4. Carrying unlafle weepings." The man who wrote this charge intends to keep the "schoal" himself next tession.

The Benicia Boy.

John C. Heenan, who died a short time since on the cars while coming to this State to recuperate his shattered health, formerly resided at Yreka. In speaking of him The Union of that place remarks: He seemed to grow as one looked at him, till his tall, symmetrical form towered like that of Saul, a head and shoulders above his fellows. Though conscious that he possessed a giant's strength, he was not much disposed then to use it like a giant. One night however, Jimmy Smith, and Sam Bantea, Yreka, having some grudge against the "Boy," determined to "punish him." When they were all together with him in the old Challenge saloon, one of them stepped suddenly to the door, locked it, took out the key and threw it under a billiard table. This precaution was taken so that the "Boy" should not escape the punishment they had predetermined to give him, by flight. Not having been present we will not attempt a description of the battle that ensued. It is sufficient to say that on the next morning the "Boy" was on the street without a scratch, while those of his assailants who put in an appearance looked as if they had just returned from a Donnybrook Fair. They generally regretted that they had taken the precaution to cut off the "Boy's" retreat by locking the door and throwing away the key.

Uses of Paper.

Singularly enough, The Iron Age argues that paper is to become the general, if not the universal substitute for wool, leather and india rubber, as also, to some extent, for copper, tin and zinc, and that even iron is not adapted to uses so widely various—it being practicable indeed, to bring paper pulp to such a state of toughness and solidity, by pressure, as to be almost fire proof and indestructible as iron, and thus our railroad cars may be made of paper, instead of iron, thereby preventing the dangers now incurred in case of accidents. It is claimed that, in proportion to its weight paper is probably the strongest material known, combining more perfectly than any other substance the qualaties of strength, lightness, flexibility, durability and cheapness. So many and various, too, are the articles which can be made, that it can be manufactured in quantities practically unlimited in every civilized country, and as long as plants continue to grow, paper manufacture will be sustained. It is, also, under all circumstances, an easy material to work and handle. The fact is probably well known that the paper wheels which have been used with success on some of the palace-cars are formed of compressed paper fitted into a steel tire; iron plates are then adapted to each side of the paper and bolted together so as to prevent displacement of the filling.

Circular.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE PACIFIC, San Francisco, Cal., June 2, 1873.

The following communication from the War Department is published for the information of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Adjutant General's Office, Washington, May 23, 1873.

SIR: You are respectfully informed that THE INYO INDEPENDENT, a weekly newspaper published at Independence, Inyo county, California, has been placed on the advertising list of the War Department. Please notify the officers of your command accordingly.

Very Respectfully, Your Obedient Servant.

E. D. TOWNSEND, Adjutant General.

To the Commanding General Military Division of the Pacific.

By order of Maj.-Gen. Schofield.

I. C. KELTON, Assistant Adjutant General.

Illinois.

Returns in regard to the Illinois election show that only eight counties remain to be heard from, and that 49 of the counties already heard from have been carried by the Farmers or Anti-Monopolists, 15 by the regular Republican organization, and 17 by the Democrats. In 13 counties, including Cook, which embraces Chicago, the issue was foreign to party politics. Of the eight counties remaining, six have been Democratic and two Republican. The Farmers or Anti-Monopolists have opposed both of the old parties in the late campaign.

Silver and Greenbacks.

The United States Treasury has recently purchased a quantity of silver bullion sufficient to pay out five dollars of it on every check presented for payment. The government paid 112½ cents per standard ounce, and one ounce when coined makes 124 and 4-10 cents, being a difference of 10½ per cent. discount on silver. Legal tenders are worth buying 93, selling 93¾; silver coin is worth, buying 89½, selling 90, showing that a dollar in legal tenders is worth 3½ cents more than a dollar in silver.

Cuba.

The steamer Virginius was captured a short time since by the Spanish authorities in Cuba and a number of her crew immediately executed. It seems to be doubtful whether the Virginius at the time of her capture was an American steamer or not, and consequently whether entitled to protection under our flag. But a war vessel has been ordered to Cuban waters, and great indignation is manifested in New York. The Cuban Junta in that city is fitting out a heavy expedition to revenge the outrage.

Pre-Emption Laws to be Repealed.

In his annual report, Commissioner Drummond renews his recommendation for the repeal of the Pre-emption Land Laws. He is more than ever satisfied, by the experience of last year, that these laws afford means to speculators to secure lands, in direct opposition to the land policy of the Government, and that they are a cover for the commission of many frauds.

Land Decision.

Commissioner Drummond, by an order addressed to the Register and Receiver at this Land Office, decides the contested land case between M. Presciado and H. P. Garland, in favor of Garland. This is in accordance with technical law without doubt, but technical law is not always justice by a long shot.

The McGarrahan Claim.

This famous suit—the New Idria mining suit—came up before Judge Belden in San Jose on the 3d instant. Patterson and Brooks who were up here as opposing counsel in the San Felipe suit, are both engaged in the New Idria suit, and are on the same side.

A Live Paper.

The new paper at Los Angeles' The Herald, now issues a daily and weekly. The latter is a fine looking paper, and the largest in the southern part of the State. The Herald company and editors are displaying a great deal of energy and ability too, in the "get up" of their paper.

Died.

The widow of Gen. Robert E. Lee died at Richmond, Virginia, on the 6th instant. Mrs. Lee was 67 years of age. The business of the city was entirely suspended, and many places were draped in mourning on the day of the burial.

LAND MONOPOLY.

For some time past The Sacramento Record has been compiling tables showing the real extent of the land monopolies of this State. That paper said, when its list reached Kern county, that the exhibit was the most startling yet made. In that county thirteen persons own the enormous amount of 487,908 acres, and twenty persons, not one of whose farms is less than 2,000 acres, own an aggregate of 552,708 acres! To illustrate the beauties of this system (the same identically that Mr. Earl and his confreres wish to fasten upon this county, even in a more sweeping proportion), The Record finds that all the farming machinery in Kern county is set down at the pitiful sum of $14,000, and the area of improved land (only a portion of it in actual cultivation) at but 9,000 acres; and only this in a total of over half a million acres embracing large, quantities of the best lands in the State, all belonging to a baker's dozen of persons. The Record says:

> Surely these figures must be regarded as convincing proofs of the reality and the pernicious effects of that land monopoly which has grown into such enormous proportions throughout the State. These facts regarding Kern are worse even than those of Colusa, and we have not examined some of the counties in which land monopoly is now rife. But it is already apparent that against such an obstacle as this, ordinary methods of progress are powerless. What is the use of inviting people to come and settle down in the State, when wherever they turn they are confronted by the land speculator or the land monopolist? * * * The scheme of land distribution which has been proceeding for so many years, and which has reached the pitch of monopoly we see, is in all essentials utterly repugnant to the theory of republicanism, and not only repugnant in theory, but hurtful and destructive in practice. California today stands in the singular position of a State which was admitted into the Union on the express principle of opposition to slavery, yet which has contrived to blunder into a line of action which could not have been better calculated to build up a slave State had it been the carefully matured plan of some far-seeing Southern politician.

All the papers that come to this office, save that published by our extremely honest (?) and talented (?) admirer, Mr. Hardnut, of the swamp organ at Bakersfield, are loud in their condemnation of this gigantic evil. Among the leading papers thus expressing themselves, we have The Record and Union at Sacramento, The Chronicle and Bulletin at San Francisco, The Chronicle at Virginia, Nevada, and many others. The San Francisco Chronicle says:

> These lands have been assessed at a merely nominal figure, scarcely more than would be put upon an alkali desert, yet they are among the richest in our State, and cannot be purchased for less than from ten to twenty dollars per acre.

The Union, in the same connection, remarks:

> It has been a standing disgrace to republican institutions here that the land monopolists and the usurers, who have done so much to retard the general prosperity and to turn aside from California the profitable and desirable current of Eastern immigration, have lived under a virtual exemption from taxes on their vast estates, while as a logical consequence of this exemption of their property, that of the small farmer, the mechanic, and the common people generally, has been sorely overburdened to maintain the government.

Says the Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle:

> To the people—to the great body of the working farmers—it is as bad as if the land had no existence, and to the State it is worse. A State of "magnificent distances," with but little land cultivated and only slight taxes from the acres that are kept from cultivation, it is not a matter of surprise that the population is sparse and that the revenue from her lands is small in amount. The State needs thousands of farms to be made upon the land that is now monopolized and held in a position such as to render it almost unproductive.

And to recur again to The Record, we find this expressive and truthful remark:

> Land stealing has for years been carried on without let or hindrance in California, and while intending settlers have too frequently been baffled in their honest efforts to obtain cultivable land, speculating swindlers, operating through perjury and fraud of the blackest kind, have been assisted in monopolizing the most valuable portion of the country. Clearly there ought to be a remedy for this condition of things, and clearly a remedy must be found before the State can hold her own again.

So far, our county has escaped the chief curse of the State. If we are true to ourselves it ever will, but the grabbers are abroad—right in our own midst—and unless we as a people exert ourselves to choke them off—gently, but firmly—our days of freedom from this undeniable curse are numbered. It needs no facts nor figures to satisfy any thinking man (we will except those who take personal stock, and there are several of these,) that the consummation of these impending grabs, whether by virtue of, or in the face of existing laws, will prove an unmitigated evil to every interest of the county. We defy these men to name one single paramount gain to follow the accomplishment of their plans. Will it increase the productions of the lands to the extent of a single blade of grass? Support another head of stock? Induce another settler to make this his home? Will it give us a railroad or any public improvement? Will it increase our tax receipts, or will it not have exactly the reverse effect? Will it not decrease the number, or, what amounts to the same thing, increase the cost of the maintenance of the live stock now finding free subsistence? Will it cheapen the price of those lands to the poor man seeking a home? Lessen the cost of living to the miner in the adjacent mountains? Will it result in any public good whatever?

We believe that the answer to these questions, coming from every honest, disinterested man, or rather from any one not directly identified with the grab, will in every instance be unfavorable to so gross an outrage. We might go further, and say tha we know that the sentiment of this county is immovably, with the exceptions named, against the grab and the grabbers. But this fact of itself does not remove the danger. It requires ony the testimony of these few exceptions to fasten the evil upon us. If the testimony is strictly true, and the laws are administered according to their ral meaning and intent, we have but litle or nothing to fear, but the experience of other portions of the State of California is proof enough that we must not sit down and calmly trust to such desperate chances—we will be swamped literally if we do.

We are told that W. S. Powell has signified his willingness to withdraw his sweeping application. He will do well to do it. He also wishes it distinctly understood that he is not directly concerned with Mr. Earl. Mr. Earl says the same in regard to Mr. Powell. It don't matter. Whatever promotes the chances of one does as much for the other. We are also toll that Mr. Powell narrowly escaped indictment for perjury at the hands of the late Inyo Grand Jury. He will not, if he persists, escape so easily next time, let what will come of such action. It was none the less a false oath whether he did or did not know that valid adverse claims pertained to so much of the lands he swore were not thus encumbered. We think it wil be demonstrated yet that poor men have some rights speculators are bound to respect. If the incoming Legisature is not wholly recreant to the trust reposed in it, land monopolists especially will find their successful grabs at end in this State.

Another Earthquake.

At 48 minutes past 6 o'clock last evening there was a right smart shock of earthquake. The vibration appeared to come from the southeast. The shock was not violent enough to scare anybody, but was plainly perceptible causing windows to rattle and lamps to shake. The tin roof on this office played a lively rattle, causing the roller boy to turn a double handspring through the sash of the back window. the pressman stood agast, as if paralized, and has not yet recovered; the most youthful of our compositors disappeared suddenly through the front door and has not since been seen; it is feared he has fallen down some old shaft. A dispatch from Unionville states that a shock was felt at that place at 6:45 last evening—three minutes earlier than it was fet here. The Virginia Enterprise says we have fallen upon earthquake times, as several shocks were felt there on the evening of the 5th inst; and predicts that we are likely to have some lively quakes before long. We should like to hear from Inyo county, California, as it is probable the shocks have occurred there with more violence than here, as it is said to be an "earthquake" country. —Reese River Reveille Nov. 8.

You must think we are durn fools down here to pay any attention to such things as these. However, we didn't have any of any sort at that time, with thanks all the same. Played out.

Compulsory Education.

The Los Angeles Star has been furnished a translation of the following editorial remarks on the educational question from our Spanish cotemporary, The Chronica, of the 5th inst:

"We are informed that the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State in his coming report to the Governor, will recommend and advocate the adoption of a compulsory system of education for all the children of the State regardless of color or race. It appears that only 36 per cent. of the children of foreign parentage, and particularly those of Catholic belief and pagans, ever assist at the public schools, and that the security and well being of society demand a change in this respect. In as much as we are ardent advocates for the dissemination of instruction on perfect equality, convinced that universal education will be the result, and that this at no very remote period will bring in its train universal happinesss to all humanity, we cannot do less than rejoice at the determination of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and we hope that he will be able to carry the same into effect as soon as possible. No one has a right to be ignorant when the means are afforded for his instruction by the State, particularly when such ignorance must be dangerous to the happiness of society and the safety of the State."

The Reno Fire.

The total number of buildings burned by the fire at Reno, Nev., is 99, principally business houses. The loss will foot up fully $150,000, with very little insurance; probably $15,000 or $20,000 will cover the amount.

Bear this in Mind.

If you want your son to stay at home, don't bear too hard on the grindstone when he turns the crank.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS.

Prof. Bolander, in an article entitled "Compulsory Education," in the November number of The California Teacher, in showing the increased popularity of the public school system, says that in "eight short years the attendance at private schools has decreased 21.08 per cent.; 15,294 children, in a total of 141,610, have been transferred from private schools to public schools. No greater tribute can be paid to the popularity of our public school system."

But notwithstanding this, the educational interest for the State has a gloomy outlook, as shown by the heavy percentage of non-attendance and truancy combined, which more than equals one-third (37 per cent.) of all the census children enrolled. He concludes that the only remedy lies in a legislative enactment that will compel attendance; that it is the duty of the State to compel every parent to bestow upon his children at least the education which the State places within his reach—and we believe such is the sentiment of a very large proportion of all those who believe that education forms the only secure foundation and bulwark of republican government.

But before any compulsory law is enacted, the present school revenue law needs a thorough overhauling, for as the Professor says, "its inadequacy and disabilities have never pressed more heavily upon our public schools than at present."

The school law for 1870 empowered Boards of Supervisors to levy district (deficiency) taxes, to be assessed and collected by the county officers, and placed to the credit of the district in which the tax was raised. The Supreme Court, however, declared this law to be unconstitutional because the tax was assessed by an Assessor not elected in the district in which the tax was to be raised. This system of making up deficiencies was at once discontinued, but as an offset the general county tax for school purposes was somewhat increased. As this and the State money has to be apportioned to each district according to the number of its children, without reference to its tax values, a very marked injustice is entailed, not only as between districts in the same county, but between the several counties of the State. Colusa county, for example, has over half a million more of taxable property than Contra Costa, and contributes to the general school fund in the same proportion, but Contra Costa receives in return nearly $2 to $1 for Colusa. The same state of facts can be shown between districts in the same county. From the working of the present system of apportionment it happens that one district in a county may in the course of a few years accumulate a surplus of several thousand dollars, though maintaining a full term school all the time, while all the rest of the districts have hard work to keep up half or one-third term schools. Such instances are pointed out in the Professor's report. We have illustrations in kind, but on a more limited scale, right here in our own county.

The question is to devise some system of apportionment of State and county school moneys that will nearly approximate justice to all. The thinly populated and outlying counties like Inyo are the greatest sufferers, the districts in the same holding the same relation to each other in this respect that the county does to other counties. The apparent injustice to Colusa is somewhat compensated in the fact that the disproportion between it and Contra Costa is owing to the fact that nearly one-half its entire area susceptible of cultivation is owned by not exceeding ten men, who thus prevent its occupation by families interested in schools. These lands are very valuable and capable of sustaining an immense population, and if taxed anywhere near their full value, as they are not, the disproportion between it and Contra Costa would be twice doubled perhaps, and yet, if paid by actual settlers, in the common meaning and acceptance of that term, it would receive back its full share of that paid in the support of schools. As it is, it is the few small owners scattered through the county who are the real losers by the present state of affairs in that and all other similarly situated counties. While such a state of affairs as we know exist in Colusa, San Joaquin and some other counties makes it impossible to devise a system of apportionment of school money that will do justice to the poorer families in each, there remains a hope of more equal justice in counties where no such land system effectually bars a a numerous school population. Extensive land ownerships in Inyo interpose no bar to population, and consequently to schools, and if we as a people are true to ourselves it never will, because such ownerships will never be allowed

As an improvement on the present method of apportioning State and county school money, it is proposed to allow a teacher for every hundred census children or fraction thereof, each teacher or district to be allowed an equal share of the money, whether with few or many children, within certain limits of area. This is on the principle that it costs no more to maintain a large than a small school. This would do away with the present pro rata allowance for each child, and put the small districts, which stand, as a general thing, in the greatest need of help, on an equal footing with the largest. At present it is those best able to take care of themselves that are especially favored with outside assistance. This proposed plan is certainly a good one, and we hope it may be adopted. It, however, cannot remove all the difficulties in the way of free education in outlying, sparsely settled districts like our own. Good teachers can be obtained for $500 for eight months in the older and more thickly settled countries, and by the present pro rata system, the State and county money is quite enough to pay it. Here, for the same period, owing to the greater traveling and living expenses, a good teacher can rarely be obtained for less than $900. The new plan we will suppose will give each district at least $500, or enough for a half term in every district without a special tax.

The adoption of some rule of law permiting the levy and collection of district taxes without having to resort to the obnoxious special elections for the purpose, in addition to the proposed method of apportioning State and county money, would be a vast improvement on the present system, and we much hope some such action may be taken by the next Legislature.

Heenan's Last Hours.

A writer in The New York World gives the particulars of Heenan's death. It appears that, a few days before his decease, Heenan while on his way West, felt so much better that he went out shooting. The effort was apparently too great, and he rapidly grew worse—still, however pressing onward to California, hoping that the air would improve his condition. On the morning of his death, while near Green River Station on the Pacific Railroad, Cusick, his trainer in the fight with Sayers, asked him if he would not take a cup of tea. Heenan said, "yes," and it was procured for him. After swallowing it he was siezed with a hemorrhage, Cusick gave him some salt, and Heenan fell back in his arms, as if asleep. Shortly afterward one of the passengers said to Cusick: "He is not asleep; he is dead," and on examination this proved to be the fact.

St. Nicholas.

This is the name of a new magazine having for its special object the introduction of a fresh and healthful element in the juvenile literature of the country, and right well this one promises, in the general character of its contents, to answer the purpose. We have seen no work of the kind that pleases our fancy better than The St. Nicholas. It is a large and beautifully printed monthly, published by Scribner & Co., Broadway, New York, and edited by Mary Mapes Dodge. Price $3 per annum. Besides finely written articles for the older persons, we may mention such as these for juveniles:

"Descriptions of zebras, passenger pigeons, the curious inhabitants of the Farallone Islands and the Piute Indians, besides bright little 'Jingles,' and a whole page in large type for little children with big eyes. We must not forget to mention as an admirable feature a short story in German for the benefit of youngsters who are learning that language. A similar French story is announced for the next number. Then 'Jack-in-the-Pulpit,' a curious fellow who is full of little bits of wit and wisdom, holds forth most entertaingly; and there are capital notices of juvenile books, intended for those who will read the books, and a puzzle department that will certainly sharpen the wits of the youngsters.

Piute District.

Mining men and others will remember of the organization, in July last, of Piute Mining District, the laws of which were published in this paper, which is situated in the Inyo or White (it must be near the point where the range changes its name) mountains, about opposite old Owensville. For some months past prospecting has been steadily going on on several of the locations, notably the Luello, Buena Vista and Golden Era. Samples of the ore in our possession leave no question as to the richness of the mines, and by disinterested testimony it is shown that they are extensive and perfect ledges. The mines are grouped in series of gold and silver veins, the lumped assays of which range from $230 to $686 per ton. The gold ledges show ore carrying sulphurets and iron pyrites, said to be as easily reduced in arastras as the Fish Spring rock, by a process somewhat peculiar to that locality. The silver rock is a study, containing the metal in in a half dozen native states, with frequent "colors" of gold visible, The present owners are Messrs. Morris, Keplinger, Walsh, Brady and the Doss boys, but we understand that Hutchison and Gill are about taking a contract to sink a 50 foot shaft for a fourth interest. The producers of the upper end of the valley will, we think, before long have occasion to realize the importance of those discoveries so adjacent to their farms.

Shooting at Lone Pine.

Late last Saturday night several pistol shots were heard in quick succession, apparently issuing from Dabeeny's saloon, Lone Pine, though this is denied by some parties, who say the shooting was in the street. Efforts were made by several persons to find out what the trouble was, but nothing more satisfactory than a piece of a man's ear, apparently shot off, was discovered. It is supposed that two Mexicans had been regaling themselves or each other with a little powder and lead, but as no satisfactory results followed their efforts, they and all concerned resolved to keep mum. Verily, the Fall shooting opens lively.

The Old Thing.

F. K. Miller, relator for the county-seat petitioners, and P. Reddy, for respondents, are to-day arguing before Judge Reed the prayer of the former for a writ of mandamus requiring the Board of Supervisors to order an election on the old petition. We shall report progress and results as they occur, but beyond that we take no stock in the matter, since we don't care two cents, individually considered, what the result may be.

In Confinement.

Antonio Mesa, the Mexican who is alleged to have killed his two countrymen in Cerro Gordo, of which mention was made in our last issue, was brought down by John Irwin on the following day and is now in jail, where he is likely to remain until next May. No examination has been held, we believe. Mesa is represented as usually a quiet, inoffensive man, and to have done the killing under extenuating circumstances.

Personal.

J. G. Howard, Esq., has started on his return to Los Angeles. B. H. Roberts, with his family, returned this week from Oakland. He is accompanied by his brother-in-law, R. G. Vickers, and family. Mr. Vickers is an old print, and editor, and for so e time past has been foreman on The Oakland Daily News. He comes with a view of permanent settlement in this county.

School at the Post.

Mr. Chas. E. Washburne will open a public school in a few days near the Post. The officers and men of the Post, we are told, will cheerfully assist the school in any way that they can, and this, with similar efforts on the part of the settlers in the vicinity, insures Mr. Washburne an excellent school.

The San Felipe-Union Suit.

Mr. P. Reddy returned from San Jose last Saturday, and we learn from him that the bill of exceptions filed in the case was definitely settled. The cause has yet to be argued and this may not be done for some weeks to come.

Welcome Visitor.

Our old friend Major Chas. W. Wingard, paymaster U. S. A., arrived last Friday and paid our little army of soldiers several thousand dollars in legal tenders. He started back on the Sunday stage.

Government Sale.

Captain MacGowan, A. A. Q. M., advertises for sale, on the 20th of December next, a large lot of general military goods. An excellent chance for those of a speculative turn.

Admitted to Practice.

Last week, on motions of P. W. Bennett and Thos. Laspeyre, respectively, V. A. Gregg and H. C. Egbert were admitted to practice in the District Court.

Northward.

In a country the only conveyances of which are the old stages or "mud wagons," the doings and general conduct of the main lines are rightful objects of interest, and well worthy of more than passing notice by the observant scribbler who has had the occasion to make the long trip. The stage men are our faithful purveyors always, upon whom falls the responsibility of keeping up our lines of communication with the outside world—the link connecting us with the centers of population, and are not always regarded with the appreciation justly due them. The stage driver, even in modern days, is a study—a man in whose skill we trust, whose professional pride we uphold, yet who is guided by the force of habit and duty rather than by a realization of his importance and responsibility. Inyo mails and passengers are conveyed to the railroads of Nevada by running tri-weekly. Having amicably arranged certain pecuniary matters with B. Lafayette Brown, the Independence agent, the stage calls for you say on Sunday, and in a short time you are bowling out of the country behind a team handled by either Con. Denice or Tommy Burns. We've noticed an unconscious assumption of dignity by all knights of the whip, but by the variations of its manifestation is the observer either amused or inspired with confidence. For instance, Con's left hand holds all the reins, close to his breast, with the whip occasionally lightly reminding the team that he is around. Tommy's left hand holds but half, the right knee and arm forming right angles with the body, the wrist gracefully curving underneath, his cabesa covering delicately balanced on the corner of a hair. Stage drivers have histories, and most all of them have, well—lady friends, at every station. In days gone by, Con. drove from San Jose to Santa Cruz, from Genoa to Silver Mountain, run the Gold Hill and Virginia "buss," and for Wilson. Tommy used to engineer a line of his own between Sonora and Columbia, in old Tuolumne. They are now making regular drives of two days and a night without stopping, and seem to thrive over it. But of all matters most interesting to the traveler that of the "grub" at the stations is of the greatest consideration, and we may state that the route between here and Carson boasts of some of the best as well as the vilest of any similar road in the world. Exactly where you'd expect the best is the worst, and vice versa. Right minded travelers make it a duty to partake of and pay for refreshments wherever offered, and should be at each point furnished with something good and edible, but plain. Some places, however, are unexceptionable; to them we proffer mention—say Taboose, Slinkard's, Sweet-Water and the old Dexter Wells. But let's draw a charitable veil of silence over the rest! The Inyo passenger, bound up, will find to have greatly improved in appearance, everywhere presenting evidences of prosperity. At the express office, Wells, Fargo & Co. pile in a few cords, more or less, of bullion from the different mills. You get on another stage, two or three more passengers get aboard, and you are soon climbing the long sand hill north of the town, if in luck, by the side of Dan. Ashley, who throws silk among six substantial horses between this point and 'Dobe Meadows. Not many years ago Dan. was boss engineer of all kinds of teams, from four to fourteen in hand, over on the Comstock. The Meadows are still run by Frank Shaw, who appears as contented as any man in the State, and as ready to swap a lie or two.

BENTON

AURORA,

which has amounted to nearly nothing since the great breakdown of 65-7, holds its own with remarkable success. A historical fact or two concerning this town would be of decided interest, and would be given did we not presume that all in this country are already acquainted with them. But the town has in it some of the best men ever thrown together, and it is certainly to be hoped that their old flush times may return. It is altogether too incredible to suppose that their once renowned rich ledges have entirely "petered," but will be found to have been only lost for the time. A noticeable fact, in this connection, is that the United States General Land Office has been for nearly two years cogitating upon the propriety of granting patents to certain mines in the district upon which there can be and is no contest, and upon which the very completest applications have been made, and notwithstanding frequent spurring by the owners. The mysteries of red tape are certainly past finding out. Bodie, the district adjoining, is panning out handsomely, and the steam whistle of Marden's little mill at the witching hour of hash snorts out a reminder that something around the place is in motion. Aurora is the radiating point of mails for nearly all the countries so far south as this. Arriving at 8 o'clock P. M., a lay-over occurs here until 4 A. M., when you are invited to mount a stage of the running every other day between Carson and Aurora, the mail pony alternating with the stages. Jim Thompson handles the ribbons, but on our trip Al. Harkness did the honors. Out of regard for Al. we won't say anything about the stowaway that he had to clean out on the road—we wouldn't think of mentioning it. Al. used to be, with Baldy Green and Hank Monk, "a high-toned driver on the Pioneer Line," when they did staging as was staging across the Sierra, and subsequently run between Reno and Virginia. His regular route is now from Carson to Pine Grove, for Wilson. On the trip down, with Col. Wingard, Paymaster U. S. A., Ross Tilley, a couple of ladies and our reporter as passengers, Jim Thompson received the alias of the "Ghost," a cognomen destined to stay with him so long as he drives past the spot where Bob Graves' little lark came so desperately near costing the lives of said Thompson, Dr. Cole, Jim Perham and Tom May. The story had been told of Thompson's death by the accident, of his interment in the hills, with the minutest particulars, and yet his 200-pound ghost manipulates the lines. This healthy spirit formerly steered mustangs on the old Overland, and save the "little indiscretion" referred to, is old reliability himself. However, Col. Bob came down handsomely in the premises, paying all expenses of the injured, and has replaced the demolished wagon with a new $650 one. From Aurora north, the traveler becomes satisfied that he is approaching where the localities of Inyo are so seldom mentioned that the very names sound unfamiliar. Genoa, Carson and the Comstock figure in the conversation to the exclusion of all else. A la Mark Twain, information steams out of some people, and if you didn't know it before you shortly learn that the yield of the Storey mines for 1873 was and will be $26,000,000; that of 1874, based on present developments, will be close on to $42,000,000; and that the operations of the past two or three years have so changed affairs thereabouts that the returns from all the mines worked foot up a grand total of 60 per cent. more than the outlay since their discovery—astonishing facts that we didn't learn on the road, but we might if there had been anyone there who knew it.

GENOA,

an original Mormon settlement dating back to the days of '47, is reached in the evening. Here some 200 men are building a flume for the Bank, an unerring indication that the Virginia and Truckee Railroad is to be extended to that point. This will give the northern route fourteen miles less staging and probably proportionately increasing fare, if similar operations in the past are to be taken as a criterion. However, here loads up all hands in or on a fine Concord coach and rolls into Carson. Save to make the most honorable mention of Billy Wilson, Johnny Kersey and the proprietor and attaches of the splendid new Ormsby House, the remaining incidents and facts pertaining to a recent trip thitherward shall be unwritten.

BILLINGS

The New Hall.

A greater portion of the materials are on the ground for the new hall of the I. O. G. T. at Bishop Creek. The structure is to be a two-story frame, 24x42 in size, finished in the completest manner and located on the lot directly north of Bourland's Hotel. The lower story is intended for renting as a public hall, while the upper is for the exclusive use of the society, though it is probable the Odd Fellows will co-operate. Mr. Sullivan, the contractor, agrees to complete the structure ready for furniture for $2,800.

Fastidious.

"Maggie" is a well dressed, well behaved lady of the Piute persuasion, and resides, most of her time, with Mr. B. and lady. The other day she was returning from the store with some articles of purchase. The clerk of the store was also bound to the same destination on a similar errand, and remarked to Maggie that he would go with her. "What," said Maggie, with an abortive effort to curl her snub nose, "do you think I would be seen walking in the streets with you?" Mr. C. threatens to reform.

Business Change.

We call the attention of our readers to the change in business of the late firm of Wood & Cohn. A few weeks ago Mr. Cohn had bought out his partner, Mr. Wood, and went to San Francisco to purchase a new supply of general merchandise. Suffering from very poor health while living in these high-toned regions, Mr. C. on arriving at San Francisco, found his health to be getting so much better, that he determined to make that little burg his future residence. Hence the change.

Returned.

Jas. Brady, Esq., of the Waucoba Company, and Isaac Harris, of Harris & Rhine, returned from San Francisco on the stages of yesterday. Mr. S. G. Sneden, lately arrived from below, is at home. A. O. Thoms, of the Telegraph Stage Line, has also been paying the town a visit.

Religious.

At 7 o'clock on Monday evening next, the Rev. Mr. Pratt will hold divine services at the school house in Lone Pine, and at the same hour on Friday evening next at Round Valley. The usual services will be held to-morrow.

Correct, Boys.

We are informed that several of the boys in blue have joined the Good Templars lodge, which meets at the Masonic Hall every Friday night. May they stick to it. It's a good thing for anybody to do.

Mechanic's Hall.

Such is the name of Frank Linhart's new and popular resort, at Lone Pine, an advertisement of which will be found elsewhere. The proprietor is a deserving gentlemen and has hosts of friends.

"Go For It."

"Come out here, Earl, and bring an application," said Judge R. to our Register, a few days ago, "here's a man watering the street and making swamp land; go for it!"

A Frontier Contest Between Sheep and Cattle Men.

The St. Louis Democrat says that in the vast grazing districts of Texas, New Mexico and Colorado, there is a bitter feud going on between the growers of sheep and the growers of cattle. The cattle men cannot abide the sheep men, and the sheep men are equally hostile to the cattle men, though their flocks and herds get along quite comfortably together. It has been declared that western Texas and Colorado shall be made all one thing or all the other, and as the sheep interest is much the lightest just now, it is suffering a great deal. Only a short time ago two men in southern Colorado made a dash at a drove of two thousand sheep, which were quietly feeding on the plains. A stampede was effected, the sheep were scattered for several miles around the country, one hundred head were shot dead and nearly one hundred more wounded. One of the party engaged in the outrage has been arrested and brought to Denver, and hunters are on the track of the other.

Value of Gold and Silver.

One ton (2,000 pounds avoirdupoise) of gold or silver contains 29, 163 troy ounces, and, therefore the value of a ton of pure gold is $602, 790 21, and of a ton of silver is $37,703 84. A cubic foot of pure gold weighs 1,218.75 pounds avoirdupoise. One million dollars gold coin weighs 3,985.8 pounds avoirdupoise. If there is one per cent. of gold or silver in one ton of ore, it contains 291,63 ounces troy, of either of these metals. The calculations at the United States mint are made on the basis that forty-three ounces of standard gold, or 900 fine (coin), are worth $800, and eleven ounces of silver 900 fine (coin), are worth $12 80.

—One of the effects of the panic was the throwing out of employment of at least 20,000 working girls from the different factories at Newark, New Jersey.

More of the Dome.

LONE PINE, Nov. 5, 1873.

MR. EDITOR:— In your paper of date November 1, we notice a communication and signed Wm. Crapo. "Perturbed sprits, methinks I see thee still." We think we smell a skunk, or it may be a cross between a skunk and a tadpole. But in studying it over we have concluded that it is a cross between a skunk and a cayote. Rip Van Winkle, after twenty years' sleep, awoke, and, Somerville like, divulges his great secret for the first time, thinking he would set the world in a blaze of excitement by his disclosure and discovery. Why did not Prof. Crapo claim it at the time Carl Rabe made his report? We (the immortal three) have never claimed to have been on Mount Whitney first, but do state here that we ascended Mount Whitney early on August 17, and not on August 14, as the Professor misstates us; we do not want such an advantage of him. The same day we followed Whitney Creek down three or four miles in a westerly direction; thence up a steep and rocky ravine to the mouth, and leaving a bald peak to the west of us, and following the right hand ravine for a mile or two, and thence up the north-east fork of that to Ramshorn Springs, where we made our camp near sundown, August 17. On August 18 we started by daylight, leaving our horses and blankets. We started in a northeasterly direction to the top of the ridge; did not see any way of getting down there, so we followed up the ridge till we came to a pass going down this and around the lake; at the foot we made for a red streak crossing the next ridge and finding a pass over this the last ridge, also finding a lake at the foot of the last pass. Parties looking in a southwesterly direction from the Dome will see those two passes. "Damme, they will not out." We pledge ourselves to take the Professor or any of his, or our friends, starting early in the morning from the base of Mount Whitney, and climb it and the Dome to their highest point in two days, at any time from the 1st of July to the 1st of September. If we do not do this, we will not mention the Dome again.

West of our monument ten or fifteen feet, are two flat rocks, one on top of the other, with a basin between them, and enough water to dip a cupfull at a time; this is where we found our sheepherder's delight, and became intoxicated—with the grandeur of the scenery above and around us.

We can inform the scientific geologist, Professor Crapo, that he lies, and no one knows it better than himself and the "immortal three." About its being flat-topped and granite, we refer him to Goodyear's and Carl Rabe's reports. The Dome we know to be the highest. Mr. Mulkey sent to Lone Pine for a sprit level, but being unwell could not go with us, but let us take it with us. We first placed it on Mount Whitney, and finding that the Dome was, as we judged at the time, from three to five hundred feet higher than the one on which we stood, went for it. So you see with all the sheepherder's delight we came as near the difference, in feet, between the two rival mountains as Prof. Crapo or Mr. Belshaw in their barometrical observations and triangulation.

Our tracks could be plainly seen, as there was lots of decomposed rock and sand, but Prof. Bighorn claimed them as his. We admit that up to August 15 no white man had ever made a mark on the Dome, and we are pleased to know that Bighorn has set his date, also in stating that he had his report in San Francisco ten days before we claimed to have been on "Fisherman's Peak," making it on August 8, and proving that he made his report seven days before he was on the Dome, and his taking the altitude on August 15. Bighorn must have had Mark Twain's watch, which runs backward. What a pity the "immortal three" did not have a copy of the Geological Survey with them! With such a copy before them they could have found it to be the same to a—"second." The "immortal three" were not scientists; did not have a barometer, a compass or a Geological Survey report, and were dirty fishermen, as he insinuates, and ragged. But withal were not as dirty and filthy as he, who tries to take the credit of being there first away from us. If we had named it Crapo or McDonough we would have been nice gentlemen, nor would we have exercised "a prerogative without a precedent." Classical, indeed! Whitney deserves to have something to commemorate his name for his scientific examination of the Inyo earthquake cracks—by sticking his finger or a pole down them and then smelling the end of the pole to find the cause, and we know of no one better suited to bring his name before the world as a distinguished scientist for posterity to admire, than Prof. Crapo.

We will inform Prof. Bighorn that we have pretty good proof that he threw everything of ours over the cliff to make room for his own distinguished and honored name. Mr. Suman, of Clarence King's party, and a resident now of Tulare county, found one of our notices, but did not see any of the coin that we left there. A fling is also thrown at Carl Rabe for not sounding the horn for Prof. Bighorn. We thank Mr. Hunter for stating that Crapo rushed ahead of the rest of the party in ascending the Dome—we leave your readers to conjecture for what purpose. Mr. Leyda thought too much of his name to sign such a statement as Bighorn's letter. The "immortal three" will inform him again that he is a liar, when he states that he took the altitude on August 15. We have good proof that he ascended the Sierra Nevadas after August 20, in company with Mr. Leyda. Bighorn must have taken a leap and lit on his head when he looked at his almanac, and "left his mark on the very crest of the Dome."

JOHN LUCAS,
A. H. JOHNSON,
C. D. BEGOLE.

District Court.

Theron Reed, JUDGE.

The venire for 50 jurors was returned on Monday.

In the case of the People vs. E. P. Welch, J. G. Howard, counsel for defense, moved a continuance, supporting the motion by affidavit of Mrs. Julia Welch. Motion denied. Counsel then moved the dismissal of the entire panel of trial jurors, on the ground that they were summoned by the Sheriff and his Special Deputy, W. J. Lake, both of whom had expressed opinions as to the guilt of defendant. Both officers were sworn, and it appearing that they had so expressed themselves, the panel was dismissed. It furthermore appearing that not sufficient time remained of this term to obtain a regularly drawn jury, a continuance of the case until the next term was ordered.

Levy & Coblentz vs. J. R. Hughes. Pending.

San Felipe Mining Co. vs. M. W. Belshaw, et als. Motion to vacate stay of proceedings referred to Judge Belden of the 20th District Court.

Mary Holland vs. David Holland. Divorce granted and custody of children with costs of suit awarded plaintiff.

Peter Peerson vs. V. Hoff & Co. Plaintiff not appearing, case dismissed with judgment for costs against plaintiff.

James Brady vs. W. M. Osborne. Motion of defendant for change of venue to Los Angeles county granted.

San Felipe Mining Co. vs. R. Diaz. Demurrer filed, argued and taken under advisement.

James Brady vs. Darrah & Mairs. Pending.

J. C Morrison vs. C. D. Begole. Pending.

A. Goodridge vs. W. H. Wells. Defendant failing to appear, default entered and judgment referred to Court Commissioner.

The following cases were passed for the term: J. A. Sanchez vs. Jose A. Ochoa; Sanchez vs. Wolfskill; San Felipe Mining Co. vs. Belshaw & Beaudry; John C. Morrison vs. W. G. Squires.

F. K. Miller vs. Peter Peerson, and R. Vincentilli (new suit). For restitution of the Whipple farm now in possession of defendants. Summons issued.

County Court.

J. A. Hannah, JUDGE.

Following is a summary of the proceedings in this court since the beginning of the term:

M. H. White vs. Taylor & Cochran. Continued for the term.

The Grand Jury consisted of the following persons: John B. White, Henry Premer, Thos. Hamilton, A. Harkless, F. M. Turner, I. W. Hunt, R. G. Rice, Jos. Schalten, A. M'Kellip, A. C. Matlack, S. G. Gregg, M. C. Brockman and D. B. Curtis, Foreman.

The following indictments were found: E. P. Welch, murder; George Hynes, assault to commit murder; Lindsey Lewis, exhibiting a deadly weapon in a rude and threatening manner.

Report of Grand Jury ordered printed in THE INYO INDEPENDENT. [Printed last week.—ED.]

People vs. Hynes. Defendant plead guilty to assault (the indictment for assault to commit murder having been found defective), and was sentenced to a fine in the sum of $500, or in default thereof to confinement in the county jail for two hundred and fifty days.

People vs. Lindsey Lewis. Charge of misdemeanor sustained, and defendant fined in the sum of $25, which was paid and defendant discharged.

Court adjourned to Monday, November 17.

The Political Future.

The Sacramento Union, in an article on the political situation, says:

There will be two parties, most certainly; but the second one, three or or four years hence, will not be the Republican nor the Democratic in fact, whatever it may be in name. It will be composed of the odds and ends of all the old parties. It will contain Republicans, seeking centralization and the enlargement of the spoils of office; Democrats conspiring to fasten a heavy debt on the nation to pay for the emancipated slaves, others native and foreign of the railway brigade—using the power of capital to enslave the people and convert the republic into an empire. It will be a strong and a dangerous party, from the cohesiveness of the plunderers that will compose it. If it can manage to secure the vast emoluments of the Federal Government and the President of the United States, we may then begin to count the future years of the Republic on the fingers of our hands. This is the enemy the People's Independent Party has to prepare for. Past names amount to nothing in the political calculations of the future. The new party is not hated more by the Democrats in Ohio than by Republicans in California. In every case the hatred is inspired by a consciousness that the new party is a mortal enemy, and the fight it offers is one to the death. Between Democratic demagogues and Republican plunderers there is a chance for compromise by a division of the spoils, and equal share of the corruption money which the corporations can afford to pay for such laws as they desire. With the new party there is no more hope of compromise than in a fight between a ferret and a rat. The men are called on to take their places each with the side he loves best. The people will make up their opinion accordingly as their representatives place themselves. In this State the last contest has been fought between the people and the Democratic party, the people and the Republican party. Henceforth we shall have but two parties: The people on the one side, the corporations and the tools on the other,

—The Reveille of the 8th says: J. W. Gashwiler is ahead $290,000 by the recent rise in Belmont.

The Land Speculators.

The report comes that United States Surveyor General Hardenbergh is likely to be superseded. If this be on account of the fight made against him by the speculators, Chapman, Carr, et al., then by that act the Government says in substance to all officials: "You must not contend against capital—take its bribes, submit to its dictates, or no longer be servitor of mine." It is a license to every Government officer to become the tool of speculators, and to defraud the people for a share of the plunder. But we don't believe that the United States has done this or will do it—even though it be true as reported that these California land speculators have their paid agents in the General Land Office at Washington.

The "Sunrise" Fiends.

Harris, the fiendish mate of the ship Sunrise, has at last been arrested. The chase after him has excited great interest, although it was not much of a chase after all, since he had remained all the time in San Francisco, right under the noses of the officers. It is supposed that Harris permitted his own arrest in the interest of Capt. Clarke, who is anxious for new evidence that will give him a new trial and save him some years in the Penitentiary, where, without something of the kind, he is certain to go for his outrageous cruelties to his sailors. Though convicted, Clarke has not yet been sentenced.

One of the Stokes Jurors in Trouble.

James Delos Centre, one of the jurors in the Stokes case, was arrested and lodged in the cell occupied by Stokes after shooting Fisk. The Grand Jury, it is said, have indicted him for disregarding the obligations of a juryman. Centre is said to have repeatedly in public declared, while in custody of the Deputy Sheriff, "Stokes will not hang! I will never harm the boy."

Faith and Hope.

The Truckee Republican remarks that some twenty-five or thirty persons, prospectors and capitalists, are lingering at Meadow Lake. They have an idea that a new process for reducing the rebellious ores of that locality has been discovered, and they expect a great rush of people there next Spring in consequence.

Modoc Claims.

Citizens of Siskiyou county who are interested in Modoc war claims have been in conference with Congressman Luttrell, at Yreka. Mr. Luttrell favors a commission to examine these claims and report as to their correctness, and then the passage of an Appropriation Act to pay them.

Burned to Death.

A fire broke out on the Divide between Virginia and Gold Hill, November 8th. Five small houses were destroyed, in one of which Charles G. Pollard was burned to death. But for the numerous engines, steam and hand, the entire Divide would have been swept.

Etna in Eruption.

A dispatch from Sicily states that the volcano of Etna is in a state of violent eruption. The outbreak is accompanied by fearful earthquakes. Portions of the crater have fallen in, and mines of sulphur, valued at £300,000, have been destroyed.

—A company has been organized at Ogden to manufacture wrought and pig iron on a large scale. They commence work immediately.

THE SUN.

Weekly. Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first-rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

House Vermin.

Cockroaches are the plague of many housekeepers, and yet a little Paris green is death to them. Keep in a flour dredging box, label it poison, and apply it weekly to their haunts. Bed-bugs or chinch-bugs can also be dispersed and uttterly routed with this remedy; and both cockroaches and bed-bugs will flee from powdered borax. Travelers should always carry a paper of powdered borax in their bags, and sprinkle it under and over their pillows, if they are afraid they will become food for the last named wretches. Sprigs of worm-wood will drive away large black ants; and none of them. whether black brown, or red relish wintergreen, tansy Paris Green, Cayenne or kerosene; so so if they invade our pantries we can, by a judicious application of some one of these articles, make the premises too unpleasant for them. Fly paper should be kept around the house as early as the middle of May. Put it in every open window, and thus destroy every intruder.

—The Hornet says: A wretch has started a malicious report that London contains two thousand poets. On the contrary, the city is unusually healthy."

—A philosophical Kentuckian, who had but one shirt, and was lying in bed while the garment was drying on the clothes-line in the yard, was startled by by an exclamation from hsi wife to the effect that the calf had eaten it. "Well" said the Kentuckian with a spirit worthier of a better cause, "well, them who has must lose."

—A papyrus manuscript, found in an Egyptian tomb, has lately been translated by a scholar of Heidelberg. He pronounces it to be an address of Rameses III. to all the nations of the earth, in which the king details minutely all the causes which led to the exodus of the Jews from the land of Egypt.

—Intemperate men are utterly unfit either to make or administer law. Drinking men cannot be trusted in any calling demanding sound judgment and right feelings. Says the Evangelical prophet: "The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink."

—"The Boy who Grabs." is the name of a Montana Indian now on a visit to Washington; and if he dosn't wish to be investigated he will make the visit a very short one.

—Santa Anna, the old Mexican General now an exile, is passing a miserable life, having sunk from opulence to the most complete poverty.

—Overman has surprised its friends by an important advance in price, $24,-50 having been touched, or about four times the price noted.

—The railroad train that is run into by another is telescoped; the man who is run into by a Texas ox steereoscoped.

Mrs. Partington says she gets up every morning at the shrill carrion of the chandilier.

—The General of the Jesuits is reported to have changed the headquarters of that Order to the Islands of Malta.

—A Kansas lawyer was fined for profanity and contempt of court the other day for quoting Latin to the Judge!

—Necessity knows no law, but a good many lawyers.

—Who is the first boy mentioned in the Bible? "Chap. 1."

[From The Popular Science Monthly.]

The early break-down of health observed among Cornish miners, and commonly regarded as an affection of the lungs—"miner's phthisic"—is declared, by competent authority, to proceed rather from disturbed action of the heart; and this, according to Dr. Houghton, the distinguished Dublin phisiologist, is caused by the great and sudden strains put upon the system by the ascent from the pits, at a time when the body is not sufficiently fortified with food. In his valuable address on the "Relation of Food to Work," Dr. Houghton says: "The labor of the miner is peculiar, and his food appears to me badly suited to meet its requirements. At the close of a hard day's toil the weary miner has to climb, by vertical ladders, through a hight of from 600 to 1,200 feet, before he can reach his cottage, where he naturally looks for his food and sleep. This climbing of the ladders is performed hastily, almost as a gymnastic feat, and throws a heavy strain (amounting from one-eighth to one-quarter of the whole day's work) upon the muscles of the tired miner during the half hour that concludes his daily toil. A flesh fed man (as a red Indian) would run up the ladders like a cat, using the stores of force already in reserve in his blood; but the Cornish miner, who is fed chiefly on dough and fat, finds himself greatly distressed by the climbing of the ladders—more so indeed than by the slower labor of quarrying in the mine. His heart, over-stimulated by the rapid exertion of muscular work, beats more and more quickly in its efforts to oxidate the blood in the lungs, and so supply the force required. Local congestion of the lung itself frequently follows, and lays the foundation for the affection so graphically though sadly described by the miner at forty years of age, who tells you that his other works are very good, but that he is 'beginning to leak in the valves.' Were I a Cornish miner and able to afford the luxury, I should train myself for the ladder feat by dining on half a pound of rare beef steak and a glass of ale from one to two hours before commencing the ascent.

Working Men in the East.

Fifteen hundred skilled mechanics are to-day wandering about the streets of Boston with nothing to do. So says a Boston paper. Think of it. One half this number of enforced idlers are probably married and have families. These fifteen hundred artisans are the support of at least seven hundred and fifty mothers and two thousand children. Winter is already upon them, coal is dear and food must be had. And this picture is reprodnced in every city of the great East. We of Nevada have abundant cause for thankfulness. Thanksgiving day deserves to be remembered and honored here.—Gold Hill News.

Interest.

The Bank of England regulates interest on money according to the exigencies of the times. If the Bank is called upon for large sums of money, and gold is leaving the vaults, interest is raised; but when trade is prosperous and times good, interest is reduced. At the present time, in view of the extraordinary call for money in the United States, the Bank of England has raised its rates to nine per cent. But twice before for thirteen years has the rate of interest been advanced to such figures. In 1864 the rate was at one time nine per cent., and in 1866 it rose to ten per cent.

The Sum of Their Contract.

Two persons who have chosen each other out of all the species, with the design to be each other's mutual comfort and entertainment, have, in that action, bound themselves to be good-humored, affable, discreet, forgiving, patient and joyful, with respect to each other's frailties and perfections, to the end of their lives. —Addison.

Any Place.

"Husband, where shall I get the ticking for our new feather bed?" "Any place where you can get the tick."

A California Story.

In the early mining days of California there stood at the foot of the hill, not many miles from Nevada, one of those rough built gaming houses so common throughout the mining sections of the territory. A description of this structure and its surroundings will convey to the reader a better idea of the incident I am about to relate. The building contained but one room, the entrance to which was situated at one end, with a large adobe fireplace on the other end, nearly opposite to the entrance. On the large stone hearth burned a wood fire, giving to the room a cheerful appearance. On the front, at the right of the entrance, was a well-filled bar, around which were congregated representatives of different nations, some speculating on the success of various mining operations, while others were discussing the general topics of the day. Along the rear side of the room extended a row of tables, around each of which was seated a company of miners playing poker and staking large sums of gold with as much coolness and apparent unconcern as if they were partaking of their evening meal. A few rude seats occupied the space around the fire place, and in the front portion of the room beyond the bar. The cabins of the settlers extended some distance to the front of the spot, while the unsettled portion of the country lay in the rear.

The hill before mentioned rising abruptly from this position was thickly interspersed with sagebrush and thick bushes, affording a temporary hiding place for the fugitive. As the evening wore on the patrons of the saloon became more numerous, while the chilliness of the atmosphere caused those in the games at the table to gather round the fire. The conversation, which at this time was becoming animated' was suddenly interrupted by the entrance of a tall raw-boned Yankee, bearing in his hand a long rifle; around his waist he wore a belt, from which was suspended a powder and bullet flask.

Advancing to the fire-place, he deposited his rifle in the corner, and after accepting the seat courteously offered him by one of the company, he seated himself by the fire, resting one elbow on his knee, and drooping his chin into his into his hand, he sat gloomily watching the fire, as if some mighty grief were preying upon him. He mumbled incoherently at times, and sat without changing his position. The attention of the company was soon drawn to the stranger, and an occasional glance from those at the table was directed toward the place where he sat. He at length broke out into such lamentations as these:

"I am tired of life. My claim has failed, and I am without friends or money. I have not even enough to purchase a supper. I have been out all day hunting, and have killed nothing."

He addressed no one personally, and no one seemed to sympathize with him in his disturbed condition. He sat in silence a few minutes, then raising his head he exclaimed,—

"A man may as well be dead as out of luck. I will take my own life."

Then taking from his side the flask, he unscrewed the cap from the top, and poured from it into his hand some apparently fine Hazard powder, then pouring it carefully back, he replaced the cap, and screwing it firmly on, yelled,—

"Yes, I will die myself, and all around me shall die also."

He then flung the flask on the burning coals. The tumult that followed was indescribable. The rush for the door was almost simultaneous with the rash act of the stranger. The windows served as a means of escape to those who were unable to press a passage through the door. The Yankee sat a calm spectator till the last occupant of the room had made his exit, than with the rapidity of lightning he sprang to the tables and scraped from them the shining piles of gold which had been left by the gamblers and deposited them in his hat, escaping through one of the rear windows. With desperate strides he ascended the hill, and jumping on a fallen tree, turned to survey the multitude below. All were waiting breathlessly, watching the building, expecting every moment that the contents of the heated flask would blow it to atoms, when the shrill voice of our hero rung out on the clear night air,—

"Don't be afraid, gentlemen. There is nothing but black sand in the can."

Then springing from his perch he disappeared among the chaparrel, completely eluding the pursuit of the gamblers, who returned to the saloon to find the tables all cleared of the last vestige of their treasure.

Lead Poisoning.

Dr. Wittstein has analyzed the constituents of the capsules used for champagne, beer and mineral water bottles, and he finds that, so far from being made of tin, with an addition of lead, they are really made of lead, with a small addition of tin. In half a dozen cases he found that the percentage of lead was 90. Thus champagne capsules contained 90.13, mineral water capsules 93.1, and beer capsules from 94.2 to 99 4 per cent. of lead. The prevalent habit of covering the top of the bottle with the capsule after the cork has once been drawn, is consequently to be deprecated. The acid contents of the bottle in contact with the capsule at the mouth of the bottle, even in minute quantities, necessarily produces a deleterious solution of lead.

What We Gain.

[From The Los Angeles Express.]

Since the completion of the Union and Central Pacific Railroads, every Fall has witnessed the coming to our State large numbers of Eastern Visitors seeking with us and in our genial climate an asylum from the vigor of an Eastern winter. Many of such visitors have, despite the drawbacks attended thereon, been induced to remain permanently with us and to add their means to the capital of our State, while others equally anxious to take up their residence here have been deterred alone by the large financial sacrifice the change demanded of them. With a greenback dollar representing to them in the East all and in cases more than the value of a gold dollar with us, they could not recognize any benefit to themselves in sacrificing from ten to twenty per cent of their capital simply in the exchange of a currency as valuable to them in nearly every other State in the Union, for a currency demanded alone by us. They have therefore refused the many other advantages we have offered and returned to their homes, as much at least to our detriment as their own.

The present season is however producing a change in that respect. The usual number of overland passengers is largely augmented, the trains being daily crowded with Eastern visitors, and this fact we believe to be largely attributed to the decline in gold. With the high and steadily increasing rate of greenbacks, men of comparatively small means can now afford to come among us and invest. The exorbitant rates of exchange are now no longer demanded, and they can now realize upon their property in the East and use the money upon comparatively fair terms, in California. This accrues to our benefit, and in this respect at least California is likely to profit materially by the panic in the Eastern market.

The Hunt for Vasquez.

The San Jose Mercury of Nov. 5th says that Sheriff Adams returned home the night before, after an unsuccessful hunt for Vasquez, the Tres Pinos murderer. He left San Jose last Tuesday, accompanied by John O. Phelps, a Chronicle reporter. Prior to this, the Sheriff had received reliable information that Vasquez and Chaves were concealed in some of the sheep camps in the Los Verde canyon, in the Mt. Diablo range, east of Hollister, and acting upon this information, he scoured the country for upwards of one hundred miles around. He got scent of the bandit several times, but on account of the friendly feelings entertained by the mountaineers (all of whom were Californians) to Vasquez, no headway could be made. After a week's search, the Sheriff started to return. During the trip, the Sheriff and his companion endured all sorts of hardships, and the pursuit was given up only when it was ascertained that Vasquez, having got wind of the officer's movements, had left that part of the country.

Startled.

The clerks at a watch and jewelry establishment were startled the other day by an individual's inquiring if he "couldn't have his entrails engraved" on his watch-case. After a little inward laughter, it was suggested that the applicant's initials might be put on in monogram, which he seemed to think was much the same thing.

THE PUBLIC LANDS.

The following statement has been prepared by Commissioner Drummond of the General Land Office, for his forthcoming report. During the last fiscal year public lands were disposed of as follows, the figures representing acres in round numbers:

Cash sales	1,626,266
Located with military warrants	214,940
Taken for homesteads	3,793,976
Located with Agricultural College scrip	653,449
Certified to railroads	6,083,356
Certified to wagon roads	76,576
Approved to States as Swamps	238,548
Certified to Agricultural Colleges	102,232
Certified for common schools	76,909
Certified for universities	51,228
Certified for seminaries	3,202
Approved to States for internal improvements	190,775
Indian scrip locations	14,223
Total in round numbers	13,030,606
Disposal of previous year	11,864,975
Increased disposal	1,165,931

The cash receipts under the various heads amounted to $3,408,515. Surveys during the same period show a total of 30,488,133 acres. Surveyed during the previous year, 29,450,939. Increase in number of acres surveyed, 1,037,294. The total area of land in the States and Territories is 1,834,998,400 acres, and making the proper deductions 1,218,443,605 acres are yet to be surveyed.

"After the Estate."

In a recent number of The Daily Union appeared an article under the above head, to the effect that Adah Isaacs Menken was not the only wife of John C. Heenan; that a second wife Sarah Stevens Heenan, was coming from England to claim his estate—the second wife having in former times been an actress on this coast. We have it from perfectly reliable authority that Sarah Stevens Heenan was never at any time whatever an actress on this coast; she was not the second, but the first and only lawful wife of Heenan, with whom, when a mere girl, she became infatuated and married, though herself a lady of most respectable connections and perfect refinement. Subsequent to this marriage she appeared on the stage in New York and London and achieved a high reputation as an actress, but of late years she has led a retired life, chiefly on account of the wishes of her husband. For a year or more past, as we have seen it stated in the newspapers, she has been in London, preparing for a second debut, and, as we have reason to believe, there is no foundation whatever for the statement that she is "after the estate," or even knew of the existence of any such, as stated by the scribbler of The Union, who, it is said, has been gratuitously flinging dirt at this estimable lady for ten years—resulting perhaps from a deserved snubbing at the hands of the lady herself in years gone by.

The Great Race.

The great four-mile, $20,000 race came off in San Francisco last Saturday, creating more excitement from the Pacific to the Atlantic than any similar occurrence since Goldsmith Maid ran with Occident. The California horse, Thad Stevens, was pitted against some noted Eastern horses. The first heat was taken by Joe Daniels, the second by True Blue, and the last two by Thad Stevens, who was declared the victor. The first heat was run in 7:45, and the last in 8:40¼. On the third heat True Blue displaced a fetlock joint and is forever ruined as a race horse. He was a noble animal, sired by the famous Lexington, and this sad accident will occasion real sorrow to his thousands of admirers.

The Tax Decision.

The second opinion of the Supreme Court in the Mortgage-Tax-Solvent-Debt cases holds injunction is not the proper remedy in the cases. The opinion discusses at length the question of the constitutionality of the taxation of mortgages and solvent debts, and holds that taxation of money in the hands of the debtor, and taxation of the mortgage security in the hands of the creditor, is double taxation. Justice Rhodes dissents from this point. Chief Justice Wallace and Justice Niles hold the Act creating the State Board of Equalization to be mainly unconstitutional, while the majority of the Court hold it to be constitutional.

The Legislature.

The Legislature meets on Monday, the first day of December. A great struggle for the organization is anticipated, and many members will be on hand a week in advance, so as to get a thorough understanding of the situation.

KNIFE AND PISTOL.

One might think from the indifferent, matter-of-course manner in which the accounts of the fearfully numerous murders and deadly encounters are received, commented and acted upon, that our boasted civilization is actually relapsing into original barbarism. There is the gleam of a knife or sharp report of a pistol, "a man for breakfast," a brief discussion of details, and the community pursues the even tenor of its way, as though a dog and not a human being had been sent to eternity. If the perpetrator has money, no matter how foul his deed, it is conceded at once that "he is all right," for in such cases people really believe the statutes so nearly an absolute nullity as to be worthy of no consideration, except as a means of involving "a gentleman" in a heavy cash outlay in procuring, as a matter of form, a legal vindication.

Fear of retribution at the hands of the law rarely interposes a bar to the commission of such "manly" crimes, as shooting down a man; society apparently attaches but little odium to such acts, so that men whose natures shudder at the thought of taking the life of a human being, are often made to feel that they have no security for life or limb except that afforded by their own quick hand, and thinking they must kill or be killed, shoot and stab and prepare men for breakfast, not from their own bloodthirsty desire, but because society seems to expect and endorse the act, and society expects and endorses it, because it feels that the law, as twisted and quibbled, leaves no other recourse.

But society occasionally wearies of the oft-repeated story of a "man for breakfast," and more by mere force of public opinion than anything else, compels the law to step in and do its duty, or failing in that, takes the law in its own hands and metes out retribution with such effect and dispatch, as to insure at least a temporary respite from deeds of blood. However much this system of obtaining even-handed justice and security may be deprecated, it is at least a hopeful sign that our barbarism or indifference to acts of bloody crime is more apparent than real, and it is well for those desiring notoriety at the expense of human life to bear in mind that such is the fact—that this indifference can be shaken off, and that lax execution of standing law is not always to be considered a safe reliance for evil-doers.

Society does not demand condign punishment upon every man who takes the life of another, because society knows that such acts are often the natural sequence of the quasi encouragement which the lax execution of the law itself gives natural born cut-throats to exercise their proclivities upon others, who are forced to kill that they may not be killed; but it does demand a more rigid examination of facts, and the infliction of punishment when deserved.

Every exchange we receive teems with accounts of murders, justifiable homicides, etc., yet how few tell of retribution meted out. In one little town in this county, of less than four hundred persons, all told, no less than eleven men have been "prepared for breakfast"—thirty-five killed and wounded—in the last three years; yet if a single man who assisted in these bloody operations has been brought to punishment, even to the extent of Penitentiary imprisonment, the fact has escaped our memory. True, efforts were made in that direction, but nothing of moment followed, and pistols continue to crack and good men go down before them as though neither law nor society valued men's lives any more than those of so many wild animals. The simple exhibition of a deadly weapon in a "rude and threatening manner" ought to be punished, if done under punishable circumstances, with almost as much severity as its actual use. The habit of carrying, exhibiting and using such weapons has become so alarmingly common as to call for some decided action to put a stop to it. In this little county no less than seven men have been shot or grievously wounded in the past seven or eight weeks, and with perhaps one exception, nothing of the kind would have occurred but for the belief that each man had to look to himself for protection, and go prepared accordingly.

The Full List.

District Judges were chosen at the late election in six districts, as follows: Thirteenth, Deering (Ind.), elected by 617 majority over Bradford (Dem.); Sixteenth, Reed (Rep.), by 296 over Laspeyre (Dem.); Seventeenth, Sepulveda (Dem.), by 1,548 over Glassell (Ind.); Eighteenth, McNeeley (Dem.) by 216 over Rolfe (Rep.); Nineteenth, Wheeler (Rep.), by 373 over Dangerfield (Ind.); Twentieth, Belden (Rep.), 4,127 votes—no opponent.

—Serious riots are reported at Kilkenny, Ireland.

THE VIRGINIUS.

On the 7th instant the captain and twenty-six of the crew of the Virginius were led out and shot, and on the following day twelve more, passengers or volunteers, not of the crew proper, shared a similar fate. On the 10th, fifty-seven more were led out, ten at a time, and shot down, and a later report says the whole of the remainder of the crew and passengers, making a total of one hundred and eleven, were all executed. Though this was a fillibuster crew bent on bloody war against Spanish rule in the "ever faithful isle," yet they were going to aid Cubans themselves in their struggle for liberty, and the civilized world will join hands in condemning the fiendishness which characterized this wholesale butchery. The Spanish Government may sustain the abstract right to defend her possessions and to put to death those who, under no recognized flag, attempt to take them away from her; but she can never satisfy the people of the United States that even international law can justify this deed. She will almost certainly be held to a bloody account, and it is a hundred to one that the days of Spanish rule in Cuba are definitely numbered.

The excitement in the East is up to a fighting pitch. The New York Evening Post denounces the executions as an act of barbarity, and demands prompt action by the United States Government. Monitors are being dispatched from the Philadelphia and Brooklyn Navy Yards to Cuban waters, and volunteers are being enlisted in New York and other cities to aid the Cubans. Walker Stewart of New York, whose brother was among the Virginius victims, offers to give $50,000 for each $150,000 raised by the New York Cubans, and to raise 1,000 men who have already seen service, to engage in the Cuban war. The London morning papers are reported to be unanimous in the expression of the hope that the shooting of the crew and passengers of the Virginius will be avenged by the United States Government.

More Glory.

It is announced that Mr. James Gordon Bennett proposes fitting out an Arctic expedition for the discovery of the North Pole. Mr. Bennett will undoubtedly equip his exploring party with magnificent liberality, and send it forth upon its dangerous venture filled with his characteristic pluck and enterprise. If we may judge of the future by the past, it will probably succeed in an effort which has long baffled the world; but whether it succeed or fail, we must admire the daring spirit of this typical young American who seems to be going about the universe in search of hard tasks that he may have the pleasure and glory of achieving them.

Women Candidates.

The telegraph gives as a feature of the recent election in Illinois, the success of eleven female aspirants to the position of County Superintendent of Public Schools. Women were candidates for the office of Superintendent of Schools on one or the other of the tickets in twenty-nine counties in the State, and in three counties the candidates on both tickets belonged to the gentle sex. Our only astonishment is that but eleven out of the twenty-nine counties should have elected ladies to the office in question. The result does nor speak well for the gallantry of the lords of the Sucker State.

Pope and Clergy.

The Pope has publicly rebuked certain of the Catholic clergymen who attended the funeral of Rattazzi, the Italian statesman. "In that act," said he, speaking on the subject, "the priests showed themselves greater courtiers than ministers of God."

Query.

By what authority does or did the Secretary of the Treasury loan $200,000 to the First National Bank without security? It strikes us that this little transaction of Secretary Richardson's ought to render him liable to impeachment, etc.

The Difference.

The money of Great Britain consists of $250,000,000 of paper, $400,000,000 coin; that of the United States consists of $750,000,000 paper, and $150,000,000 coin.

Bad as War Times.

From August 30, 1872, to September 1, 1873, there were 1,309 railroad accidents in the United States, from which 341 persons were killed and 1,410 wounded.

Death of General Hardee.

Lieutenant-General William J. Hardee, one of the best soldiers in the army of the late Confederate States, was buried at Selma, Alabama, on the 8th of November.

Foreign News.

Affairs at Versailles are again seriously complicated. The Monarchists demand that McMahon's term as President shall be unconditionally extended ten years.

There are still 3,000 Communists in the French prisons awaiting trial on charges of offences committed in 1871.

The insurgents at Carthagena keep up a lively cannonading against the Republican navy and land forces.

A famine is reported in Greenland, resulting from the failure of the fisheries. Starvation has already occurred in some of the villages of the natives.

Four more convents in Rome have been seized by the Government.

A hurricane occurred at St. Petersburgh, Russia, on the 15th of October, which caused an overflow of the river Neva, that on the next day had flooded the city causing great destruction of property.

Mail Contracts.

The Postoffice Department advertises for proposals to carry the mails over all the established routes on the Pacific coast. We have made no note of this fact, for the reason that we expected to receive a copy of the advertisement from some source for publication, but as yet nothing of the kind has come to hand. Parties desiring to bid can find a list of routes, conditions, etc., at the different postoffices. Blanks for proposals can be obtained at THE INDEPENDENT office. Bids will be received at the Contract Office, Washington, until 3 o'clock P. M. on February 2d, 1874, and passed upon by the 2d of March following.

Wants to be a General.

Washington advices say that there is considerable anxiety in military circles over an occurrence which took place between the Chief Signal Officer, Myers, and the Secretary of War Myers' rank is Colonel with a Brigadier brevet. He has fallen into the habit of signing himself Brigadier General. Two timely official hints were given him that his assumed rank was in violation of fact and law. A few days ago the Secretary of War wrote him an autograph letter that he had no right to sign himself Brigadier General. Since that time he has entered his name on weather reports as Brigadier General by Brevet.

The Los Angeles Fair.

The Southern District Fair races closed on the 15th. They were well attended. In the two-mile-and-repeat trotting race, on the last day, the well-known horse Longfellow, valued at $3,000, fell dead inside the distance flag. He had won the first heat, and five seconds more of life would have given him the race.

Stockton and Ione Railroad.

The survey of the Stockton and Ione narrow gauge railroad is completed to the Poland House, twenty-one miles east of Stockton on an air line. The people along the route are greatly excited over the prospect of the early completion of the road.

The Staunchest Horse in the World.

The New York Times of the 15th, in a leading editorial, commenting on the great four-mile race at San Francisco on that day, says that it believes Thad Stevens to be the staunchest horse in the world.

The Registry Law.

It appears that there were 20,000,000 of registered letters sent through the mails last year, and of this number but 313 were lost.

Murder at Tehachepi.

A Los Angeles despatch from Bakersfield of Nov. 10, says: At Tehachepi, in this county, Friday morning, Nov. 7th, Wm. Mettler, Constable of Tehachepi township, accompanied by a citizen, while attempting to arrest some Mexicans, were fired upon, Mettler being killed. His remains were found in the yard fronting the house which the desperadoes occupied. The citizen who accompanied the officer to assist in making the arrest has not been heard from and it is supposed that he was wounded and carried off by his horse. The whole settlement are scouring the mountains and the surrounding country for the missing man and the murderers.

Another Atrocity at Santiago.

Dispatches received at New York on the 15th state that a horrible outrage has been perpetrated on some women near Santiago de Cuba. Some four or five years ago a Grand Lodge of Masons met there, and the members were tried, convicted, and, sentenced to death. They were executed, their estates confiscated, and their widows and children left penniless, but all were forbiden to leave the territory, and lived near the city. On the night of the 7th of this month they were visited by a party of volunteers and outraged. The result of this terrible crime was that four of these women were either killed outright or died a few hours afterwards.

The Joe Walker

Hon. P. T. Colby has gone to San Francisco, for the purpose of getting two new boilers, to work the steam pumps with. The Judge is bound to make the Joe Walker a success. Such energy and enterprise as he has exhibited rarely fails of accomplishing its object.—Havilah Miner.

Eastern News.

A National Woman' Rights Association met in Washington on the 9th.

General Delafield died at Washington on the 5th. He has been on the retired list since 1866.

Further returns from the Wisconsin election indicate that the Democratic majority will be about 15,000.

Full returns from the New Jersey Legislative election give both houses of the Legislature to the Democrats.

At Memphis, Nov. 5th the nurses in employ of the Odd Fellows, were escorted to the depot that morning, on departure to their homes in New Orleans, by the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and members of the press in procession. Nearly the entire membership of both orders participated.

Latest returns from the election in New York show that, while the Democrats elected their State ticket, the Republicans have secured the Legislature.

The official vote of Ohio, is 214,603 for Allen, and 213,847 for Noyes, making the Democratic majority 756.

A large meeting of Cuban sympathizers was held in Baltimore on the 16th instant.

The U. S. steamer Kansas sailed for Santiago de Cuba November 16th, and the Juniata on the following day.

A delegation is about to leave New York for Washington with a petition signed by several hundred thousand colored persons, asking that belligerent rights be accorded to the Cuban insurgents.

Orders have been received at the Boston Navy Yard to prepare the frigate Brooklyn for sea by December 15th. The Franklin will probably follow. Two hundred sailors have been sent from the Brooklyn Navy Yard for the Cuban service.

Pools were extensively sold in New York for the San Francisco running race, Thad Stevens being the favorite and True Blue second.

The submission of testimony in the Tweed case commenced on the 14th.

Seven more negroes have been killed by the whites at Grant Parish, La.

Irving and Farley, the detectives accused by the Bank of England, have been acquitted by the New York Police Board.

General Ryan, one of the Cuban victims, was born in Toronto, Canada, in 1843, entered the Union service in a New York regiment in 1862, and after the close of the war resided for a time at Helena, Montana.

The jury in the case of Lamar vs. Dana, for false imprisonment during the war, returned a verdict for Dana in the United States Circuit Court of New York, by order of the presiding Judge.

A Cabinet meeting was held on the 14th, said to be of greater importance than any held under Grant's administration. The Cuban question was the subject of consideration. There are conflicting reports as to the diplomatic action already taken by the Government regarding the Virginius massacre. The Government will of course observe secresy on this subject so far as practicable. The forts about the Gulf are to be strengthened, and it is thought the President will propose to Congress energetic retaliatory measures. Exciting meetings are being held in the Eastern cities, and military men in Philadelphia are preparing to raise 10,000 men to aid the Cuban cause. Minister Sickles has protested against the hasty execution of the Virginius crew, pronouncing it an insult to the United States Government.

Pacific Coast.

There were 330 deaths in San Francisco during October.

Hon. Milton S. Latham's palatial mansion at Menlo Park, finished and furnished, will cost $500,000.

The entire length of the Sutro Tunnel is 5,930 feet.

The cost of forage per month for the San Francisco Fire Department is nearly $2,000.

About the best saddles in the world are now made in Los Angeles, Mexican fashion.

The water in the lake at Lakeport, Lake county, is so low that the wharf stands entirely on dry land.

The San Luis Obispo Tribune says there are no less than eight well-defined cinnabar leads in that county.

A vigilance committee in Gilroy has made a number of bad characters leave that place recently.

A clerk in the San Francisco Postoffice, named Patten, has been arrested "and put in prison, for taking money that wasn't his'n."

P. A. Stine, of Kern county, has succeeded in raising grapes of excellent quality. The cured raisin is said to be equal to any in the market.

Some little anxiety is being experienced, says The Los Angeles Herald, by proprietors of orange orchards on account of the appearance of a blight, which threatens to become destructive if not checked in the first stages.

The San Bernardino Guardian says this of Van Leuvin's orange orchard: "About fifty of the largest trees will yield an average of 1,500 oranges each, and they are breaking down under the weight of the delicious freight. Van Leuvin last year picked a hundred that would weigh a pound apiece."

The Los Angeles Herald has the annexed: "The culture of the banana has not, hitherto, been attended with success in California, but one in the yard of E. H. Workman in this city is now about three years old. The shuck has begun to open and the size of the fruit is plainly shown, each banana being about two inches in length."

—In Prince Edward's Island a man order to be eligible for membership in the Dominion Perliamant must possess real estate to the amount of £50 currency—about $167.

Application for Patent.

NOTICE NO. 19.

UNITED STATES' LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal., November 15, 1873.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Boushey Silver Mining Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, whose postoffice address and principal place of business is at San Francisco, California, has this day made application for patent for fifteen hundred (1,500) linear feet of the "BOUSHEY" Silver Quartz Lode, Vein or Deposit, being 750 feet northerly and 750 feet southerly from a post on the outcroppings of the vein at the center of the claim; with surface ground two hundred (200) feet wide, being 100 feet on each side of the middle of the vein; situate on unsurveyed land, in Township 16 South, Range 38 East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, in Cerro Gordo Mining District, Inyo County, California, said mining claim being described on the plat and field notes on file in this office as follows, viz.: Beginning at a post in mound of rocks in the easterly boundary of the claim; thence south 8 deg. 45 min. west (magnetic variation 15 deg. 40 min. east) eleven (11) chains and 36 links to a post marked, "P. 3, B. S. M. Co." in mound of rocks at southeasterly corner of claim; thence north eighty-one (81) deg. 15 min., west three (3) chains and four (4) links to a post marked, "P. 2, B. S. M. Co." in mound of rocks at southwesterly corner of claim, said last described line passing through a post, marked, "P. B. B. S. M. Co.," at the middle of the southern end boundary of claim, from which LAST described post the corner on 4th Standard Parallel South, common to sections 3 and 4, in Township 17 South, Range 38 East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, bears south 37 deg. 26 min. 48 sec. west, distant 437 chains and 78 links; thence from said post marked, "P. 2, B. S. M. Co.," north eight (8) deg. 45 min., east 22 chains and seventy-two (72) links, to a post marked, "P. 1, B. S. M. Co.," at northwesterly corner of claim, whence a pine tree eight inches in diameter bears north 54 deg. 30 min. west, distant 33 links; thence from said last described post south 81 deg. 15 min., east along the northern end boundary of claim 3 chains and 4 links to a post marked, "P. 4, B. S. M. Co.," in mound of rocks at northeasterly corner of claim at a point about three hundred and seventy-five (375) feet lower than the summit of Buena Vista Peak, from which last named post a pine tree 15 inches in diameter bears north 36 deg. east, distant one (1) chain and 42 links; thence from said last described post, south 8 deg. 45 min. west, 11 chains and 36 links to the place of beginning, containing 6 acres and 91-100 of an acre of land more or less, said claim being situate on Buena Vista Mountain, and distant about one mile more less southerly or southeasterly from the town of Cerro Gordo, and having been located by Stephen Boushey, November 14, 1872, record of which was made the same day in Vol. —, Page —, records of Cerro Gordo Mining District, Inyo county, California.

The United States Lode claim adjoins this claim on the south, and for still more specific description see the official plat and field notes on file in this office and the plat posted on the claim itself.

Application for Patent.

NOTICE NO. 18.

UNITED STATES' LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal., November 11, 1873.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO WHOM IT MAY concern that an application will be made by A. F. Bryant and George K. Porter to the Government of the United States for a patent to the following described gold and silver mining claim, known as the Dunderburg Mining Claim, and mill-site, situated in Castle Peak Mining District, Mono county, State of California, being bounded: On the north by the Boston and Keystone Consolidated Mining claim; on the south by the Segregated Dunderburg Mining Claim, and more particularly described as follows, to-wit: On unsurveyed land being in Township No. 3 north, Range No. 25 east, Mount Diablo Meridian, in district of lands subject to sale at the United States Land Office at Independence, California, and more particularly described in the field notes of survey as follows viz.: For connecting line commence at corner to section 16, 17, 20 and 21, Township No. 3 north, Range No. 25 east, Mount Diablo Meridian, variation 15 degrees 30 minutes east; thence south 56 deg. 48 min. west, 115.70 chains to post set in stone mound for north center of Dunderburg mine. For survey of exterior boundaries of mine commence at Post set for south center of claim; thence variation 15 deg. 30 min. east, North 66¾ deg. east, 1.54 chains to post set for southeast corner; thence north 21 deg. 53 min. west, 12.12½ chains to post and mound set for northeast corner of claim; thence south 66¾ deg. west, 3.08 chains to post set for northwest corner of claim; thence south 21 deg. 53 min. east, 12.12½ chains to post and mound set for southwest corner of claim; thence north 66¾ deg. east, 1.54 chains to place of beginning, and containing 3.78-100 acres. And for mill site, begin at post and mound set for corner to mill site, from which the southeast corner of the Dunderberg mine bears south 29½ deg west 8.08 chains; thence variation 16 deg. east, north 1 deg., west 10.00 chains to post set for northwest corner; thence north 89 deg., east 5.00 chains to post set for northeast corner; thence south 1 deg., east 10.00 chains to post set for southeast corner; thence south 89 deg., west 5.00 chains to place of beginning, and containing 5 acres. The mining claim having been located on the 10th of July, 1867, and of record in the mining records of the Castle Peak mining district, Mono county California, said claim being particularly described in the diagram filed with said application.

All persons holding any adverse claim thereto are hereby required to present the same before the Register and Receiver of the United States Land Office at Independence, California, within sixty days from the date of posting and publication hereof.

Special Notice.

All subscriptions and transient advertisements must invariably be paid for in advance. Advertisements, to insure insertion, should be handed in on or before 6 o'clock P. M. of each Friday.

As Usual.

The last shooting occurred in Cerro Gordo about noon last Monday. Robert Stevens, a Cornishman, and a workingman of good reputation, got into an altercation with another Cornishman named Joseph Cole, during which Stevens fired two shots, both taking effect in Cole's left side, a little above the kidney. Dr. Grant was called at once and thought it possible that the wounded man might recover, though the wounds are very dangerous. Stevens was taken before Justice Van Kleek, and after due examination was committed to jail, arriving here the next day. Whisky, as usual, was an active agent in producing the unfortunate affair.

Busy.

Both the flouring mills of the valley, which we have recently visited, are operating to their fullest capacity, and at present are turning out unexceptionable work. The mill of Russel & Bro., at Bishop, we believe to be one of the completest ever constructed in any country, though of course there are many capable of doing more work, but none of doing it better. That of Bell & Bro., west of Camp Independence, has also been refitted and overhauled, making it second only to that at Bishop. One of the best evidences of our agricultural and industrial progress is the fact that both of these institutions have plenty to do. The Bishop Creek mill received no less than 40,863 pounds of grain from different patrons on the 19th instant.

The Big Flume.

The Cottonwood flume was completed some days ago to a point about three miles from the lake shore. As it is perfectly accessible to wagons, the further extension is temporarily suspended. Between times, while running down lumber and wood for coal, planks and timbers for the completion of the flume itself are being sawed and sent down. It is gratifying to know that with all its great length and tremendous descent, the flume works to a charm, passing boards, timbers and wood with equal facility and dispatch, sufficient to make one's head swim.

Another Officer.

We are pleased to know that we are soon to have another commissioned officer at the Post—Lieut. John B. Clague, 12th Infantry, has been transferred to Company "D," the company at the Post. The Lieutenant is expected to arrive with his family about the 30th instant. He served as Second Lieutenant with Capt. MacGowan in Arizona up to the time the company was ordered to this post, since which time he has been east on leave of absence. He was recently promoted to a Frst Lieutenancy.

Off to the Wars.

The Assemblyman elect from this side of the mountains sailed out this morning for Sacramento, and rumor hath it that he will follow the example of the honorable gentlemen from Kern and Fresno counties and go not alone. He has promised a weekly letter from the Capital, the reception of which we look forward to with considerable interest.

Died.

Robert Cole, mentioned elsewhere as having been shot by Stevens in Cerro Gordo, died of his wounds about six o'clock on Thursday morning. Some time previous to his death, it is said, he acknowledged that Stevens was right in shooting, since he (Cole) had made an unprovoked assault upon Stevens, who shot in self defense.

New Assuager.

Tom May has turned his thirst assuaging establishment, the Aldine saloon, over to T. F. A. Connelly who in person, or by his popular deputy, Fred Grothey, will dispense coolers to order with the greatest neatness and dispatch. If you don't pertain to the Tanks go and see for yourself.

Thrown Up His Commish.

Hickey Hood has thrown up his clerkship with Harris & Rhine, and departed for Tulare for a load of garden sass. Hickey has been employed by the above firm for a week past carrying brick to "the man at the top who does all the work."

Mining Sale.

A one-half interest of the Wonder mine, Panamint district, has been sold for $20,000. A San Francisco party by the name of Rains is the purchaser, and R. T. Stewart ("Bob") is the party selling.

Gone to Yarmany.

Baron Louie Munzinger, guaranteed to be the cussedest Dutchman in the United States, the other day bade Lone Pine a farewell for a time, while he and his family take a sojourning in der Faderland.

Pasturage.

Parties wanting Winter pasturage are referred to Judge Gunnison's ad in another place.

The Courts.

The County Court met on Monday last, and there being no business of importance before it, adjourned for the term.

Following is the summary of the District Court business since Friday, the 14th instant:

John C. Morrison vs. C. D. Begole—Judgment for plaintiff.

San Felipe Mining Company vs. R. Dias—Pending.

Brady vs. King—Pending.

These two cases were settled by consent of parties, after a full hearing, altogether occupying several days time: Brady (administrator) vs. Darrah & Mairs, and Harrold vs. Brady.

John Baxter vs. Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company—Pending.

John Simpson and wife vs. Wm. H. Van Arsdale—Pending.

"Strong Whisky."

In a region like ours, where tarantula juice is peddled out at the rate of two bits a glass, it behooves the impecunious admirer of the ardent to go slow and allow a long time to elapse between drinks. Such at least seems to have been the experience of an Eastern gentleman (whose name isn't Smith or Jones and who lives not a thousand miles from the lively town of Independence), who recently took up his abode in this county with his family, augmenting the census by an addition of some sixteen or more inhabitants. A few days since, accompanied by two of his sons, he visited the neighboring "store," and inquired of the clerk if he had any strong whiskey to sell. He was answered in the affirmative, a sample of the article was produced, tasted and pronounced sufficiently strong. A bottle of the precious fluid was purchased, and the party started to go home, when the old gentleman asked the clerk if he had any objection to himself and boys playing a game of cards "for the drinks." Permission was cheerfully given, and father and sons were soon engaged in the mysteries of seven-up. The old man lost the first game, the barkeeper smilingly set out three glasses in happy ignorance of what was to follow. At the close of the "first ten" one of the boys addressed his parent with "Pass the bottle, pap!" which the old man proceeded to do, a drink was taken all around, and the game proceeded—the bottle being passed at the close of each succeeding game, the virtuous indignation of the barkeeper being only equaled by the mirth of the bystanders.

His First Earthquake.

A young friend of ours (a recent importation into the county), perfectly rational on all other subjects, but who has an undisguised horror of earthquakes, has had his nervous temperament sadly impaired by the continual and never-ending stories of the big shake of two years ago, which it seems to be the self-imposed duty of some of our citizens to pour into the ears of every credulous and timid stranger who visits these parts. Night by night these yarns have gradually grown to such huge dimensions that the greatest wonder of our friend was that anybody or anything escaped its terrible effects. For ten days he has been anxiously apprehending some dire calamity of this nature, and succeeded in finding it on Thursday night last. At about the hour when graveyards yawn, and our friend was placidly dreaming of shakes of divers and sundry forms and dimensions, a terrible noise like the explosion of a twelve-gun battery of artillery and a very perceptible shaking of the house brought him to his feet with a yell that would have reflected credit on an untamed Apache, to find that the slats on the bed of his room-mate's bed had given way and left that unlucky individual in undisturbed possession of the floor—only this and nothing more. Our friend has "swored off" on earthquake stories.

Resigned.

W. L. Hunter, Supervisor elect and acting Supervisor to fill vacancy on the present term, finding it impossible to attend to the duties of the office, has tendered his resignation. Judge Hannah will appoint, most likely, a gentleman from Lone Pine. The are two very competent gentlemen spoken of there and one for Cerro Gordo, either of whom will be generally very acceptible, but we are hardly at liberty to mention names. T. K. Hutchison, the present President of the Board, and who is also declared the Supervisor elect, did not come forward to qualify, so we presume there is or will be a vacancy for his district, to be filled by appointment.

Inyo Pioneers.

We understand a formal notice will soon be promulgated with a view of securing the co-operation of all the old taboose eaters (untaxed aboriginees excepted) in the county in organizing a Society of Inyo Pioneers. This is undoubtedly a commendable movement, and one that ought to be carried out by all means. Let all the old "residenters" eat some taboose or "punkin straight" to freshen up their memories and be on hands.

Query.

We'd like to know if Frank Linhart (it might be somebody else) of Mechanic's Hall, Lone Pine, means to "insinuate" anything of a matrimonial character by sending a box of No 1 bottles of lager and smoked "sassengers" to this office? However, it didn't matter; here's luck to the Hall and the next victim of matrimony, whether the latter comes from Lone Pine or Bishop Creek.

Conundrum.

George's Creek has recently enjoyed a short season of fistical skirmishing, wherein an hombre got very severely mauled for wasting a barrel of whiskey. The conundrum is: If the loss of one barrel of whiskey caused one fight, how many would result from the drinking of the same amount?

Gone for the Lobby.

Mr. Earl started out yesterday morning to begin his Winter's work of lobbying the State Legislature and the Congress of the United States. He carries with him the substantial wishes of divers men of means who love to turn an honest penny. We will see what we shall see if nothing happens. It would not be in the least surprising if Mr. Earl and his backers in their efforts to shear sombody may, themselves be shorn.

Benton.

A friend writing from Benton, under date of November 20th, says: Our town, although not boasting of great things or having any excitements, never goes backward. Mack & Powning's mill is pounding away, and Wetherell's does not stop a moment, night or day. One or two small buildings are being erected, also a house and barn are on the road from Aurora, to shelter hay and people here. Eugene Roscoe's wife died at Columbus last Saturday.

More Swamp Land.

A friend in Cerro Gordo writes that the water through the Cerro Gordo Water Company's pipes, will be running into Cerro Gordo in less than two weeks, and then "we'll have a chance to get some swamp land if it gets to slopping over."

Good.

A Reno party of miners and capitalists are expected at Bishop Creek, their mission being to examine and report upon the new mines of the Piute district.

The Trade Dollar.

The hope entertained of the "trade dollar" supplanting the Mexican dollar seems to be in a fair way for realization. Yesterday the Bank of California received a dispatch from the Oriental Bank corporation, London, announcing the receipt of intelligence from Canton that the trade dollars had been made legal tender there, although they had not yet been so accepted at Hongkong. There is little doubt, however, but that this recognition of their value at Canton will soon be followed by their general acceptance in the Orient, and our object will have been attained. It is worthy of note in this connection that the Nevada papers report this new coin as in considerable demand there, and some of them are disposed to think that its general introduction, when the country resumes specie payments, will be preferable to an adoption of Mr. Garnett's suggestion of a coin of mixed gold and silver.—S. F. Chronicle.

Wallapai.

We were shown yesterday, by Mr. L. A. Johnson, a silver brick just received by him as his first dividend from the New Era mine, Wallapai district. The brick is valued at $100, and will be sent to the mint at San Francisco for coinage. This mine is very rich, four hundred tons of the ore which were shipped to San Francisco some time since, netting the fortunate owners $300 per ton. If there were milling facilities in the district, this mine, as well as many others, would show rich returns. We understand that an offer was recently made of $60,000 for one of the mines in the district, and the offer was refused. Capitalists would do well to consult their own interest, and put up a first class mill.—Los Angeles Star, November 14th.

How to Iron Linen.

A Hearth and Home correspondent says linen that is placed immediately after being ironed near the stove or in the hot sun, is stiffer when dry than if permitted to dry slowly. It is a good plan to lay collars and small articles on a waiter, and set them on a kettle or other support on the stove till they are quite dry. Sometimes the iron will stick in a manner quite unaccountable; if it is rubbed on a board on which fine salt has been sprinkled, and then passed over a piece of brown paper with wax in its folds, the sticking propensities will be checked. A bowl of clear water and a clean old linen cloth are useful to remove any specks the linen may acquire before or while being ironed.

The Earthquake in Nevada.

Counselor Wells, who was engaged on Wednesday at Stillwater, Churchill county, says The Carson Appeal of November 9th, reports that on that day at that point there was a continuous earthquake of so great violence as that if there had happened to be any seven or eight story brick buildings there (which there are not, thank Heaven, at present.) they would have stood in great danger of being rattled about the ears of his clients. If the earth should open and swallow all of Churchill county it would chamber within its incandescent bowels eighty as pertinacious voters as ever executed a freeman's will as lightning does the will of God.

—An important order of Catholics in Iowa is the monks of St. Troppe, Dubuque county, who have one of the largest and best farms in the State, comprising over 3,000 acres, and an immense monastry.

—It is expected that the great Hoosac Tunnel, of Massachusetts, will be opened through its whole length on the 28th instant, but it will not be ready for the passage of trains till a year from that time.

—Excited wife (to her husband). "Do you not admit that woman has a mission?" Cool husband—"Yes my dear, she has—submission!" Great confusion in the domestic circle, and the husband calls on the family surgeon for a plaster.

—"How now!" we said to Jones this morning, finding him looking unusually cheerful and sprightly, notwithstanding the fact that he had been up nearly all night. "You don't seem much affected by the crisis?" And Jones merely remarked, "No such a thing. It's a boy."

A Blackguard's Comment.

[From Wilkes' Spirit of the Times, Nov. 8th.]

The Turf of last week gave a short notice of the death of Heenan, and in winding up a churlish paragraph had the following contemptible reference to Mrs. Heenan: "After being divorced from the Menken, Heenan married another actress, Miss Sarah Stevens, who, it is said, made him a good wife." And this is all these narrow-hearted hypocrites could say of a woman whose personal virtues were the pride of the profession, and who was known to all of Heenan's personal friends as the model of a tender, exemplary and faithful wife. The coarse creatures might have spared her sorrows this cruel and unnecessary fling. The same short pargraph which perpetrates this outrage contains other falsehoods, as everything that Bruce and Busbey utters, always does. It says that Mr. Wilkes went to England in 1860 to manage Heenan's match with Sayers, when it is notorious to all the parties connected with that affair, that Mr. Wilkes (who happened to be in London on business during the Spring of 1860,) did not see or speak to Heenan even once from the date of his (Mr. Wilkes') arrival until the evening after the fight with Sayers. He then consented to see the poor fellow, at the earnest entreaty of Heenan's personal friends, mainly because Heenan was an American who had been abused, and who now needed a defender stronger than himself. Heenan himself asked this aid from Mr. Wilkes, and he subsequently, in his frank generosity, used to take great pleasure in declaring that if it had not been for Mr. Wilkes' articles in the London press in his defense, he would have been driven ignominiously from England, as the loser of the fight, instead of being regarded as its winner, by forcing Sayers to lay down the champion belt. Heenan always credited this last exploit to Mr. Wilkes, and that it was purely an exploit of writing and diplomacy, is obvious from one fact alone. That fact is, that Mr. Wilkes was presented to Her Majesty the Queen of England by the American Minister, Hon. George M. Dallas, in the following month of June, a presentation which could not have been made if Mr. Wilkes had been a party to the prize fight. The Turf's falsehoods and inuendoes, however, are of a piece with everything these Bruces and Busbey say. But about the most contemptible thing toey have ever done, is the manner in which they have made Mrs. John C. Heenan, nee Sarah Stevens, figure on an equal moral platform with the Menken.

The Battle Mountain Stage Robberies.

[From The Reese River Reveille Nov. 8]

Sheriff Emory arrived on the Battle Mountain stage this morning, having in charge Shep. Wixon, whom he arrested at Battle Mountain yesterday on suspicion of complicity in the recent robberies of the Battle Mountain stage. One of the principal circumstances leading to the arrest is the finding of a coat which was in transmission, in the express box, from San Francisco to Allen A. Curtis, agent of the Manhattan S. M. Co., of this city. Wixon tells conflicting stories as to how he came in possession of the coat, saying it was given to him in Salt Lake; that he bought it in Utah, and other similar yarns. When Curtis became aware of the loss of his coat he sent to San Francisco for a similar one, which was this morning compared with the one found in Wixon's possession, and, to use Emory's language, "they were as near like as two eggs." Shep. Wixon is not unknown to fame in these parts. In 1871 he was accused of stealing horses in Eureka, and brought back from Utah on that charge and incarcerated in the Lander county jail. At the same time there was confined in the jail a woman named Hattie Funk, alias Kate Forest, who was charged with the murder of her husband at Eureka. Wixon was acquitted on the charge of horse-stealing, and as soon as liberated proceeded to release his fellow prisoner. Aided by Wixon, Hattie disguised in male attire, escaped from the jail. She stayed in hiding for a short time, but becoming hungry or tired of roughing it in the hills, came in and delivered herself up, was tried for the murder of her husband and acquitted. Wixon was indicted for aiding a prisoner to escape; was tried, and convicted and sentenced to three years in the State Prison. After serving out a year he was pardoned on account of ill health, and nothing has since been seen or heard of him in this vicinity from the time of his departure to the State Prison to the present. There are many other suspicious circumstances connecting Wixon with being concerned in the recent robberies, but in order that the ends of justice may be furthered we refrain from giving them at present. At some future day he will have an examination, when all the facts in the case will probably be brought out.

Traveler's Alphabet.

This is a game to set juvenile wits to work. The players sit in a circle or round a table. The first one starts by saying to his left-hand neighbor, "I am going to America" (or any place commencing with A). The one so addressed will turn to his or her left-hand neighbor, and ask, "What will you do there?" The reply must come prompt from the third one, 'Ask for apples," or anything commencing with A. In every instance the verbs and nouns must commence with the letter the traveler is journeying to; for instance "I am going to Bath." What will you do there?" "Bathe baby." "I am going to China." "What will you do there?" "Chop chirs." "I am going to Dover." "What will you do there?" "Dive deep." "I am going to Ealing." "What will you do there?" "Eat eggs." And so on throughout the alphabet. Should a player hesitate while five can be counted, a forfeit is the result; also if any mistake is made in following with the right letter.

A Political Diagnosis.

[From Harper's Weekly.]

"Corruption wins more than honesty." It is true in politics as in every other department of human activity. When corruption begins in a party, when those who are unworthy representatives of the party principle become its leaders, and its measures betray the recklessness and insolence of power, the party begins to decline. If to-day there are many Republicans who look gravely upon their party prospects, it is because they see it apparently identified with certain unworthy men and measures. It is no answer to such Republicans to say that there are bad men in all parties, and especially in one so supreme. That is freely admitted. No party ought to be judged by its worst members; but when those who are not the best control a party, and when the best cannot honestly defend its measures, it is idle to suppose that it will not be judged by those men and those measures. We do not say that such is the present condition of the Republican party, but there is no sincere Republican who reads these words who does not see much in the party tendency that makes him restless and apprehensive.

Deadly Weapons.

The deadly use of the pistol and knife are daily becoming of more frequent occurrence. The journals in all parts of the country teem with reports of fatal affrays and cold-blooded murders, and the reputation of the Pacific coast has so long suffered in this respect is lately being fully earned by many Eastern States and cities. Chicago papers say the report of the deadly weapon may be heard almost hourly in that city, and threaten prompt and effectual resorts unless a check is placed upon it. In our own vicinity within a week, one victim has been laid in the cold embrace of death, and another stands on the very threshold, only to cross the dark portals perhaps before another sun rises. There is no remedy for all this, even in certain prompt retribution for such offenses; but a material preventive may be found in an effectual proscription of the carriage of all murderous weapons. Take the pistol and the knife from the murderous ruffian by a law which will make it so serious an offense that he dare not carry them, and the respectable portion of the community will have neither desire or need of them. Crime will thereby be diminished, and human life find a protection the present laws in that respect cannot afford him.—Los Angeles Express.

Sick of It.

The people of Bakersfield are getting ratrer shakey in their fidelity to their flourishing town, and the Town Marshal seems to have a hard job of it, in collecting taxes. It would be a safe bet that Bakersfield will petition the Board of Supervisors before another year rolls round to reduce it to other places of its size, not so pretentious—a village. We ante first.—Havilah Miner.

THE SUN.

Weekly. Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

—A mill at Minneapolis, Minn., is sawing an average of 145,000 feet of lumber per day.

—A water spout on Lake Erie was recently seen from the summit of Little Mountain, near Cleveland.

—There is one school district in Marathon county, Wis., which has 364 more square miles than the entire State of Rhode Island.

—Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm claims the credit of suggesting the system of red-light signals now in use on all railroads in this country.

—Nearly $200,000 rent are annually paid by the National Government for private buildings, which are used for offices in Washington.

—At St. Louis the courts are now occupied with litigation between two street beggars, father and daughter, over $15,000, the proceeds of several years' collections on the streets.

—"Fifteen hundred skilled mechanics"—think of that—wandering about Boston streets to day with nothing to do.—Boston Transcript.

To be followed by the sad sequel of "nothing to wear and nothing to eat."

—Frank Finney, for foolishly and furiously flogging Fanny Fenton, was fined twenty five dollars, at Fredonia, Florida. Finney was a fishy fellow and Fanny was a fickle, flirting, female, fond of fun and frivolity.

—A tax collector in Vermont was beset by two highwaymen the other night, but he snapped his goose quill toothpick, appeared to present a revolver, and they ran away and left forty yards of silk in a satchel.

—A New Orleans street car driver was hauled off his car the other day and shot for running over a terrier dog. They wouldn't have said anything about an old man or two, but the dog was valuable.

—Dicken's works have been decided too immoral for general reading, by the managers of of the Vermont State School Library. These are the kind of men who attend funerals in green kid gloves.

—Man power is so scrace in North Charleston, N. H., that a bevy of ladies, in view of the situation, turned out one day last week and cleared the stones from one of the principal streets.

—An Oswego paper says: "Seventy-one umbrellas were stolen from the Baptist church in Oswego one rainy night last week." This proves nothing save that the Baptists dislike being "sprinkled"

—Hazing is not so popular at Yale College this season, as was once the case. A freshman, measuring fifty four inches round the breast, and standing six feet five, showed the boys where the laugh came in, and they couldn't find any sport in it.

—A Western newspaper, wishing to do the handsome thing by the local doctor, recently made the following announcement: "Dr. Crawford was called, but under his prompt and skilful treatment the young man died on Wednesday afternoon." We don't know what the doctor said to this; but if the editor of that newspaper is taken sick we advise him not to call on Crawford.

How The Romans Lived.

If anything was wanted to give us an idea of Roman magnificence, we would turn our eyes from public monuments, demoralized games and grand processions, we would forget the statues and the marbles, which outnumbered the living inhabitants, so numerous that one hundred thousand have been recovered and still embedish Italy; and would dive and into the lower sphere of material life—those things which attest luxury and taste—to ornaments, dresses, sumptuous living and rich furniture.

The art of using metals and cutting precious stones surpassed anything known at the present day. In the decoration of houses, in social entertainments, in cookery, the Romans were remarkable. The mosaic, signet rings, cameos, bracelets, bronzes, chains, vases, couches, banquetting tables, lamps, chariots, colored glass, gilding, mirrors, mattresses, cosmetics, potteries, all attest great elegance and beauty.

The tables of thuga root and Delian bronze were as expensive as the sideboards of Spanish walnut, so much admired in the Great Exhibition at London. Wood and ivory were carved as exquisitly as in Japan or China. Mirrors were made of polished silver. Glass cutters could imitate the colors of precious stones so well that the Portland vase, taken from the tomb of Alexander Severus, was long considered as a genuine serdonyx; brass could be hardened so as to cut stone.

The palace of Nero glittered with gold and jewels. Perfumes and flowers were showered from ivory ceilings. Æliogabulus were hung with cloth and gold, enriched with jewels. His beds were silver, and his tables of gold. Tiberius gave millions of sesterces for a picture for his bed room. A banquet dish of Dæsillus weighed 500 pounds silver.

The cups of the Druses were of gold, Tunics were embroidered with the figures of various animals. Sandals were garnished with precious stones. Pauline wore jewels, when she made visits, valued at $800,000. Drinking cups were engraved with scenes from the poets. Libraries were adorned with busts and with tortoise shell, and covered with gorgeous purple.

The Roman grandees rode in gilded chariots, bathed in marble baths, dined in golden plate, drank from crystal cups, slept on beds of down, reclined on luxuriant couches, wore embroidered robes, and were adorned with precious stones. They ransacked the earth and the seas for rare dishes for their banquets, and ornamented their houses with carpets from Babylon, bronzes from Corinth, statues from Athens—whatever in short, was precious or curious in the most distant countries. The luxuries of the bath almost exceeded belief, and on the walls were magnificent frescoes and paintings, exhibiting an inexhaustive productiveness in landscape and mythological scenes.

Foolscap Paper.

The term of "foolscap" to designate a certain size of paper, no doubt has puzzled many an anxious inquirer. It appears that Charles I., of England, granted numerous monopolies for the support of the Government, among others the manufacture of paper. The water mark of the finest sort was the royal arms of England. The consumption of this article was great, and large fortunes were made by those who purchased the exclusive right to vend it. This, among other monopolies, was set aside by the Parliament that brought Charles I. to the scaffold; and, by way of showing their contempt for the King, they ordered the royal arms to be taken from the paper, and a fool with his cap and bells to be substituted. It is now over two hundred years since the fool's cap was taken from the paper, but still the paper of the size which the Rump Parliament ordered for their journals bears the name of the water mark placed there as an indignity to King Charles.

—The editor of the Huntsville Herald pops the question in his paper in this public fashion: "There is a girl in this town who can carry our smokehouse keys for life if she'll only say the word."

A Most Extraordinary Phenomenon.

It was on a moonlight night that Pennypacker, while walking by the riverside at Norristown, came across Jones standing on the bank in a condition of intoxication, gazing stupidly into the water. When Jones saw Pennypacker, he said to him:

"Mizz r Bennyback'r 'm very glad you've come. I've been stan'nin' here considerin' a moz extr'ordinary phenom'nom."

"What is it, Jones?"

"Moz extr'ordinay ph'nom'non th't ever came under my observation, Mr. Bennybacker—the moz extr'ordinary"

"What is the nature of the phenomenon, Mr. Jones?"

"I zay, Mizzer Bennybacker, id'z very exdr'ordinary. D'you 'bzerve that?"

Then Jones gazed and pointed into the water, putting his head on one side and then on the other. Then he would draw back as if to get the phenomenon in a new light, and finally he doubled up both fists and attempted to look through them, and all the time he kept muttering to himself—

"Very 'stonishin' circumstance altogether. Moz remark'ble freak ov nature idz ever bin my lod t'obzerve. Can't cound for id upon any theory wad ever."

"Well Mr. Jones, what is it that surprises you?"

"Mizzer Bennybacker, cas' y'r eye down there. D' you 'bzerve anything of a 'straordinary nature?"

"No, Jones, nothing; there is nothunusual there that I can see."

"Thadz moz extr'ordinary zirgumstanz ov all. Don' you berceve the the moon down there, Mizzer Bennybacker?" said Jones, pointing to the water.

"Certainly I do."

"Well, Mizzer Bennybacker, dozzen it strike you as a moz incomprehenzible phenom'non, now?"

"Of course not."

"Well, Mizzer Bennybacker, you may be drunk ur you may be zober, but in all my 'xperience I never before found myzelf vorty thousand miles 'bove the moon. Id's an incomprehenzible circumstanz, Mizzer Bennybacker, how you and I shud uv got up here an' the moon down there without our being 'ware of the fagd when I'm perfegdly certain I'm not standin' on my head.

Then Pennypacker led Jones calmly home and put him to bed, and he slept off his surprise at the extraordinary phenomenon.—Max Adeler.

Never.

The belle who originated the Grecian bend is stopping at Saratoga. Remorse is painted on her once cheerful countenance. She says, though she bent so much, she never arrived at a satisfactory beau.

—In Ceylon, the marriage ceremony is performed by tying the couple together by the thumbs. In this country they are usually put together by the ears.

—The Missionary General Committee of the Methodist Church have appropriated $25,000 to the German Mission in California.

—A Georgia "tracker" was offered our dollars per day to labor, when he exclaimed, "Sir, d'ye s'pose I'd work when I've just discovered a fresh coon track?"

—The editor of a Kentuckey paper was thrown into a mill pond by a prize fighter, and is said to have swallowed some water for the first time since his boyhood.

—A Sheboygan man said: "Lucy Smith, I can't fool away my time courting; will you marry me?" And Lucy put her little hand in his and said she would.

—A watering place correspondent says "that very few of the bathers bathe at the West End," whereupon Mrs. Partington says she "had an idea that they bathed all over."

—We cannot be too careful how we play with the English language. A short time since, a married lady, while admiring the falls from Warbunton Avenue Bridge, remarked: "Isn't that dam nice?"

—A Newark man said that Noah's ark was one thousand feet long. Chambers said it was only five hundred, and wouldn't allow another inch even after he had been fatally stabbed in the back.

—Scene in a Western Court: Judge—"Have you anything to offer to the Court before sentence is passed on you?" Prisoner—"No, Judge; I had $10, but my lawyer took that."

—An unstamped letter was deposited in a Western post-office last week, and underneath the address was the indorsement: "Let her slide, P. M.; she's all hunk; inside air one of them post hole keerds."

—A melting Good Friday sermon being preached in a country church, all wept except one man, who on being asked why he did not weep as well as the rest, replied: "Oh, I belong to another parish."

—We do not remember ever to have met with anything like the cool self-complacency exhibited in the following from a Georgia newspaper: "The amiable and delicious Miss Pilkington, whose charms of mind and person have turned the heads of our gallants, now does up her hair in braids, and patronizes this paper exclusively in her personal make-up."

—Additional reports from Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri, Kansas and Ohio confirm the estimated falling off in the Irish potato crop in those States, which in 1870 produced over 43,000,000 bushels. The loss at the given rate would aggregate over 16,000,000 bushels.

A CAUSE FOR WAR.

It seems to be conceded by all classes and parties throughout the United States that the late Spanish atrocities are good cause for war. This is undoubtedly the opinion of the President and every member of his Cabinet, including Secretary Fish, who has been reputed as a Spanish sympathizer, therefore war we will surely have unless, at the last moment, the shaking Spanish Government decides upon tendering the amplest apology and reparation. Peace on such terms is ruinous to the new Republican Government of Spain, while war cannot do less than destroy it entirely. The people of our own country are anxious for the fight, for they are satisfied it will be sharp and decisive. But in figuring up anticipated profit and loss, it should not be forgotten that whatever the former may be, the latter will, for a time at least, more than offset it. The ocean will swarm with privateers that will sweep our commerce from the seas, spite of all that can be done to prevent it. England is anxious for the fight to come on, for good reasons on some counts, doubtless, but some also that forbode no good to us. Her merchants have many fast ships suitable for privateering, and guns and men to go with them, and and many of them will soon be found flying the Spanish flag and to our cost; but the certainty of this can have little or no weight in shaping the course of our Government at this stage of the proceedings.

Offers Some Advice.

Our intellectual admirer, the large-brained editor of The Bakersfield Swamp Organ, seems to have recently had another touch of the intermittent or something that has soured his sweet temper. At least he finds it necessary to drop his sneering, stereotyped form of "arguing" with his superiors, and, as his only resort, falls naturally enough into imbecile vituperation. His affected mental superiority would be amusing if was not quite so absurd. But we really believe the poor soul is partially aware of his own weakness, and knows full well that if he is not vituperative he is nothing. However, if we rightly interpret it, even he can sometimes say a word worth attention. He concludes a notice of the editor of this paper—not in his hundred times repeated sarcastic mass of witless verbiage—in these words:

> If he would take our advice and attend only to such light and ephemeral matters as are not beyond his strength, his editorial reputation might rise a few degrees above the lowest point of depression.

We suppose Mr. Hardnut means by this that we have reached "the lowest point of depression" by having stooped to bandy personalities with such as he. He is quite correct—nobody certainly could get any lower than that.

The Tax Decision.

The Vallejo Chronicle says: "The leading conundrum before the California press for solution now is, did the Supreme Court in their decision on Friday express any opinion with reference to the taxation of mortgages, and if so what is it? There is a proposition on foot to bring out the talented genius who got at the merits of the Schleswig-Holstein difficulty and mastered the intricacies of the Louisiana muddle, and bring his talents to bear upon the conundrum. He is probably the only man who can make it plain.

The Next Message.

It is said President Grant's next message will be the most important ever laid before Congress. It may hardly reach that rank, but it will have a greater number of important things to consider, not the least of which will be the financial question, although the Spanish imbroglio will be of the greatest immediate interest.

The First Dispatch.

The following from Gen. Schofield in San Francisco to Gen. Crook at Prescott, Arizona, is a copy of the first dispatch sent over the new Arizona telegraph; it is dated October 29:

"The Secretary of War desires me to send you his congratulations upon your appointment this day as Brigadier General. I add my hearty congratulations to those of the Secretary."

Postoffice Banks.

It is said that the Postmaster General, in his annual report, will recommend the establishment of Postoffice Savings Banks. Should this suggestion be acted favorably upon, it will be of great advantage to the people.

STANDS BY HIS GUNS.

The Borax Miner of the 15th inst., omits its usual heavy encyclopedical article on borax, and devotes a column to a review of what it designates "The George Watson murder." We do not deem it necessary to review The Miner's quibbling effort in detail. It is enough to say that we, in our second account of the affair, took especial pains to arrive at all the facts, and that all incidents therein mentioned were promulgated as actual truths capable of absolute proof. The parties from whom they were derived, some seven or eight in number, distinctly stated their willingness to sustain their statements under oath. Without quoting The Miner's charges specifically, we reply to the more important in this way: We deny emphatically and unequivocably that we ever at any time tried to throw the odium of the killing of Watson upon Lindsey Lewis; that we ever attempted to prove that E. A. Reddy did not fire the fatal shot; that we ever attempted any "legal arguments" in the sense implied by The Miner, for any other purpose whatever than what was there specifically set forth, to wit: to give a true and full narrative of all the circumstances, let the facts stand for or against whomsoever they might, leaving the public to make their own deductions. This we did do as fairly to all as any reasonable person could demand, and we certainly think The Miner's abortive effort to disprove them by mere generalities very nearly bordering on the indecent. We have no reason to doubt The Miner's honesty, but it is perfectly evident that it has not the courage to admit that it has been led into error, but prefers to support a position once taken by any quibble at command. Take this extract for instance, which is in keeping with the whole:

"THE INDEPENDENT reiterates the statement that Watson abused the papoose—a statement which it cannot sustain—and tells about Watson backing the Indian George up against Peterson's bar and calling him "Peterson! Peterson! Peterson!" as he struck him time and again in the face. It is not possible for any human being to believe that story without assuming that Watson was crazy or raving drunk at the time. That little romance of the Indian George lying in wait for Watson with a gun would read very pleasantly in one of Cooper's novels, where the noble red man appears in all his glory of feathers, paint and beads, but to those who know the Piute and Digger the story is a little too thin."

The incidents referred to here all occurred exactly as stated, except that they were too mildly stated. Watson not only struck Indian George in the face with his fist, but struck him across the cords of the neck with his revolver with such force as to really endanger the Indian's life. The incidents were mentioned—particularly that of the Indian having been advised by several good men to "lay" for Watson, who had so shamefully abused his child—to show the esteem in which the murderous desperado's acts were regarded by the best citizens of the town.

The circumstances of the killing, as we have previously stated, were duly investigated, first by a Coroner's jury (and before a word of the affair ever appeared in print), and secondly by a regular Grand Jury, and in neither case was a scintilla of evidence elicited to justify either The Borax Miner, this paper or any person, in asserting that E. A. Reddy, or any other person in particular, had fired the fatal shot, much less the wild assertion that it was a "cold-blooded murder," committed by the person named because he loved to shoot men merely to see them "squirm." That was a reckless, unwarranted and foolish assertion, as The Miner may yet have occasion to know, either to its own cost or that of its "reliable" informants', one of whom at least is perfectly well known here, as well as the malicious object sought to be obtained, which, we again assert, was intended to reach clear of the ostensible, alleged criminal. We can understand very well why this was so with respect to one of the parties aimed at, but why this paper should also be included and condemned in the manner it was, is not clear. Certainly one of these informants has the best of reasons to thank this paper for its forbearance.

We have no objections to be considered as the "champion of horse-thieves and murderers," or rather of those who are accused of such crimes, when we believe the accusations unjust. As a rule, we would prefer to err on that side than the other, knowing as we do that such reports, based as they must always are, on mere ex parte statements, are liable to convey very unjust impressions, often of a kind that no amended statement, however well intended, can again set right. We commend this point to the careful consideration of The Miner, and dismiss a subject which from first to last was in truth of no more personal concern to us, or The Borax Miner either, than any other of the numerous similar events it has been so often our duty to record.

SPANISH SAVAGERY.

Since the discovery of America, the island of Cuba has been owned and governed by Spain. For centuries it has acknowledged allegiance to the Spanish Crown, and during all the revolutions (there were many of them) in the several Spanish colonies on this side of the Atlantic, Cuba ever remained faithful to the mother country. The revenue derived from this island, which for its richness and fertility was called the "Gem of the Antilles," was immense, and all that its inhabitants received in return therefor was a Spanish Governor to exact tribute, and Spanish bayonets to enforce its payment. A few years ago the people of the island, driven to desperation by the exactions of the Government in which they had no voice, concluded to assume the management of their own domestic affairs. They asked the mother country for permission to do so. The reply was "death to the men who had the audacity to ask for Cuban independence." This did not intimidate the patriots, though an army was sent to put it into execution. The Republican standard was unfurled, and the people rallied around it. For years they have held it aloft, against the combined power of foreign bayonets and native traitors. Repeatedly during their long struggle against tyranny, have they appealed to the United States Government for sympathy and assistance. They have asked to be recognized as belligerents, but a Republican Administration, notwithstanding its platform declarations, ignored their existence, and, in fact, when it exhibited any feeling at all in the matter, it was unmistakeably against the Republic of Cuba. All manner of atrocities have been committed by Spain during this struggle, yet they have been overlooked or unnoticed by all the great civilized nations. To cap the climax, on the 1st of November, a vessel sailing under American colors, with American citizens aboard, was fired at and captured on the high seas by a Spanish man-of-war. The vessel, which was called the Virginius, was taken to Santiago de Cuba, a port held by the Spaniards, and her crew treated as pirates—tried by court-martial and many of them butchered. As it is well known that many of them were American citizens and that the vessel was sailing under the American flag, the outrage has aroused the nation, and the cry of "revenge on the Spanish butchers" echoes through the land. It has reached the ears of the Government, and though it has not come to any definite conclusion, it is determined to concentrate a fleet of war vessels in Cuban waters But small hopes are entertained that our sleepy Secretary of State, Hamilton Fish, who is suspected of strongly sympathizing with Spain, will adopt prompt measures to avenge the outrage, but it is hoped that President Grant will assume the responsibility of doing so. It will at least insure the success of the Cuban patriots, end a brutal war, and result in the establishment of an independent republic, and forever, let us hope, put an end to European governments upon American soil. True, there still remain monarchical dependencies on this continent, but those remaining are not held by effete, irresponsible powers, only capable of creating storms of danger to peaceable neighbors, without the ability to make reparation. We believe the true interest of our Government is opposed to the annexation of Cuba or any additional territory whatever. We have enough of our own now, but we want Cuba a free republic in sympathy with and modeled after our own, and we profoundly hope that this Virginius affair will lead to that result, though it involves us in a costly war.

Will Decline.

A Washington dispatch says that the succession to Senator Carpenter as President of the Senate will come up in caucus at or before the holidays. It is presumed that Carpenter will anticipate the dilemma of his party colleagues by declining the nomination. Senator Anthony is weary of the position, and it is thought that Frelinghuysen will be chosen to give the chair tone. Little attempt will be made to reorganize the committees in the Senate, as the Senators were all provided with places during the special session last March.

Fire in a Print Shop.

Last Wednesday's mail brought us a scorched, sickly looking printed slip, full of monks and friars, dated Eureka, Nev., November 21st, the following copy of which explains itself. We are truly sorry for our friend Cassidy's misfortune, but will not add another pang by allusions to a phœnix. But still he must allow us to say that we hope soon to see The Sentinel trigged out nicer than ever. We give The Sentinel's Extra, the slip referred to, according to copy, as follows:

WE STILL LIVE.

With its hitherto fair proportions greatly reduced, The Sentinel greets its patrons. The cause of this curtailment is doubtless understood throughout the State. On the morning of the 20th, about half past 12 o'clock, a fire broke out in one of those incendiary institutions, a Chinese wash-house, a few doors south of The Sentinel building, and in three minutes the whole block was in flames. Our dwelling, furniture, clothing, printing office, including presses of every kind, went with the rest. Friends tried hard to assist us, but little of value was saved. From the printing office a small proof press, three cases of advertising type and three galleys of matter were all that could be rescued from the flames. This is the sum total of our office, and it is with scanty outfit that we attempt once more to appear before the public. A brand new office, however, is en route from San Francisco, by the very fastest mode of transportation, and the same will be put in shape on its arrival just as rapidly as willing hands can accomplish it. Our building, a little larger than the old one, is already half completed.

We haven't the type to give many particulars of the conflagration. The principal losers are: Dan Morgan, three thousand five hundred dollars; Mrs. Goulette, two thousand five hundred dollars; Mr. Adolph, one thousand five hundred dollars; D. C. Sherlock, one thousand five hundred dollars; Dr. Chamblin, three thousand five hundred dollars; McMillan & Booth, two thousand five hundred dollars; Luther Clark, one thousand dollars; H. Vorberg, two thousand five hundred dollars; C. Schaeffer & Co., two thousand dollars; J. M. Kellogg, seven hundred dollars, and The Sentinel twelve thousand dollars

The above figures are as near as we can approximate.

The firemen and citizens did all that men could do to stay the progress of the fire, and it is due to their almost superhuman efforts that the rest of the town—thank Heaven—was saved. Language is inadequate to express our profound gratitude toward the many kind friends who so promptly tendered their earnest sympathies, and at the same time generously, yes nobly, came forward with material and substantial aid. We can only say that we shall do all that within us lies to discharge the enormous debt of gratitude under which the big-hearted people of Eureka have placed us.

Our thanks are also due many of our contemporaries for offers of assistance, as the following telegrams will show:

Our new office was partly packed and shipped prior to receipt of the above; but we are grateful all the same.

We have about reached the utmost limit of our reliable type, and must desist right here.

We are temporarily quartered in Sedton and Clark's stone building—fire proof—and The Sentinel will appear regularly each day.

N. B.—Contemporaries receiving and noticing this issue are prayerfully requested to say nothing about the "Phœnix rising from its ashes."

An International Rifle Match.

A team of Irish rifl men in Dublin have sent across the ocean a challenge to an equal number of American sharpshooters to engage in a competitive match of rifle shooting in this country, under the rules of the British National Rifle Association. It is to be hoped that this challenge will meet with a prompt acceptance. There was a time when America could justly lay claim to having the best shots in the world in the ranks of its volunteer soldiery. Strange to say the natural love of the rifle has been suffered to grow cold, and that too, with the introduction and use of modern weapons of superior efficiency. In the last fifteen years the English, Irish and Scotch people have assiduously cultivated rifle practice, and to-day it is among the most popular of their field sports. Their contests at Wimbledon have become world renowned. Our Creedmore has already developed some splendid marksmen, and the challenge may be regarded as a natural sequel to the establishment of the magnificent range near New York city. If we could only count on having ten men possessing the unerring skill of Jacoby, our California sharpshooter, to represent us in the international rifle match, there would be no difficulty in predicting the result.—S.F. Chronicle.

The "Boss Convicted.

It is with some surprise that we hear that Boss Tweed, on his second trial for the commission of so many notorious swindles, has actually been found guilty and sentenced to twelve years in the Penitentiary. He certainly has good reason to congratulate himself upon the lightness of his sentence. There is probably no man in the Union who has done more to make political honesty a word or reproach than Wm. Tweed. His brazen successes in downright corruption and fraud, has had its evil influence from one end of the Union to the other. It has made its Municipal Government of New York a term of contempt, not only in this country but in Europe, and all honest people must rejoice at the proof that Justice is not wholly powerless in a contest with vast wealth, ill gotten though it was, and political influence to match. Tweed treated the first efforts to bring him to account with the greatest nonchalnce and contempt. He effects to believe that he of all men, was beyond the reach of the law, and openly defied its power. He was first arrested on the 16th of December, 1871, but was a few hours after addmitted to bail by one of his corrupt judges, Barnard, in the sum of $5000. Since the downfall of Tweed, New York has been purged of its corrupt judiciary, and one of his hopes of escape was thus frustrated. The conviction cannot but have a beneficial effect upon all the corrupt rings of the country. It will teach them that malfeasance in office is a crime that can be reached and punished by the laws. No man has more richly deserved State Prison than Boss Tweed, and it will be a disgrace if by any quibbling of the laws his counsel succeed in obtaining a new trial. But Tweedism is not now in the ascendancy, and we may hope that if any such application be made it will be defeated.

Great Excitement in Madrid.

A San Francisco dispatch from Washington, dated on the 21st, says:

The greatest excitement prevails here on account of the tragic culmination of affairs at the Spanish capital. It seems that the demands of our minister in relation to the Virginius outrage infuriated the people of Madrid, and long before daylight yesterday morning large crowds of men congregated in the vicinity of General Sickles' residence.

The bad feeling engendered by his speech was augmented by the appearance of the morning papers filled with slanderous and vituperative language against both the American Minister and the Government which he represents.

Shortly after daylight the streets of Madrid were filled with an excited people, and fears of violence toward the American Minister were anticipated by the authorities, and some large detachments of military were put in readiness to move in any quarter at a moment's notice

All of the papers, nearly, contained editorials calculated and intended to fire the populace, and all of them exhibited bitterness and vindictiveness toward the Government of the United States. Most of them demanded that the American Minister receive his passports at once, and that he be instructed to leave Spain as quick as possible.

In a short time after the circulation of the papers a very large crowd gathered in the neighborhood of the buildings of the American Legation and made demonstrations of violence. But the authorities managed to disperse the mob without causing bloodshed.

Subsequently the populace became more threatening, and vast crowds surged to and fro in front of the residence of the American Minister. Two determined assaults were made, and hand grenades were thrown up into the windows. There are rumors here that General Sickles has been badly wounded twice, and there are also rumors that he has been made the victim of a foul assassination. The latter is not true, however, as the Government is in telegraphic communication with him.

The Republican, of this city, will contain to-morrow morning a special dispatch from Madrid, of which the above is a summary. The Republican will also print an official statement from the State Department that as soon as orders were received from Madrid, the further execution of the Virginius captives were suspended.

While this fact in some degree mitigates the first atrocities, it serves to present the case only a little more favorably for Spain. In any event, our Government will insist upon a full reparation for the insult to our flag and the outrages upon our citizens, as the Virgidius was prima facie an American vessel.

The Cabinet is considering the dispatches from General Sickles. General Grant believes that if Spain declines to make a full reparation, Congress will promptly declare war.

Afraid of the Papers.

The steamship Cleopatra brought back the newspaper mails she took on her outward bound trip to Havana; the Spanish authorities refused to allow them to be landed.

Wisconsin.

Taylor (Ind.) beats Washburn (Rep.) 15,411 for Governor of Wisconsin. The Independents have a majority on joint ballot in the Legislature of 18.

A Card.

Representative Long of Tuolumne, through The Tuolumne Independent, addresses the following card to the people of Tuolumne, Mono and Inyo counties. We give place to it on his own account, and also as the embodiment of the desires of our Inyo Representative whose intentions and wishes it exactly expresses:

TO THE PEOPLE OF TUOLUMNE, MONO AND INYO COUNTIES.—Having been selected by the electors of this District as one of their representatives in the Assembly, it is my sincere wish to properly discharge the duties of the position and faithfully represent its people in all measures of importance to them and for the best interests of the State. To honestly and intelligently do this it is necessary that I should become fully acquainted with their private and public interests, that they may receive my undivided attention, and not be neglected through indifference or want of necessary information.

It being impossible to confer with all my constituency prior to the convening of the Legislature, I take this method of respectfully requesting that they communicate with me by letter, giving full expression to their views upon any and all questions which are legitimately the subject of legislation. Without such full expression from the people as to their wishes and desires, I may unknowingly neglect measures of vital importance to them. For this reason I would like to be fully informed, both before and during the session, upon all matters which may suggest themselves to any one as practical and beneficial.

Communications may be addressed to me, at Sonora, until the first day of December; after that date, at Sacramento. Very respectfully,

WM. G. LONG.

Sonora, Nov. 15, 1873.

Want to Settle.

The Spanish Cabinet unanimously favor a satisfactory and honorable settlement of the Virginius difficulty, but regard the maintenance of the integrity of the Spanish territory as essential.

MARRIED.

At Bishop Creek, on Sunday evening, Nov. 23 Hon. JAS. EDWIN PARKER of THE INYO INDEPENDENT, to Miss MARUCA QUINTANA WARNER, of New Orleans.

Adjectly; we warned 'em both, but they thought they'd rather know how it was for themselves.

DIED.

At Camp Independence Hospital, Nov. 23, 1873, JAMES MARSHALL, a native of England, aged 65 years.

Funeral at the Post Cemetery to-morrow at 1 o'clock P. M.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Big Fandango.

Our red brethren congregated in large numbers at Black Rock last week, intending to have the fandango of the season. The elite and the rag-tag and bob-tail of the tribe were there, but things didn't go smooth—whisky got among or in them and made things so unendurable that all hands able to navigate had to pack their duds and return to their respective homes. One gentleman, very drunk, while riding along the road during the hight of Saturday's gale, lost his hat, which sailed away toward Los Angeles. He started howling after it as he supposed, but headed straight for Carson—but it is likely he had stopped before this time. Some white gentlemen, at the beginning of the exercises at the fandango, stepped down to see how things were progressing. An Indian stole (?) a bottle of whisky from the pocket of one of them, but who would have thought one bottle contained so much power as that one? But whisky is a powerful thing. It required but a small quantity to plant the Court House yard in alfalfa, and that alfalfa needs looking after right now. It needs water, not whisky.

From Wallapai.

A. B. Elder and Wm. ("Bill") Grant arrived in Lone Pine two or three days since, from Wallapai. We have not heard what news they bring, but think quite likely it is not of a very encouraging character with respect to the immediate prospects of that district. A late number of the Los Angeles Star, however, gives rather a flattering report of Wallapai, as may be seen by reference to an article in another column. Be that as it may, we have not the least doubt but Inyo affords far better prospects for furnace or any kind of mining operations than ever Wallapai did or will.

Found Guilty.

In the matter of the People vs. Johnny Stewart, the Columbus murderer, before Judge Seawell, at Aurora the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation for mercy of the Judge!" On Tuesday last Clark, Wells and McClinton were before the Court arguing for a new trial, which will probably be obtained, the decision of the Judge upon the matter to be given the morning after our latest advices.

Court Proceedings.

There being one or two very tedious cases before the District Court, but few cases have been disposed of. These were: John Baxter vs. Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company; judgment for plaintiff for $650 64; stay of proceedings ordered and motion for new trial entered. Darrah vs. Darrah; divorce granted. John Simpson and wife vs. Wm. H. Van Arsdale; under advisement. John Simpson vs. Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company; on trial.

Fire at Bishop.

Last Saturday night a fire broke out in George Clark's blacksmith shop, Bishop Creek, destroying the building, tools, a stock of hard wood and other materials, to the value, all told, of nearly $1,000. Clark had worked late that night, and it is presumed the fire caught in some way from that left in the forge.

Shooting Match.

Marksmen, rafflers and all others fond of similar sports, will be pleased to know that Harry Wright, of the Taboose station, designs to have any quantity of turkeys, chickens and some cash, if need be, to be shot and raffled for a few days before Christmas. Due notice will be given in time.

Found.

A few days since a gentlemen picked up near Denton's place, eight miles north of this place, a small package which may be of value to the owner. The owner can be put in the way of recovering his property by applying at this office—provided he can describe his loss and pay for this notice.

Religious.

The Baptist Church at Bishop Creek, Rev. A. Clark, pastor, seems to be receiving quite a number of new accessions. Sunday last we witnessed the baptism of three new converts, and were told that Mr. Clark and Mr. Pratt (Methodist) together were awakening quite a religious interest.

Stock Coming In.

Since the expiration of this year's term of the stock law, large numbers of outside stock have been driven into the valley for Winter pasturage. One band of about one thousand head of cattle is located near Fish Springs.

Horse Races.

Preparations are being made for some attractive horse races at Bishop Creek, Christmas day. A full programme will be published shortly.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. Orne will preach at the school house to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock.

Taboose and Swamp Land.

To the Ancient and Honorable Order of Taboose Eaters of Owens River Valley—Gentlemen: I notice an article in The Independent, proposing to organize an association of pioneer taboose eaters. Now, gentlemen, being one of that ancient class of individuals, and being anxious for the welfare of at least some of those antiquated fossils, and believing you, gentlemen, to be better posted than those of a higher altitude, I wish to ask one question, a question of vital importance to the citizens of Cerro Gordo and Saline Valley: In the event of the success of the Cerro Gordo Water Company (of which we have no doubt), there should be from the overflow water enough to form a few hundred acres of swamp land—a result that must naturally follow an overflow—would the good people of Cerro Gordo and Saline Valley have the right to cultivate said land with the natural product of the county, taboose, or could Mr. Earl, by any possible means known to you or the law, annex it to the proposed swamp land grab of Owens River Valley? Knowing, as we do, the unbounded skill and untiring energy of Mr. Earl (both natural results of a well balanced and prolific brain) we have some doubts of the propriety of the proposed investment, and being anxious for light on the subject, we submit the above with all due respect. Hoping to hear from you soon, we remain, gentlemen,

Yours, as ever, at home,

J. R. Taboose.

Captain Jim.

From later reports of the big fandango, it appears that Captain Jim, the grand sachem of this Piute tribe, was most despitefully used by his subjects. The Captain, we are pained to say, got as drunk as a lord, and every Indian, big and little, took advantage of his defenceless condition to wipe out old grievances by giving him a kick or cuff, one Big Jim being particularly zealous in his efforts in that direction. The consequence is the Captain looks as though he had come in contact with a threshing machine.

An Important Work.

We learn that Mr. Belshaw, at his own expense, is building a pike road from the foot of the Lake to Haiwai Meadows, some thirty miles in length. The road is to be built the whole distance with brush and sand, together raising it about ten inches, and when done, this section, hitherto the heaviest, will be the easiest on teams of the entire distance to Tehechepi.

For the Capital.

Our junior, immediately after the little ceremony mentioned elsewhere under the head of married, started, accompanied by his handsome bride, for the scene of his legislative duties. He did well in taking along a reliable counselor to keep him straight amidst the many temptations to which, we are told, sojourners at our wicked State capital are ever exposed.

The School at the Post.

The public school, Mr. Washburne teacher, near the Post has been adopted by Capt. MacGowan as the Post school. Mr. Washburne has also opened a night school, both being well attended.

Lieut. Clague.

This officer, whom we mentioned as being expected at the Post on the 30th, is yet in Minnesota, unable to travel on account of sickness, and it is probable he will not be here for some weeks yet.

Discharged.

Robert Stevens, arrested for killing Cole, as mentioned last week, was taken before Judge Reed this week, and it appearing that the shooting was done in self defense, the prisoner was discharged.

Personal.

Mr. M. W. Belshaw, arrived here by yesterday's stage. He has been down at the Bay for some time.

The Latest.

A Washington dispatch of the 25th says the Secretary of the Navy has directed that an order be issued to suspend work on the ironclads and to detach from large vessels recently ordered into commission, all officers to await further orders. The transportation of ordnance stores to Key West will also be stopped, as there is no possibility, it is said of settling the diplomatic controversy between Spain and the United States for many months to come, which accounts for the orders.

A New York dispatch from Madrid, dated November 25th, says: The Cabinet yesterday considered the note to be sent to the Government of the United States. It is denied that the Spanish Government is disposed to submit the Virginius question to the Emperor of Germany for arbitration.

Denies the Charge.

George Treat, the owner of Thad Stevens, publishes a card denying emphatically the statement telegraphed by Chamberlain, the owner of True Blue, to the Eastern papers, that the rider of Joe Daniels cut True Blue down when the latter was hurt.

A Pious Rascal.

Rev. R. F. Parshall, of Oakland, has been deposed from the Oakland Baptist Church for immoral practices with the female members of his flock.

Pacific Coast.

Thirty-four trains pass over the Virginia and Truckee Railroad daily.

The bricklayers at Carson were successful in their strike for $7 per day.

It is stated that ex-Senator Nye of Nevada will spend the winter in Santa Barbara.

The State Normal School Teachers' Institute will meet at San Jose in January next.

The last of twelve locomotives that have been built at the Central Pacific Railroad shops at Sacramento, has just been completed, and is ready to go out on her trial trip.

A fine article of bluestone is being manufactured now at Spencerville, Nevada county, and in the course of a few weeks they will be turning out 2,500 pounds a day.

Some charges against the Rev. Mr. Van De Mark, the pastor of the First Universalist Church, San Francisco, were investigated in Druid's Hall Sutter street, November 18th, by the congregation. The session was held with closed doors.

The Sonoma Democrat is informed that the transfer of the Northern Pacific Railroad to Mr. Donahue was a temporary arrangement, and that it will eventually revert to the Central Pacific Company.

Four hundred men were discharged from the construction department of the Mare Island navy yard on the 18th inst. Those thrown out of employment embrace carpenters, plumbers, blacksmiths, ship carpenters and laborers.

The proprietors of the plow factory at San Leandro recently attempted to reduce the wages of the moulders. The men refused to work at the reduced wages offered, and the company concluded that old hands were better than new set them to work again

Two thousand Springfield breech-loading muskets have been sent from the Benicia arsenal overland to the New York arsenal.

At Salinas Robert F. Masterson has been held in $2,000 bail to answer the charge of attempting to kill H. J. Harmon, who had tried to seduce his wife. Popular opinion on the side of Masterson.

The Wallapai Mining District.

Late advices from the Wallapai mining district inform us that the prospects of the miners are brightening up, and that work is being prosecuted with renewed vigor. The Keystone silver mine is being worked with success and satisfaction to all. The influx of water into the shaft retarded the work some, but that difficulty will soon be overcome, as Mr. Steen has already gone to San Francisco to procure hoisting machinery, and then the work will be pushed forward rapidly. At Cerbat a successful run was made on New London ore, with Elder's furnace, which resulted in 76 bars of bullion. The prospects are that the district will prove to be the richest, as it is acknowledged to be the most extensive in Arizona.—Los Angelos Star, Nov 19.

More Cash Wanted.

A Sacramento dispatch says: J. D. Whitney, State Geologist, has just completed his biennial report to the Governor. He gives an account of the work done on a number of maps and ornithological and other scientific books now in course of publication, and states that inasmuch as the Legislature has been unwilling to appropriate a sufficient amount of money to enable him to carry on the work as fast as desirable, he has concluded to sever his connection with that department, and will under no circumstances serve longer than July 1st. 1875. He asks for the early appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars, to enable him to complete the work now on hand by the above named date.

A New Use for Alfalfa.

[From the S. F. Bulletin.]

The time will come when the cheapest and best manner of fertilizing lands in this State will be a question of great importance. In the Eastern States and in England the turning under of red clover has been considered one of the most satisfactory ways of restoring the fertility of the land and of bringing it up to a higher condition. A recent lecturer before the Royal Agricultural Society of England sets forth these facts:

I have come to the conclusion that the very best preparation, the very best of manure, if I may say so, is a good crop of clover. Now, at first, nothing seems more contradictory than to say that you can remove a very large quantity of both mineral and organic paint food from the soil, and yet make it more productive, as in the case of clover. Nevertheless it is a fact that the larger amount of mineral matter you remove in a crop of clover, and the larger the amount of nitrogen which is carried off in clover hay the richer the land becomes. This is a chemical anomaly which Dr. Voelcker has been investigating ten years, and only during the previous season has he been able to explain it. Then he found that "in a chemical point of view, clover is the most exhausting crop you can grow, while in a practical point of view, it is the most restorative crop, and the best preparation for wheat you can possibly grow." The amount of nitrogen and of mineral matter secured by one year's growth of clover, is several times as much as is required for a crop of wheat. A vast amount of mineral matter is brought within the reach of the wheat crop by growing clover. By means of its long roots clover penetrates a large mass of soil; it gathers up the phosphoric and the potash, which are reached by its long, deep roots, and when the land is plowed the roots are left in the surface soil, and decaying, they furnish the mineral substance most needed by the wheat. Without the help of clover roots a large portion of these substances must remain in a locked-up condition, in which they are not available for the growing wheat. The accumulation of nitrogen in the soil by growing clover is also very large. The clover plants take the nitrogen from the atmosphere and manufacture it into their own substance, which on the decomposition of the clover roots and leaves, produces abundance of ammonia." In reality, the growing of clover is equivalent, to a great extent, to manuring with Peruvian guano; and there is a larger amount of nitrogen accumulated in the surface soil than in the heaviest application of guano any farmer would think of making.

It is well known that alfalfa, which is a species of clover possessing all the soiling properties of red clover, has enormous roots which penetrate the ground according to the character of the soil, from three to ten feet. If alfalfa is turned under with a plow having a sharp share, the roots will begin to decay, the soil will be made porous by these large tubes, and the properties which red clover give back to the land will be given in even greater proportion by the alfalfa. It is not so hard a grass to kill as many have supposed. The difficulty is in cutting the roots, which cannot be done well with a plow in ordinary condition.

A very large amount of alfalfa seed has already been sold this year in this State. The San Bernardino Guardian makes the following statement:

There has been very nearly 100,000 pounds of alfalfa seed saved in this county the past season, just now closed. Mr. McCrary and Thos. Tompkins are the largest raisers, each harvesting over 8,000 pounds. Alfalfa seed is worth in San Bernardino 25 cents per pound, and in San Francisco the San Bernardino raised seed is worth five cents a pound more than any other in the market. To show what the profits of an acre planted in alfalfa are, we will just cite one instance. Mr. B. C. Boren has one and one-quarter acres growing in alfalfa; he cut it twice, and the yield was two tons of feed to the acre. He then let it go to seed, cut and threshed it, and made 1,130 pounds of seed, worth in town for cash, $282. Is there anything else that can be grown upon an acre of ground that will yield such profits? After the first frost, alfalfa ceases to grow to any height until Spring, but it serves as a splendid pasturage all the Winter for cattle.

Mining Surveys.

A Washington telegram of the 18th inst says:

Information has reached the General Land Office that deputies, in surveying mining claims, are in the habit of following the directions of parties in interest instead of adhering to lines established in the original locations of such claims, and thus in effect making private instead of official surveys. Commissioner Drummond, therefore, today issued a circular addressed to Surveyor-Generals throughout the country, emphatically discountenancing this practice. After giving minute directions as to the proper method of ascertaining boundaries of original locations, the Commissioner states that failure to make a record of the location in accordance with law and the regulations in force at the date of the locations, will defeat the claim; and if it is not with such definiteness as to operate as notice to all persons seeking to acquire rights to mining lands, it will be void for uncertainty.

New Railroad Scheme.

Now that the Narrow Guage appears likely to prove a lamentable failure, on account of Stockton and the counties north of here not taking stock, the plan of building a railroad between this place and Antioch is again talked of. We hear it stated that Mr. Henry Miller, the wealthy land and cattle owner, says that he and his partner, Mr. Lux, will subscribe $200,000 towards such a road, and the people of Antioch and vicinity as much more. With $200,000 from Visalia, the success of the scheme would be assured Messrs. Lux & Miller can well afford to give this proposed road a heavy assistance, as they have hundreds of thousands of acres of land through which it would run, and thereby greatly increase the value of the same. The Antioch road has many advantages over any other, and the railroad project we have mentioned has our best wishes for its complete success.—Visalia Times.

—Although Dukes county, Mass., has probably been in existence for two hundred years, it never sent a convict to the State prison until recently. It wants it distinctly understood, however, that the two men "sent up" on that day were outcasts from the abandoned and profligate State of Vermont.

The Arizona Telegraph.

The completion of the main trunk of the San Diego and Arizona Military Telegraph was consumated to-day by the arrival at Yuma, of the construction party from San Diego. Work was commenced on this line at San Diego, by one party, August 28th; by the second party, at Prescott, Sept. 2nd; by the third party at Yuma, Sept 18th, and by the fourth party, at Maricopa Wells, October 11th. The length of wire already strung is 417 miles. The labor has been performed by soldiers, under civilian foremen. The number of working days aggregate 167. The date of completion is more than one month sooner than the earliest date set by the Superintendent at the commencement. Remembering the great distances that the poles and other material had to be moved, the difficulties of supplying the working parties with water and forage on the Desert, and the dry barren plains, and the intense heat prevailing, the completion of the line thus early surprises all, even those bearing the burden. The general superintendence of the construction and location of this route was under the charge of R. R. Haines, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, assisted by Captain G. F. Price, of the Fifth Cavalry. Foremen of construction—D. McKillop, George H. Wilson and A. W. P. Ladd. Electricians—R. H. Howe, Thomas E. Atkinson, William B. Ellison. Commanders of troops—Captain William E. Dove, Captain George E. Price and Lieutenant John F. Trout. The branch line to Tucson, from Maricopa Wells, is being rapidly erected, and will undoubtedly be completed about December 1st. The officials, military and civil, of Prescott and Yuma are exchanging congratulatory telegrams with others of the various departments and cities most interested in its completion.—San Diego Despatch Nov. 18.

Hitherward.

The monopoly demagogues, "the rings," are all preparing to flood Sacramento with agents and emissaries during the first week of the session of the Legislature. They will combine, for all have a common interest in robbing the people. In this state of the case would it not be well for the farmers and mechanics to take a personal interest in the organization of the Legislature and the election of a Senator? There are many granges and industrial guilds in the State. They are full of intelligence. Why not have them represented here, and taking as active an interest in political matters as the predatory and thieving classes are preparing for? It is an excellent way to strengthen the backs of the weak brethren, to have most impartial constituents visit them at the capital in times of extraordinary interest, that they may freely and directly confer with each other on their ways and means to defeat the common enemy.—Sacramento Union.

Lucky for Us.

Somebody has found out that Friday is the lucky day for America, long as it has been regarded as being the one of ill-omen. It is said that on that day Christopher Columbus sailed on his voyage of discovery; ten weeks after he discovered America; Henry VII., of England, gave John Cabot his commission which led to the discovery of North America; St. Augustine, the oldest town in the United States, was founded; the Mayflower, with the Pilgrims, arrived at Plymouth Rock; they signed the August compact, the forerunner of the present Constitution; George Washinhton was born: Bunker Hill was seized and fortified; the surrender of Saratoga was made; the surrender of Cornwallis, at Yorktown, occurred; the motion was made in Congress that the United States were, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

A Useful Boy.

A contemporary is in pain about the removal of a boy from his city. He has been a fount of much joy to the itemizers of the press. It gives the following brief sketch of his many exploits: "He started out two years ago by shooting himself. Two months after he choked himself with a fish bone. A few days after he built a fire in the barn, which resulted in the destruction of half a dozen houses. He then swallowed a top, got run over by an ice wagon, fell out of a second-story window, was taken senseless from the river, was lost for three days, knocked over a kerosene lamp into his mother's lap, ran a knife blade into his little sister's eye, and scared a maiden aunt into fits." Any paper should mourn the loss of such an interesting youth, and the reporters should wear crape for six months after his departure.

Earthquakes.

An earthquake occurred about 9 o'clock on Saturday night, which was felt at San Francisco and Sacramento lightly, and from Shasta to the Callapooia Mountains, in Oregon, severely, and lightly as far north as Corvallis and Eugene City, in the Willamette Valley. At Jacksonville and Canyonville, in southern Oregon—say 75 miles from Mount Shasta—it was felt with greatest severity and lasted twenty seconds.—Sacramento Union, Nov. 24.

—Dr. Blank attempted to defend himself against the facetious assault of a friend by saying: "I defy any person whom I ever attended to accuse me of ignorance or neglect." That you may safely do, doctor," said his assailant, "for you know dead men tell no tales."

—The King of Italy, in his speech to the Italian Chambers recently, said that Italy and Germany were united to repel any attack of the Catholic nations upon Italy.

—At the office of the Cuban Junta in Memphis, it is rumored, there is a purpose of raising a colored regiment to assist in the liberation of the slaves in Cuba.

—The negroes of the South aid the panic. They hoard greenbacks to such an extent that it is estimated that forty or fifty millions are now hid in negro cabins. Some one should enlighten the freedmen as to the functions of the currency.

—Fashionable authority says that the true woman of tone will endeavor next Fall, by the grace and simplicity of her attire, to show that her husband has neither robbed a bank nor been the leader of a ring.

—In a small New England town a druggist was surprised and disturbed to receive at the hands of a dirty looking customer the following prescription: "Pleas give the barra sumphin to fisick him fifteen cents worth."

—The power of love is again illustrated in the case of Miss Catherine Oates, of Cornwall, England, who traveled all the way to Tuolumne county, California, to wed the love she hadn't seen for eight years, and found him married to a Mexican ranchero's daughter, and the father of only five children

—A man over 100 years old lately died in Brooklyn, New York. As he did not use tobacco or any spirituous liquors, it is supposed his untimely death was caused by some disease inherited at his birth.

—The Grand Rapids Eagle says: We will in a few days publish the names of those of our citizens whose private business will not permit them to become candidates for Congress. It was at first our intention to publish the names of aspirants, but our space is too limited.

—A short time since a famous Prussian General was inspecting some military stables. "What do I see there?" he said in tones of thunder to the Sergeant, "cobwebs?" "Yes, sir," was the respectful reply, "we must keep them there to catch the flies and prevent them from teasing the horses."

—"You have heern, gentlemen of the jury," said an eloquent advocate, "you hav heern the witness swar he saw the prisoner raise his gun; you have heern him swar he saw the flash and heerd the report; you have heern him swar he dug the bullet out with his jacknife, and you have seen that bullet produced in Court; but whar, gentlemen, whar, I ask you, is the man who saw the bullet hit the dog?"

THE SUN.

Weekly. Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

YUBA DAM.

The sun was shimmering all the west
And gilding all the yellow moon,
And tumbling shadows from the crest
Of gilded mountains to the plain,
As laboring up a water course
A traveler pricked his weary horse;
When all at once upon his sight
Burst a fair village clean and bright.

He asked a miner whom he met
If he could give its name. "You bet"
"Pray do, my friend, and do not sham,"
The miner answered, "Yuba Dam."

"Kind, gentle friend do not abuse
My ignorance; I cry a truce
To thy bold wit: come tell me true,
I would not ask it if I knew,
But I, dear sir, a strang r am."
Quick roared the miner, "Yuba Dam."

Disheartened, on the stranger pressed,
And overtook a mincing dame
With flaxen hair and silken vest;
And begged of her the village name.
She op'd her sweet lips like a clam
And simpered quickly "Yuba Dam."

On tore the stranger, nearly wild,
And came upon an artless child;
She had a satchel on her arm,
While o'er her face stole many a charm.

"Where have you been?" the stranger said,
The maid uplifted quick her head,
And answered with the ready truth
And open frankness of her youth.
"At school." "Who keeps it?" "Uncle Sam."
"What is this place, sweet?" "Yuba Dam."

"Alas!" he screamed in frantic grief,
"Will no one come to my relief;
Will no one tell me where I am?"
The school boys shouted "Yuba Dam;"
And on the bridge, as he did slam,
The planks re-echoed "Yuba Dam."

"Perdition seize the place!" he cried,
As swiftly through its streets he hied;
Yet ere he went to rest that night,
From something told him by a wight,
He found that he himself had slammed
And that the "Yuba" had been dammed.

The Colorado Desert.

[From The San Bernardino Guardian.]

Where is it? Between the parallels 32 and 34 degrees north latitude, and the meridians 114 and 116 degrees west. It is, in fact, the southeastern corner of California. Its western boundary is the Sierra; its northern and eastern margins are formed by a spur or branch range of the Sierras starting from near Mount San Bernardino, running easterly some forty miles, and thence bending southeasterly and southerly, and falling away into the lower and lower hills until it flattens out into barren plains near Fort Yuma. On the south it opens up through a gradual ascent upon the head of the Gulf of California. Its width varies from thirty to forty miles, and its average length is something over a hundred and twenty-five miles. What is it? Probably, if not unquestionsbly, it is the old bed or bottom of the Gulf of California which once extended at least a hundred and fifty miles northwesterly beyond its present limits.

Its surface has a gradual ascent from the northerly end, to the present sandy shore of the gulf, its temporary limit. In a very able, ingenious and interesting article by Dr. J. P. Widney, of Los Angeles, published in The Overland Monthly for January of the present year. He thinks that the Colorado, entering the east side of the ancient gulf, nearly a hundred and fifty miles above its head, brought down millions of tons of quicksand and thick red mud, which gradually formed an immense shoal and, in time, a delta, which after many years stretched quite across to the opposite shore of the gulf, which was narrow at that place. This, of course, cut off the upper hundred and fifty miles of the gulf and changed it into a large, shallow lake. This lake, receiving neither raintall nor rivers sufficient to replace its loss by the evaporation of this extremely hot locality, finally dried completely away and left its sandy bed a desert basin.

This annual alluvial deposit has steadily increased the distance between the river bed and southern margin of the old, lake bed desert, till it has formed a neck of land nearly forty miles wide, lying but slightly above the sea.

The taking away of such an immense body of water, presenting over five thousand square miles of surface, constantly subjected to an extremely rapid evaporation, must have made the climate much dryer and hotter, for one or two hundred miles east or west—that is through southern California and western Arizona. That this is exactly what did take place, on one side at least, western Arizona furnishes two conclusive proofs:

1. The ruins of cities once large and populous, and the remains of wide and deep canals for extensive systems of irrigation.

2. Remains of old forests evidently dead from want of moisture.

If any one questions the modifying influence of evaporation upon climate, let him consider the fact, given in the published proceedings of the Bombay Geographical Society, that the annual evaporation of the Bay of Bengal is more than sixteen feet! But this upper part of the old Gulf of California, flanked on both sides by high mountains, whose steeply-sloping sides daily reflected an amount of heat which greatly increased the evaporating power of the sun's direct rays, must have lost a proportionately greater amount. Assuming, however, for the sake of a safe argument, that its evaporation only equaled that of the Bay of Bengal, we should have an amount of vapor which, if condensed and precipitated, would supply twelve inches of rain over 86,400 square miles, an area more than double that of the entire State of Ohio, and more than half of the land surface of all California.

Submerge the desert again; make it once more the bottom of a vast lake, an inland sea, in fact, sending up thousands of tons of vapor every day, cooling the overlying and surrounding air for hundreds of miles, and thus causing the precipitation of a large part of the vapor now held in suspension by the ocean winds. This would restore not only the humidity but the mildness of those climatic conditions which once made fertile thousands of leagues now desert for more than a hundred years, but which under the restoration of former conditions, might and would bud and blossom again as surely as cause produces effect.

The dampness of the atmosphere thus increased, and the lower temperature this secured, would have yet another and most beneficial effect. They would retard and diminish the evaporation of the rains which do fall, and the greater rain which would fall over the adjacent country. This would work three good results: 1. A milder climate. 2. A moister soil. 3. More springs and streams.

How could the present desert be flooded again? In either of two ways:

1. By a canal from the present head of the gulf across the forty miles of sand which now separates the present head of the gulf from its old bed which is now the desert. This would be extremely difficlut and costly, if not impracticable, not only on account of of the great length and width required, but on account of the constant sand-drift which would continually tend to fill the canal again. Then, too, the action of the river and gulf waves would tend to obstruct the gulf end of the canal, and to increase the width of the sandy belt or isthmus across which it would be cut. This plan would restore the desert to its old condition of a salt water lake. It has been often suggested and strongly advocated.

2. Open a canal from the Colorado river into the desert, turn the river into the desert, and thus make it a fresh water lake. During the flood season of the last twenty years the river has been doing this itself. This natural annual overflow already forms a stream a hundred yards wide and four feet deep, with a strong current, which pours so much water into the desert as to make a lake several miles across, but so shallow that it dries up in a few weeks after the subsidence of the floods in the main river cuts of its supply.

Comparatively little artificial help would turn the whole volume of the Colorado into this new channel, which would presently deepen so as to remain permanent.

3. Combine the two projects; open the canals from both the gulf and the river. This would insure an ample and speedy filling of the desert with a flood which the river supply would constantly tend to keep at a level a little above that of the gulf, thus creating a current through the canal to deepen and widen and make it more permanent all the while.

This can be done, and I believe it will be. Far greater and more costly things have been done to reach results far less important and not near as certain.

It is the grand climatic problem, on whose solution depends the population and the civilization of millions of the most fertile acres of western Arizona and southern California.

Those who wish fuller statements of most of the ideas here hurriedly condensed, may find them in Dr. Widney's article already cited. And who do so will unite in the question with which he closes: "Would it be money wasted if the government were to send a commission of scientific men, of engineers, carefully to examine the subject, to run levels and report the result?"

—Governor Palmer of Illinois thinks that every person should be permitted, without legal hinderence, to determine for himself on Sunday, as on all other days, how he will employ his time, only that he shall not in any sense invade the liberties of others.

—As a Judge was delivering his decision in a case the other day, he was interrupted by the vociferous braying of a donkey under one of the windows of the Court-room. "What is that?" testily asked the Judge; whereupon the lawyer, against whom he was deciding the case arose and remarked: "It is merely the echo of the Court, your honor."

—A couple who were doing their courting in a graveyard at Stockton, Cal., recently, were robbed by a highwayman.

—Epitaph on a locomotive—Collisions four or five she bore; the signals were in vain; grown old and rusted her boiler busted, and smashed the excursion train.

IMPORTANT NEWS.

A telegram from San Francisco to The Virginia Chronicle of November 29, states that Senator Casserly has tendered his resignation as United States Senator. Reason given, failing health. This resignation--it would seem on first thought--leaves an almost clear field for Booth.

Another important piece of news is that the Spanish Cabinet at Madrid has agreed to deliver to the United States the steamship Virginius, and all persons remaining alive who were captured with her, and to submit all questions which have arisen from her capture to a mixed tribunal. This action settles the war question for the present.

Since the above was in type we have seen a copy of The Bulletin of the same date which gives Casserly's letter of resignation in full. So it will devolve upon the Legislature to proceed to ballot at once for two Senators. The effect of Casserly's resignation at this stage will doubtless be to combine the Democratic and Dolly Varden forces, and result in the election of one of each to the Senate—a Democrat, perhaps Wallace or Downey, for the unexpired term, and an Independent, Booth, for the full term. So mote it be.

The Aldine.

The December or Christmas number of this famous periodical is really the most attractive, particularly in its splendid but perfectly life-like engravings, that we have ever seen. We know of no more appropriate or valuable Christmas present, considering its cost, for a lady friend, or any other friend, for the matter of that, than the 12 numbers of The Aldine for 1874. The Christmas number for that year is promised to be the finest ever issued. Any of them are good enough, however. Every subscriber to The Aldine for the coming year will receive a pair of beautiful chromos free. Subscription $5 per annum. Address, James Sutton & Co., 58 Maiden Lane, New York.

The San Diego Mines.

The Japa placer mines in Lower California are still attracting considerable attention in the "lower country." Many people have left Julian City and San Diego for the new mines. Reports from there show that the mines are rich, but the usual drawback in that part of the country—want of water—will retard progress. A correspondent of the San Diego Union who has lately returned from the diggings says the men there make $1 to $4 per. day with pans and $5 to $7 with rockers. The dust in this case must be pretty rich taking into consideration the fact that it is carried three miles to water.

Earthquake at Crescent City.

A correspondent of The Sacramento Union, writing from Crescent City, says of the earthquake which occurred on the 2d: Last evening at eleven minutes to nine there was a terrible earthquake here. It began by a thumping up and down, and ended in a lengthy shake from north east to southwest, lasting about three fourths of a minute. The shock was long and slow, not sharp and quick. Every brick building in town is badly damaged, being all cracked to pieces, and the drug store bottles were partly smashed.

The Bankrupt Law.

Hon. O. P. Morton, of Indiana, has a bill which he proposes to introduce immediately on the meeting of the Senate to repeal the Bankrupt Act, and make its repeal cover all the cases under it since the financial trouble commenced in September. He pronounces the involuntary clause in it, as now being used, to be an infamous provision, and anti Republican in its character He expects to carry the repeal of the bill without opposition.

The Floral Guide.

We would call attention to the advertisement of Vick's Floral Guide. It is a beautiful book, considered only as a book, and at the same time it contains matters of great value to the horticulturist—to the lover of the beautiful. Every one who cares in the least for flowers—and who is there that does not?—ought to have Vick's Floral Guide, which is now published quarterly at 25 cents a year.

—A Des Moines clergyman speaks of his hired girl as being "the best girl he has ever experienced." He talks as if he had got hold of some kind of new religion.

CONCERNING A TELEGRAPH.

Less than two years since quite an effort was made to induce the Western Union Telegraph Company to join with the citizens of this county in extending their line southward through this valley to Cerro Gordo. The gentlemen having the business in hand submitted a statement and inquiry to Superintendent Gamble of that company, in effect to know whether the company would furnish wire, insulators, instruments and a rebate in charges on existing lines carrying messages from this when built, the citizens to do all the remaining work, furnish poles, construct, maintain and control the line. It was thought that as each locality having an office would furnish its own operator free to the general management, the line could easily be made to pay its own expenses and a fair rate of interest on the investment, and soon, with the prospective increase of the business of the county, a fair profit. Of course no one advocated the enterprise simply for the direct profits on the investment, but for the important indirect advantages to accrue to the interests of the county, mining, mercantile and every other.

The Superintendent wrote in reply that without further investigation as to the probable telegraphic business of the country, he could give no promise of assistance other than a rebate of 25 per cent. on all messages to or from the new line sent over any of theirs west of Salt Lake. Subsequently an agent of the company, a Mr. Bell, was sent down from Aurora to inquire into the prospective advantages of extending the line on the plan proposed. Before these were completed, and while he was in this place, the big earthquake occurred, and an hour later Mr. Bell was aboard the stage en route for a more stable country. We believe, however, that he had, from what he had previously seen or understood relating to the business of the country, decided upon a measurably unfavorable report. Be that as it may, the earthquake itself, in its effect upon both the existing and prospective business operations of the country, was sufficient to put a temporary quietus upon the telegraphic enterprise, and, unless it is quite recently, nothing more has been heard about it since. But the need of such a line is every day becoming more and more obvious. Within the next twelve months we confidently believe the business of Inyo county will be more than three times as great as it now is. Even now it is quite sufficient to justify the continuation of the proposed telegraph, which of itself would tend more to promote the anticipated increase, than the investment of an equal amount for any similar purpose that can be named. However, we do not propose at this time to submit any estimates of the probable amount of business such a line might receive, but merely wished to call the attention of our people to the matter, believing that when it is properly investigated by them it will be deemed of sufficient importance to justify another and more successful effort. We will add the following statement of the probable cost per mile, leaving the other considerations for another time: Wire, $38; insulators, $10; 18 poles, at $3 50 each, $63; construction $40, making a total cost for each mile of $151. We think this a moderately liberal estimate, but it depends materially upon the facility of obtaining and distributing poles. The number allowed is one less per mile than is commonly used, and counted as only 20 feet in length instead of 24—60 feet, board measure, instead of 72. We are quite sure these poles can be furnished at Owens Lake for 4 cents per foot, which would leave $1 10 on the estimate to pay for cost of distribution, which is more than sufficient for any distance less than 40 miles.

Description of a Murderer.

Following is the description of the murderer of Constable Mettler mentioned as being killed at Tehechepi a short time since. The description is from The Havilah Miner:

He is a Californian, about five feet eight inches tall, slim build, weight 135 pounds, high cheek bones, large round eyes, slightly pox-marked, rather feminine voice, speaks quick, manners polite, pistol shot mark on one of his arms or wrists; coarse straight black Indian looking hair, heavy mustache and is about 30 years of age.

Cantura seems to have come from bad stock; he is a cousin of the chief of the noted bsnd of cut throats of Monterey county, led by Vasquez.

A Home Volcano.

A volcano has burst out in the Pinto mountains ten miles east of Eureka, Nevada. A party visited it and brought back lava specimens with them.

WAUCOBA DISTRICT.

Following is a portion of Mr. James Brady's report to the Directors of the Waucoba Mining and Smelting Company. It gives a very clear idea of the character of the ores, and the condition and situation of a large number of the mines. From our own personal knowledge of the district--from the immense amount of rich looking ores we have seen there in not only one but more than a dozen different mines--we are full in the faith that Waucoba at no distant day will be made to yield more wealth than even Cerro Gordo itself. If this belief should be even approximately realized, Waucoba is bound to exert a financial impetus of greater benefit to the general interests of the county than the other, for the reason that from its central location every portion of the county will come in for a share of its business. With the same number of furnaces in successful operation in Waucoba as in Cerro Gordo, Inyo would instantly take rank in prosperity far above any other county in the State. We feel confident, from what we know of the intentions and ability of the company and of their mines, that we will not have long to wait until this conclusion is partially if not wholly realized. We will either have a "big camp" over there ere many more months pass away, or the district will be an established failure of which latter result we have no fears whatever. We shall take occasion soon to corroborate Mr. Brady's report by that of Prof. Clarence King, who is considered the best practical mining authority on this coast

To the President and Directors of the Waucoba Mining & Smelting Co.:

The Waucoba Mining & Smelting Company was incorporated under the laws of the State of California on the 7th day of February, 1872, for the purpose of mining and reducing ores in the Waucoba Mining District, County of Inyo, State of California. The capital stock of the Company is $2,000,000, divided into 20,000 shares of $100 each.

The property of the Company consists of over one hundred mines and mining locations; four town sites of 640 acres each, so located as to cover the most convenient ground for wood, etc., and all the available water in that part of the district within reach of the Company's mines.

The titles to the above property have been secured chiefly by purchase from the original locators; and as there are no previous locations nor adverse claims in the district, no fear need be apprehended of future litigation.

The Waucoba Mining District is situated on the eastern slope of the Inyo range of mountains, and is bounded on the south by Cerro Gordo District. The mines of Waucoba are situated about 30 miles north of the celebrated Cerro Gordo mines and smelting works, and apparently on the same mineral belt. Big Pine, the agricultural center of Owens Valley, is reached by a good wagon road from the center of the district, a disance of about 20 miles; and Independence, the county seat and principal business town of Inyo county, by a good trail and wagon road via Mazurka canyon, a distance of about 25 miles.

The mines are of two distinct kinds, as in Cerro Gordo, namely: argentiferous galena mines, assaying from $0 to $300 per ton in silver, and from 40 to 8 per cent in lead; and agentiferous quartz veins (commonly called "silver mines") assaying from $100 to $700 in silver.

The most profitable method of reducing these ores is by the smeting process adopted at Cerro Gordo, Eureka and other well known lead producing districts, although the milling process could be used to advantage in reducing some of the ores of the silver mines.

Sufficient work has been done on the following mines to obtain a United States patent for them, viz: the Emily, Canton, Tiugahoki, Cotopaxi, Tibitiwitti, Wonder and Zacatecas. Considerable work has also been done on the Whippoorwill, Triumph, Magog, Pah-ho, Poearch, Pavoonah and St. Stephen; and he other locations have all had sufficient work done on them to secure them from relocation.

The geological formation of the country in which the veins exist is considered very favorable for silver-bearing lodes, the general rock of the country being limestone (dolomite), with bands of slate and quartzite traversing the same; and lying on the east side and contiguous to the granite upheaval which forms the summit of the Inyo range opposite this district.

The several locations in the district may be divided into five groups of veins, viz.: the New Lead Mines, the Emily Mines, the Wonder and Zacatecas Mines, the Lower Lead Mines, and the Silver Mines.

FIRST GROUP.

The New Lead Mines are situated near the summit of the Inyo range, at the head of Soldiers' canyon, about 12 miles east of Big Pine, and at an elevation of about 8,500 feet above the sea The locations are 12 in number, and consist of several large, parallel quartz veins, some of which are from 10 to 20 feet wide; all show more or less metal (argentiferous galena) in seams running through the quartz. The location knownas the "Bierstadt" gives every indication of a large body of ore near the surface, and can be prospected by a tunnel or inclineat a very small expense. The ores of these mines assay 80 per cent lead and $72 in silver per ton of 2,000 pounds. Water can in all probability be found by sinking in a small basin about half a mile from the mies. Otherwise it will have to be hauled from a spring near the Big Pine road, about 6 miles distant—except in Winter (about 5 months out of the year), when sufficient snow can be melted to supply the camp. Wood and mining timbers can be cut in abundance within two miles of the mines.

SECOND GROUP.

The Emily mines include the Emily, Magog and several other locations; are at an elevation of about 9,00 feet, and near the junction of the slate and limestone, on the eastern slope of the Inyo range, about 4 miles south of the New Mines. The principal work has been done on the Emily mine, where two adit levels have been run through vein matter, shwing several parallel veins of metal-bearing quartz. A shaft has been sunk on the most easterly vein to a depth of about 20 feet showing a well-defined lode about 3½ feet wide, and another on the most westerly vein about 10 feet deep. This vein is about 6 feet wide, and dips about 45 degs. towards the east. Considerable ore has been taken from these veins, assaying from $7 to over $300 in silver, and from 70 to 5 per cent in lead. The upper or most westerly vein looks most promising—the vein matter consisting of oxide of lead and iron and large boulders of iron manganese-stone such as invariably lead to large deposits of ore in the Cerro Gordo mines. The Magog and other mines in this group are of a similar character, and all can be worked to great advantage by tunnels, to a depth of from 500 to 1,000 feet. The Emily Springs, about 3½ miles south of these mines, supply water sufficient for the camp; but in the Winter months snow is abundant, so that no water need be packed. Abundance of wood and mining timbers surround the mines.

THIRD GROUP.

The Wonder and Zacatecas mines, about 3 miles southeast of the Emily mines, at an elevation of 8,000 feet. These mines are in a slaty limestone formation, and have a general course northwesterly and southeasterly. The Wonder is a very large vein of quartz, from 20 to 50 feet in width, and showing several large strata of solid, argentiferous, galena and carbonate of lead. The Zacatecas is a similar vein, about 100 feet east of the Wonder, and from 5 to 10 feet wide, also showing large quantities of ore. Both appear to be true fissure veins, and their direction and dip would indicate that they will come together and form one very large vein. Tunnels have been commenced on both of these veins, and some 50 tons of ore extracted, assaying from $39 to $56 in silver, and from 75 to 82 per cent. in lead. The solid galena and carbonates increase, and the quartz becomes broken and decomposed as we get below the surface, indicating that the quartz will disappear and be replaced by a large deposit of ore in a short distance from the present working. These mines alone would supply sufficient ore to run one set of works of 15 or 20 tons capacity. Wood and water facilities about the same as the Emily mines.

FOURTH GROUP.

The Lower Lead Mines, about 3½ miles east of the Wonder and 3 miles northeast of Pownzina Camp, on Pownzina Creek. These mines are represented by the Pah-ho, Poearch, Pavoonah and St. Stephen, on which the largest openings have been made. Their general course is northwesterly, traversing a low range of hills composed of alternating bands of limestone, slate and quartzite. The matrix of the veins is quartz and lime, while the iron-stone, oxide of lead and iron, and solid galena found in all the openings, show every indication of an abundant supply of ore. The ores assay about $39 in silver and 78 per cent. lead. Water can be brought in pipes from the camp at Pownzina Creek, a distance of 3 miles, or packed at a small expense. Wood and timbers about 1 mile west.

FIFTH GROUP,

or Silver Mines—Represented by the Canton, Cotopaxi, etc., are situated in a range of hills composed of limestone, 3 miles southeast of the Wonder, and at an elevation of about 7,500 feet. These mines are strong and well defined on the surface, with a general northerly and southerly course, and dipping at various angles towards the east. When opened they show well defined walls, and the ores are of a superior quality to the ores of a similar class of mines, such as the Belmont and San Lucas, at Cerro Gordo. The matrix of the veins is quartz, with some limestone and quartzite.

The Canton Mine: The width of this vein is from 5 to 6 feet. An incline has been sunk to a depth of 25 feet, and several hundred feet of the vein has been stripped, showing metal in all places. The actual width of the pay streak increases from 6 inches to 1½ feet in this depth; and a large quantity of ore has been taken from different places on the vein, assaying from $100 to $700 per ton of 2,000 pounds. The ore when assorted for smelting will average about $250 per ton. A tunnel, driven on the vein, would reach a depth of about 500 feet from the surface in the same horizontal distance.

The Tiugahoki Mine: This mine bears a general course northeast and southwest, and dips toward the southeast about 40 degs. The vein is strong and well defined, and can be traced on the surface for several hundred feet, ranging from 2½ to 6 feet wide, and showing good mineral in several places. At one point, where some work has been done, the character of the mineral is very rich—the pay streak, from 12 to 18 inches wide, assaying from $248 to $433, in silver, per 2,000 pounds.

The Cotopaxi Mine—In the same hill, with same direction and dip, is a large quartz vein, showing a width of about 6 feet, where two cuts have been made on the vein to a depth of 15 or 20 feet. The character of the mineral is similar to that of the Canton and Tiugahoki, and assays from $69 to $354 per ton.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The Secretary of the Interior, in his annual report, regards the situation in the Indian service as favorable, and as an indication of the propriety and practicability of the humane policy which was inaugurated at the beginning of President Grant's executive term, and which has governed the Department in the transaction of all business matters pertaining to the conduct of Indian affairs The satisfactory progress toward the accomplishment of the ends sought to be attained by this policy that has already been made fully justifies the hope that it will eventually achieve the end in view. The Secretary recommends that the system of cash annuities be abolished, and that payments of annuities to Indians be hereafter made in goods and supplies. He suggests that moneys due the prairie bands of Pottawatamies and Kansas Indians be invested in Government bonds and placed to the credit of said Indians respectively, for the purpose of their civilization, to be used by the Commissioner of Indian affairs for that object, both interest and principal, and at such times and in such a manner as the President of the United States may direct. The Government should assist the Indians desirous of securing a permanent home by donations of stock and farming implements. The first step toward the permanent settlement of the Indian in fixed homes is is the establisment and rigid enforcement of regulations to keep them all upon reservations. It is said the Sioux nation is almost completely surrounded by tribes that are really friendly to the Government, and at the same time bitterly hostile to the Sioux. If these friendly tribes could be liberally supplied with improved firearms and ammunition the present supremacy of the Sioux might in a few years be destroyed with but little aid from the army. The Secretary refers to the lawless condition of the Indian Territory, If the Okmulgee Constitution with proper amendments is not adopted at the next meeting of the Indian Council, and Congress shall not deem it advisable to erect a territorial government within the Territory, he trusts that necessary legislation may be obtained to at least provide for the organization of a court or courts therein under the jurisdiction, so far as the appointment of the judicial officers is concerned, of the General Government.

Chamberlin on Highway Robbery.

[From Wilkes' Spirit of the Times.]

The following dispatch from San Francisco, over Chamberlin's signature, appeared in The Herald of Tuesday last.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17th, 1873.

True Blue is not broken down. Palmer, the rider of Joe Daniels, cut True Blue down. True Blue could have distanced both Thad Stevens and Joe Daniels the third heat. Previous to the race parties made propositions to me to divide the purse and to win the money in the pool-box, which offer I declined. It was worse than highway robbery.

J. F. CHAMBERLIN.

At once on reading the above we telegraphed a copy of it back to San Francisco, directed to the Secretary of the Pacific Jockey Club, asking if the statements of Chamberlin's dispatch were true To this we promptly received the following reply:

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19, 1873.

George Wilkes—Dear Sir: True Blue is not broken down. The surgeon says he will be all right in a short time. There are respectable gentlemen who will testify that Daniels cut him down. The pools after the second heat sold as follows: True blue seven and eight hundred dollars against eighty and one hundred for both the others. As regards the proposition, I believe it was made; but not being present, I do not know it.

W. M. SHEAR, President P. J. C.

The testimony of this latter dispatch is clear as to the unfair treatment which True Blue received from the jockey of the horse Joe Daniels This does not surprise us much, as Palmer has been guilty of the same foul practice more than once upon Eastern courses; but it does surprise everybody that a two card gambler like Chamberlin, who has been robbing thousands of victims with false tools all his life—indeed who never had an honest occupation except when he was a cook—should pretend that he would not throw a race!

Now in the connection with the fact (which seems to have leaked out) that Chamberlin had really been approached with proposals to "throw" the race, we find the very significant information in Shear's telegram that after True Blue had won the second heat the betting on him was seven and eight hundred dollars against eighty and one hundred for both the others." In other words, that it was eight to one on True Blue against the field. If ever there was an opportunity to make money by "throwing" a race and swindling the public en masse, here was the chance. The cutting down of True Blue in the third heat by the scamp Palmer, therefore, may have intervened as a lucky accident for Chamberlin, as it enabled him to accomplish his purpose without suspicion to him self. Rogues who proceed, without concurrence, along different planes of villainy, often help their opposites, and in this way the thievish jockey may have made the swindling gambler's game. Whether this be so or not, it certainly is a very amusing thing to hear a two card cheat like Chamberlin scream out "highway robbery" as soon as he falls before one of his own modes of doing busines.

Supervisors Appointed.

Judge Hannah, to fill vacancies occasioned by the resignation of W. L. Hunter from the 3d, and the failure of T. K. Hutchison to qualify, from the 1st district, has, on petitions, appointed John R. Hughes and John W. P. Laird, as Supervisors for their respective districts They are both first-rate men, and their appointments will be generally acceptable. There were a good many citizens of Bishop Creek, however, who thought Mr. McCrosky, by virtue of the vote he received, if for no other reason, was entitled to the place, and would have sent in a petition to that effect but for a misunderstanding as to when the appointments were to be made. This desire, as we understand it, was not based on any especial objections to Mr. Laird, by any means. The new Supervisors will enter upon their duties at once, and serve until the next regular election, when candidates to fill the unexpired term will be voted for.

A Dangerous Undertaking.

Last Sunday two men, Chris. Evans and Henry Persian, started to cross the Sierra Nevadas, via the Kearsarge trail, to Visalia. They were afoot and had blankets and three or four days' provisions on their backs. As the trail is very rugged, over the loftiest mountains in the range, and the distance through over 100 miles, it is deemed very improbable that the men could have got through before Wednesday's fearful storm caught them. But both were old mountain men, and one, if not both, well acquainted with the route, so it is possible they are all right. As a favor to their anxious friends on this side, we wish The Times or Delta to make note of whatever facts they may ascertain in regard to these venturesome men.

Caused Trouble.

Old Alcohol, the sometimes king caused Sheriff Mulkey some trouble the other day. The powerful king didn't make a direct personal attack on the Sheriff, but inveigled Andrew Hoopfaucet into the notion that he, Andrew, could accomplish some big and notable things if he would only try. He did try, and took the Sheriff for his object, and spread himself so wide in his noisy demonstrations that it was deemed advisable to narrow his sphere of action by putting him under lock and key for a few hours. That is a very good way to cast out alcoholic devils, and in a short time Andrew was entirely freed from the one that had afflicted him, and then everything was serene.

Inyo Will Do After All.

F. H. Burroughs last Spring resigned his office of Supervisor, disposed of his property, and with his brother C. M. started off to find a better country than Inyo. After taking a look at some promising localities in this State, they visited Oregon, Washington Territory, British Columbia and the northern country generally, but in every place visited there were more pull-backs discernable than in the "earthquake country," so they came back and permanently settled down at Fish Slough, north of Bishop Creek. They are two of our best citizens, and are very welcome.

District Court.

The case of the San Felipe Company vs. Rafael Diaz, was on motion of counsel for plaintiff dismissed. The jury in Simpson vs. Wm. H. Van Arsdale' Manager of the Owens Lake Silver-Lead Company, brought in a verdict for plaintiff, giving him $2,400 of the $5,000 sued for. A stay of proceedings for thirty days was granted. Judgment will be rendered to day in the Miller vs. Peerson and Simpson's Omega tunnel suits, after which Court will adjourn for the term.

From the Junior.

We are in receipt of a note and several most beautifully executed wedding cards (printed by Crocker & Co., Sacramento,) from the junior and his bride, who were, November 28, in Virginia City. Mrs. P., and her mother, will make that place their home for a time, the junior intending to constitute himself temporarily a widower while attending to his Legislative duties in Sacramento which place he expected to reach on the 29th ultimo.

Snow Shovelers.

Almost everybody had a new sensation for this locality—that was in the way of shoveling snow from the roofs of their respective domiciles. All sorts of implements were improvised for the occasion—brooms, hay rakes, boards nailed to long poles, and all such fixings. They answered the purpose; no roofs gave away, though the wooden awning sustained by iron supports, in front of L. Wood's store, couldn't stand the pressure, and had to come down.

Astonished.

That redoubtable individual, the "oldest inhabitant," is astonished entirely at the weather clerk's operations of this week. It commenced snowing Wednesday afternoon and never let up until in the night of the following day, by which time the snow had accumulated to a depth of over two feet throughout this portion of the valley. The roads were effectually blockaded. The Northern Stage started out on Thursday, determined to go through or bust a hame string, but after dragging through a mile or two found it impossible to proceed, and had to come back. Another effort was made on Thursday, which was so far successful that nothing has been heard or seen of it since, to our knowledge. As each mile northward adds something to the depth of the snow, it is hardly probable for the wagon to be taken through even to Benton, but if pack horses or sleds run by man power can do it, the mail will get through. That's the sum of agent Brown's orders and if the thing "can be did" Con. and the other drivers will do it. Runkel of the Cerro Gordo line managed to bring his wagon through from Cerro Gordo. He reports the snow on the Hill and at Lone Pine as being much less in quantity than here. No mails, except a single one from Cerro Gordo, have been received here since Wednesday. The weather is not settled yet, but no snow has fallen since Thursday night.

Rough on Stock.

The deep snow is almost certain to occasion great suffering among the outside live stock. It is possible many will perish, as no provisions for such an extraordinary state of affairs were deemed at all necessary by any stock owners, and consequently hundreds of animals will get nothing to sustain life until the snow goes off.

In Session.

School Superintendent Symmes and Messrs. Blaisdel and Hardy met last Wednesday as a Board of Examiners But two candidates—Mrs. Emma P. Vonach, of Big Pine, and Charles C Wainright, of Round Valley—have applied for certificates. The examination closes this evening.

No News

The latest dates that has reached this section from the outside is November 29, so we know nothing of what our Legislature is doing or trying to do. We will probably hear from our Representative by letter before an other issue, snow and rain permitting.

Real Estate Transfer.

The little farm just north of town known as the Bennett place, owned by John Bourland, was purchased a few days since by Jos. Schalten, who will make it his place of residence. The price paid was $1,000, cash.

Leaky.

It appears that the roof on the court house leaks badly; leastwise His Honor had to vacate his seat the other night on account of the plentiful sprinkling he was favored with as the snow on the roof was melting.

The Kind of a Wife for a Drunken Man to Have.

"How do you get along?" said a devoted wife to her husband, a downtown merchant, in the midst of the panic. "Oh! I shall weather the storm but, I wish I had only a few hundred dollars more. It would be very convenient, to say the least." Don't you wish you had married a rich wife?" said she, in a teasing way; then rising and going to her room she returned with rather more than the amount required in United States bonds. "Why where in the world did you get this?" "Well my dear, you went to a champagne supper seven years ago, and on your return home finding navigation around the room rather difficult, deposited hat, shoes, gloves, and a large roll of bank bills on the carpet. I put it away, and waited three weeks for you to inquire if I had seen it. When finding you were ashamed to do so, I invested it; and here you have it."—N. Y. Sun,

Question of Residence.

J. S. Harrold, Treasurer of San Joaquin county resides at Farmington instead of at the county seat as required by the Political Code. He claims that he removed from Stockton to Farmington on account of ill-health. The Grand Jury has indicted him for misdemeanor in not residing at the county seat, under Section 176 of the Penal Code. He was tried and convicted and Monday is fixed for pronouncing sentence. Harrold was out on bail, but caused his bondsmen to surrender him, that he might swear out a writ of habeas corpus, which was done, the writ issuing from the Supreme Court. On Friday the prisoner was brought before the Court and admitted to bail on his Astronomical Science.

The liberality of James Lick has attracted considerable attention in the East, and his proposition of selecting a site for an observatory and to furnish the capital for constructing the largest telescope the world has ever seen, even though it should cost a million of dollars, has been spoken of by the press in terms which of themselves must be a satisfactory reward for the interest he has taken in the cause of science. Speaking of this undertaking The New York Tribune remarks:

The design is to consult the highest authorities, to discover how large an object glass it is possible to construct, and to have it constructed. The largest glass ever before constructed is twenty-inches in diameter, we believe. It is possible, of course, with unlimited means to exceed that size, though the difficulties increase enormously with each additional inch of diameter. Still those interested in the enterprise talk of a ten foot or twelve-foot diameter, with a focal distance of one hundred and twenty feet, requiring an enormous steel tube, at least, with its attachments, one hundred and thirty feet long, mounted on an enormous tower, and moved by machinery of great power. Such a telescope would bring the surface of the moon within an apparent distance of only eight miles from the observer, and make mountains, lakes, and seas—if such exist—distinctly visible on many of the planets. But can such a colossal glass be constructed? Those who know the difficulties in the way are doubtful, yet not hopeless.

True for You.

The Inyo (Cal.) Independent read the citizens of Los Angeles a rather severe lecture on their tendency to beg for trade, but never to lay out a dollar to secure it. "The Angels" are "dead stuck" after the Owens river trade, but never a dollar would they give The Independent by way of advertising for it; worse yet The Independent has but one subscriber in Los Angeles, and has to furnish six papers to exchanges. Very nearly our standing with them Mr. Independent. They want the trade of Arizona, and we want them to have it. But bless you, beyond taking a small number of Miners, and a good, paying advertisement from the banking firm of Workman & Temple, our crumbs from the people of Los Angeles are mighty few, small and far between, although we have upon more than occasion given valuable advice concerning the proper way to secure trade, etc., from this section. Do the merchants of San Diego carry on like the Los Angeles gents? No indeed, they advertise in the southern Arizona papers, and liberally at that.—Arizona Miner, Nov. 15.

Potatoes Proscribed.

Several German writers upon races predict that nations, far from improving will deterioate both in mental and physical characteristics, if potatoes become a principal article of diet. The celebrated Carl Voigt says that "the nourishing potatoe does not restore the wasted tissues, but makes our proletariats physically and mentally weak." The Holland physiologist, Mulder, gives the same judgment when he declares that the excessive use of potatoes among the poorer classes, and coffee and tea by the higher ranks is the cause of the indolence of nations Ledenfrost maintains that the revolutions of the past three centuries have been caused by the changed nourishment; the lowest workman, in former times, ate more flesh than now, when the cheap potatoe forms his principal subsistence, but gives him no muscular or nervous strength.

The Danger of Sedatives.

The Popular Science Monthly gives this warning on the important matter of using sedatives for the little ones: One of the great dangers attending the use of the various sedatives employed in the nursery is that they tend to produce the opium habit. These quack medicines owe their soothing effect to the action of opium, and the infant is by them given an appetite for narcotic stimulants. The offering for sale of such nostrums should be prohibited, as tending to the physical and moral deterioration of the race. In India mothers give to their infants sugar pills containing opium, and the result is a languid, sensual race of hopeless debauchees. In the United States the poisonous dose is administered under another name; but the consequences will probably be the same.

Found Guilty.

One of the jurors in the Stokes case—James Delos Center—has been heavily fined and sentenced to imprisonment for "contempt of Court, and conduct unbecoming a juror," which simply means that it has been established that he was bribed to bring in a verdict which would send Stokes to the penitentiary instead of the gallows. Two more of that infamous or idiotic jury will probably be found equally guilty These facts having been established, it does seem hard that Stokes cannot be brought out again and tried by an honest jury and hanged, as he properly deserves to be. Still the law does not permit that evident justice. Common sense must admit that this is a lamentable defect in the law and a practical shielding of enormous crimes.—S. F. Chronicle.

—In a letter to a friend, a Springfield young lady states that she is not engaged, but she sees a cloud above

Slate Range.

[From The Los Angeles Express.]

The tract of country known as the Slate Range Valley is probably the most curious that Southern California can boast of. It is there the immense deposits of borax were discovered something like a year ago, and at that time the whole lower or central portion of the basin was covered with a white deposit, breaking away in some places in large soda reefs, in others resembling the waves of the ocean, and in still others stretching out for miles in one unbroken level from which the sun reflected its rays with a glare almost unendurable. But one of the most singular features in connection with this section was the absence of rain or moisture; the days were ever sunny and hot, the nights without dew, and generally warm. For more than five years, it is said by those who claim to know, there had been no rain there, until some three months since the spell was broken. Suddenly, and with scarcely any previous warning, rain commenced to fall, and for thirty hours it came down steadily and unceasingly, unaccompanied by wind, but yet a thorough, drenching rain. It then ceased, and soon after it was found that the character of the surface deposit had in many places entirely changed. For two or three days it remained pleasant, when suddenly a water spout was seen winding its way through the valley. It came in a zig zag course across the upper end of the lake, striking the range of hills on the east side and coursing rapidly along them. The canyons and gorges were soon filled with water, which poured from them in a fearful volume and spread itself out upon the bottom. In a short time it was over, and denizens of the locality now look for another dry season of five years.

The borax company, now in operation there, are said to be doing well, and another set of works on a small scale will probably go in within a short time. Some thirty five hundred pounds of the refined article was recently shipped to San Francisco, and some ten tons of crude material.

The Encaustic Tiling

The encaustic tiling of the rotunda and hall floor of the State capital, second story, is now completed, excepting the cleaning after the painters, which is now being done. The combination of colors of which the tiles are composed has a very pleasing effect. They are from the manufactory of Maw & Co., England, the principal manufacturers of encaustic tiles, who have a thousand different patterns, from the simplest for kitchen basements, to the most elaborate for halls, conservatories, etc They are made from a pure kind of clay, colored to suit the necessary tints, compressed under a heavy pressure and then burned. W. Jones is the contractor for supplying the tiles, which are being laid under the superintendence of T. H. Jones, the work having to be done hurriedly so as to have it completed for the meeting of the Legislature. W. Jones has also laid about 5,000 feet in Judge Crocker's art gallery in this city, and has now a shipment due for a contract in San Francisco Judge Crocker's and the Capitol are the only complete floors (excepting a few vestibules) yet laid on the Pacific Coast. In the principal cities of the Eastern States they are imported and used very extensively. The advantages claimed for these tiles are that they are far more beautiful and from twenty to fifty per cent. cheaper than marble; so durable that it is said to they are ultimately cheaper than common wood flooring, having in England stood fifty years constant wear without any perceptible difference in their appearance, they being so hard that they will scratch glass.—Sacramento Union, Nov. 28

Remarkable Escape from Death.

At about 8 o'clock this morning three men, including the foreman of the Silver Hill mine, in lower Gold Hill, met with a most miraculous escape from death. They had barely stepped on the cage at the top of the shaft, when they were precipitated with great rapidity to the water in the sump at the bottom, a distance of 330 feet. Notwithstanding the imminent peril in which the party were involved, Mr. Ford, the foreman, had sufficient presence of mind to throw up one side of the bonnet of the cage, thereby preventing the men from being buried under twelve hundred feet of wire cable, weighing at least a ton. His prompt action in the matter saved the live of the entire party. The men, who were in center compartment of the shaft, escaped drowning by crawling through into the pump compartment, from whence they were hoisted to the surface of the mine. Mr. Ford, while in the act of raising one section of the bonnet, sustained a severe bruise upon his forehead. One of the other men had the scalp on the top of his head cut open for a distance of some three inches. Dr. Hall sewed up the wound. The exact cause of the accident is not clearly understood, but is probably due to the reel getting loose somehow. —Gold Hill News, Nov. 28.

Keep Ammonia in the House.

No housekeeper should be without a bottle of spirits of ammonia, for besides its medical value, it is invaluable for household purposes. It is nearly as useful as soap, and its cheapness brings it within the reach of all. Put a tea-spoonful of ammonia to a quart of warm soap suds, dip in a flannel cloth, and wipe off the dust and fly specks and see for yourself now how much labor it will save. No scrubbing will be needful. It will cleanse and brighten silver wonderfully; to a pint of suds mix a tea-spoonful of the spirits, dip in your silver spoons, forks, etc., rub with a brush, and polish with chamois skins.

For washing mirrors and windows it is very desirable; put a few drops of ammonia on a piece of paper and it will readily take off every spot or finger mark on the glass. It will take out grease spots from every fabric; put on the ammonia nearly clear, by blotting paper over the place and press a hot flat iron on it for a few moments. A few drops of water will clean laces and whiten them as well; also muslins. Then it is a most refreshing agent at the toilet table; a few drops in a basin of water will make a better bath than pure water, and if the skin is oily it will remove all glossiness and disagreeable odors. Added to a foot bath it entirely absorbs all noxious smell so often arising from the feet in warm weather, and nothing is better for cleaning the hair from dandruff and dust. For cleaning hair and nail brushes it is equally good.

Put a teaspoonful of ammonia into one pint of water. When they look white rinse them in water and put them in the sunshine, or in a warm place to dry. The dirtiest brushes will come out of this bath white and clean. For medicinal purposes ammonia is always unrivaled. For the headache it is a desirable stimulant, and frequent inhaling of its pungent odors will often entirely remove catarrhal cold. There is no beetter remedy for heartburn and dyspepsia, and the aromatic spirits of ammonia is especially prepared for these troubles. Ten drops of it in a wine-glass of water are often a great relief. The spirits of ammonia can be taken in the same way but it is not as palatable.

In addition to all these uses, the effect of ammonia on vegetation is beneficial. If you desire roses, geraniums, fuchias, etc, etc, to become more flourishing, you can try it upon them by adding five or six drops to every pint of warm water that you give them, but don't repeat the dose oftener than once in four or five days least you stimulate them too highly. So be sure and keep a large bottle of it in the house and have a glass stopper for it, as it is very evanescent and also injurious to corks.

The Riderless War-Horses.

In almost the last letter written by Lieutenant-Colonel Pemberton from the seat of war before his untimely death, there was a passage which strikes us as describing one of the most pathetic of all the incidents of the war, though the pathos of it relates, not to the human belligerents, but to their only active allies in the animal world, the horse. A Prussian hussar, who had got off his horse to carry water to two wounded and dying comrades, was killed with the poor soldiers he was relieving, by a shell, in the very act of pouring the water down the throat of one of them; and just then his regiment moved off, his empty horse following in the ranks; whereupon Lieutenant Pemberton remarked, "Only those who have seen a battle field can form an idea of the extraordinary way in which the horses, as long as they have a leg left to crawl on, will follow the regiment to which they belong. I saw what, evidently had been sergeanst' horses, keeping their position in the rear of their squadron, wheeling with it, and halting, exactly as if their riders were on their backs, and all the time streaming with blood. Poor creatures! they are indeed to be pitied; for they have neither Vaterland, promotion nor the coveted medal to think of, whatever may be the issue; and few indeed are there, which have been in action, which have not some honorable scars to show." Again, the German Post relates, "that after the slaughter at Vionville, on the 18th of August, a strange and touching spectacle was presented. On the evening call being sounded by the First Regiment of Dragoons of the Guard, 602 riderless horses answered to the summons, jaded, and in many cases maimed. The noble animals still retained their disciplined habits.—Our Dumb Animals.

Peruvian Mines.

From Peru comes the news that an important company has been formed to work the submerged mines of Cerro de Pasco. In 1840 these deposits produced 307,213 marks of silver, in 1872 only 201,067 marks; the striking difference is owing to the existing impossibility of reaching the veins, they being covered in places with water many feet in depth. The company will perforate tunnels leading out from the bottom of the shafts, and the prize will be rich in the extreme. A few years since powerful engines were brought from England to pump out this water but from unforeseen difficulties only a partial success was obtained. The most expert mineralogists state as their opinion that the mines are inexaustible.

THE SUN.

Weekly, Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

Origin of Names of States.

There is much that is interesting in the study of the origin of the names of the States of the Union, as they are derived from a variety of sources. To begin in the geographical order, we first have:

Maine, which takes its name from the province of Maine, in France, and was so called in compliment to the Queen of Charles I., Henrietta, its owner.

New Hampshire—first called Laconia from Hampshire, England.

Vermont, from the Green Mountains (in French verd mont.)

Massachusetts, from the Indian language, signifying, "The country about the great hill."

Rhode Island gets its name from the fancied resemblance of the island to that of Rhodes in the ancient Levant.

Connecticut's name was Mohegan, spelled originally. "Quon-ch-ta-cut," signifying "A long river."

New York was so named as a compliment to the Duke of York, whose brother, Charles II., ceded him that territory.

New Jersey was named by one of its original proprietors, Sir George Carteret, after the Island of Jersey, in the British Channel, of which he was Governor.

Pennsylvania, as it is generally known, takes its name from William Penn, the "sylvania" meaning woods.

Deleware derives its name from Thos West, Lord de la Ware Governor of Virginia.

Maryland derives its name from the Queen of Charles I., Henrietta Maria.

Virginia gets its name from Queen Elizabeth, the unmarried or Virgin Queen.

The Carolinas were named in honor of Charles I.

Georgia in honor of Charles II.

Florida gets its name from Jasquas de Flores, or "Feast of the Flowers."

Alabama comes from a Greek word signifying "The land of rest."

Louisiana—named in honor of Louis XIV.

Mississippi derives its name from that of the great river, which is in the Natchez tongue, "The Father of the Waters."

Arkansas is derived from the Indian word Kansas, "the Smoky Water," with the French prefix of ark, a bow."

Tennessee is an Indian name, meaning "The river with the big bend."

Kentucky—an Indian name—"Kaintuckee," signifying "At the head of the river."

Ohio—Sawnee name for "Beautiful River."

Michigan's name was derived from the lake, the Indian name for a fish trap, which the shape of the lake suggested.

Indiana's name is derived from that of the Indians.

Illinois' name is derived from the Indian word "Iliniois," men, and the French affix "ois," making it Tribes of Men.

Wisconsin's name is said to be the Indian for a wild, rushing channel.

Missouri is also an Indian name for muddy, having reference to the muddiness of the Missouri river.

Kansas—the Indian name for smoky water.

The derivation of the name of Nebraska is unknown.

Nevada—Spanish for snowy or white, and derived from Sierra Nevada, the snowy range.

Iowa signifies, in the Indian language, "The drowsy ones."

Minnesota, "The cloudy waters."

The origin of the name of California is unknown.

—An old negro woman was heard to exclaim; "Thomas Jefferson, you and James Madison come into the house, and bring Abe Lincoln along with you, or I'll reach for you suah!"

—The St. Louis Globe remarks that the Democrat will have no heavy editorials on any subject later in the alpha bet than B for the Present, as, only two volumes of the new Cyclopædia have yet been published.

—A man down in Maine, with a wife and two children, having taken a notion to study for the ministry, and entered

Is the Earth Solid.

Professor Dana maintains that it is, and upholds his belief in the following language, in a communication to The American Journal of Philosophy: It seems now to be demonstrated by astronomical and physical arguments—arguments that are independent, it should be noted, of direct geological observation—that the interior of the globe is essentially solid.

The condition of the earth's interior here recognized is, as many readers will have observed, that suggested long ago by Professor W. Hopkins—the author who first offered (1839) a mathematical argument in favor of the earth's either having a very thick crust or being solid throughout. In a paper on "Theories of Elevation and Earthquakes," in 1847, Professor Hopkins argues that the central mass of the earth became solid in consequence of the pressure whenever the temperature within reached a limit that admitted of it; that crusting at surface from cooling commenced afterwards; and that between the regions of interior and exterior solidification there long remained a viscous layer, which in the progress of time, was gradually contracted by the union of the solid nucleus to the thickning shell.

The possibility of the solidification at center from pressure, in face of a temperature too high for consolidation from cooling, has not been experimentally demonstrated; yet a number of facts favor the principle. It has been urged that solidification of rocks is attended by contraction, that is, by increase of density, and since pressure tends to produce the greater density, so it may bring about the condition of a solid. The fact that ice, which has less density than water, changes to water under pressure, has been appealed to in support of the conclusion. The pressure on the material within the earth is so great that experiment can never imitate it or directly test its effects. Beneath only 150 miles of liquid rock, it would not be less than 1,000,000 pounds to the square inch. Less than this may have been sufficient to produce crystallization and so give rigidity to the viscous rock material, or at least so after the cooling the earth has undergone. The rigidity of slowly solidified rock is beyond that of glass or steel—or the degree which, according to Sir William Thompson, must exist in order that the earth should be as completely free as it is from tidal movements in its mass.

According to the above, the solid part of the globe consists, as regards origin, of three parts:

The central mass consolidated by pressure; the solidification centrifugal, or from the centre outward.

The crust proper, consolidated by cooling; the solidification centripetal, or from the surface inward.

The outer crust, or superficial coating—the upper crust—made chiefly by the working over and elaborating of the material of the surface through external agencies, aided by the everacting lateral force from contraction, and including all terraces from the Archæan upward.

A Treasure Trove.

The Treasure trove recently discovered at the Bay of Fundy was found in a high clay bank, the coin being scattered near a piece of broken pottery. The vessel which had evidently contained the gold, had lain mouth downward, and on a piece of vellum inclosed in a wrapper of the same material, and placed between the copper and the bottom, was the following, written quite evenly: "Ye men of ye goode shippe Royal Harrie took ye Spaniard Fernando in ye maine sea near to Hispaniola with much treasure. She laddde an anker of silver, which we buried in ye bank twelve pikes length due northe, and a golden beade like a a mannes. Thys treasure is putte here by Johnne Morgane, ye captain of syd Harrie, ye Spaniards being in ye baie." The writing and vellum were in a remarkable state of preservation, presenting the appearance of not being more than twenty years old. The coins are of two kinds, both of which are quite ancient, and of a pattern not in use at the present day. Several of them are evidently Hindostanee. The majority of the pieces are Spanish pistoles and half pistoles.

Curious Optical Illusions.

Look steadily for a short time at a white wall, then place the tips of the for fingers together thus—

—and raise the hands up in front of the face, and about a foot from it. Now if you continue to look steadily at the wall, and not at your hands, you will see a third finger between the other two. Or, closing the fingers, and placing the ends of the thumbs together, a third thumb will be seen. The experiment is a very interesting and amusing one for the children, and will even cause many older persons to smile on trying it.

—A New Haven woman wanted her husband arrested, recently, for deserting her. She had supported him since their marriage, a year ago, she said, but now he had gone off and wouldn't live with her. The attorney refused to issue the papers, on the ground that the husband could be of no possible use to her.

—A traveler writing of the women, in the Sandwich Islands, says: The loose dress gives grace as well as dignity to their movements, and whoever invented it for them deserves more credit than he has received. It is a little startling at first to see women walking about in what to our perverted tastes looks like calico or black stuff nightgowns; but the dress grows on you as you become accustomed to it, lends itself readily to bright ornamentation; it is eminently fit for the climate, and a stately Hawaiian dame, marching through the street in black holaka—as the dress is called—with a long necklace of bright scarlet or brilliant yellow flowers, bare and untrammeled feet and flowing hair, compares very favorably with a high-heeled, wasp-waisted, absurdly looking fashionable white lady.

—If anybody sees a row of buttons coming down street, let him preserve his equilibrium and think not of supernatural agencies. There's a woman behind them.

THE LEGISLATURE.

We have reports of legislative doings up to the 3d instant. The principal work of organization was completed in both Houses, and it is particularly gratifying to know the monopoly gang are worsted in every count. The Assembly was called to order by Boruck, the clerk at the last session and the railroad candidate for the same position in this. After the members were sworn in a motion was made to adjourn, which was for the purpose of gaining time on the part of the monopoly wing to organize for the Senatorial fight. As the balloting for Senators is fixed for each Tuesday after the organization, until an election is made, Boruck thought to gain a week's time by refusing to allow the organization on Monday. Although a large majority of the members voted no on the adjournment, the railroad henchman declared that the ayes had it, and left his seat. The result on the following day was that Boruck was ignominiously defeated for the clerkship, and is essentially a disgraced man. By the concurrence of Democrats and Independents, Estee, Independent and strong anti-monopoly, was elected Speaker, and Loofborough, ditto, Clerk. By the same joint action of these two parties all the subordinate offices were soon filled. Among the rest we may mention that T. S. Harris, who temporarily resided in this place last Summer, was elected Minute Clerk, Mr. Parker, our junior, warmly endorsing him.

In the Senate the fight was strictly railroad and anti-railroad. The Independents joined with the Democrats and elected Irwin, Democrat and anti-monopoly, President pro tem., and so on through the list downwards. It is a people's triumph, this organization throughout—also another like that of September for Mr. Earl, since he was down there seeing to it in person.

PLEASE RESIGN.

The people of this county, or at least a large portion of them, will submit a request to Josiah Earl, intimating the general desire for his resignation of the Registership of the Land Office. If this does not produce the desired result, the whole matter will be submitted to the Department at Washington. Leaving all minor considerations out of the count, we, as a people, do not believe it either right or safe to allow any land speculator or would-be land grabber in any shape, to run a United States Land Office in his own private interest, or to allow him to sit, by virtue of his office, as a judge in highly important land matters, when he himself is a party on one side and the people on the other. We don't believe that any man possessing any real proper self-respect, or regard for the rights of others, would insist upon retaining such a position, much less to dare a whole community to try to put him out of it. But Mr. Earl very well knows that aside from all immediate pecuniary considerations, it is essential for him to maintain his position and carry out his schemes, because wholly upon his success in these depends the future control of the affairs of Inyo county, not only politically but in other ways. If he and his co-adjutors (and there are more than three or four of them, strange as it may seem) succeed in their present plans they will undoubtedly be able to mange things to suit themselves whether the people as a class like it or don't like it. But let that be as it may, he manifestly has no right, except the right of might, which he claims to possess, to retain himself as a judge in his own case. We give him and all concerned notice that this aforesaid right and might will be contested to the bitter end. If he has Congressmen and Senators ready to be led up by the nose, as he inferentially asserts, to fight for him right or wrong, he may get away with it—but not until he finds both himself and them very well warmed up.

The Surrender of the Virginius Decided Upon.

It has been definitely decided upon that the Virginius will be delivered into the hands of our naval forces, at some one of our ports not yet agreed upon. Information received in Washington December 1, states that the Spanish Government have taken the precaution to place the Virginins under the protection of the guns of Spanish guuboats

WOULD DO WELL TO ATTEND TO HIS OWN BUSINESS.

It seems that his honor, Judge Reed, is anxious to devote a little of his valuable time to our local affairs. It furthermore appears that a very large number of Inyo voters, among whom is the writer of this, were most egregiously sold in their choice for District Judge, at the late election.

Judge Reed, while prayerfully seeking votes previous to the late election, took especial pains to carry the impression to us personally, and others whom we can name, that "so help him God, he was not in sympathy with, or a supporter in any manner of the land grabbing schemes of our local land ring; that, owing to his opposition to similar ones in Kern county, he expected a heavy opposition from the swamp land gang in that county," etc. and so forth. We believed him; in those days we had great faith in what our honorable Jugde said and done, and took some pains to impress certain doubting Thomases with a similar faith, especially in reference to the swamp ring. As will be seen by what is to follow the fate of this faith is well illustrated by that of the confiding chap who used his bosom to warm the frozen viper into life; that chap's faith and good intentions both came to an unlooked for and disastrous end—it only remained for his friends to speculate as to the extent of his surprise at his misplaced confidence; however great his surprise may have been it was not in excess of our own at the new position our extremely honorable District Judge announced for himself the evening before he went away. But for the fact that he addressed himself directly and at great length to a particular friend of ours, a gentleman whose word is not for a moment to be doubted, we would not have believed it. True, we had seen for ourself at different times that his honor had to do a great deal of mimicking and squabbling with attorneys, this term, and that he felt much aggravated at one (Mr. Reddy) particularly, and at times not much less at another, Mr. Gregg. We also know it to be a matter of frequent expression that "the lawyers knew more law than this 'granny's court' and always got the best of it"—but we don't exactly see wherein we should be made the target of this mighty Judge's malicious shafts even admitting his uncalled for assertion that "Pat Reddy owns the whole G—d d—d paper," to be true, which assertion we take this occasion to pronounce unequivocally false whether it comes from Theron Reed, Josiah Earl or any other man living. True, we have commended Mr. Reddy's position in certain issues of public interest, giving each time, full reasons for so doing; under similar circumstances, we shall take pleasure in doing the same thing again, not that he needs such support on his own personal account, but because we deemed his views right and wished them understood. We have done identically the same thing and almost as often for Judge Reed; we have done the same for Mr. Earl, when we believed him in the right. In all those cases we knew full well that a large, perhaps the larger, portion of our readers held opposite views from those of the parties named and our own, and hence the need and cause of mention as such differences were likely to have comparatively important effects. We will remark here that this is in no sense an apology for any of those things, whether subsequent events proved them right or wrong; we are free to admit and amend errors, but have no apologies for an honest conviction, though it may be founded in error.

His honor with great warmth held forth the other evening, in his usual elegant and refined manner to this effect: "That —— —— paper must be busted out, —— —— it, and we are raising $10,000 to do it. The s—n of a —— of a thing is always opposing those who are trying to bring the country out. Ecal's scheme is a good one for the county, and he ought to be supported in it, even if people do believe he would steal from his grandmother; ain't I here to protect people in their legal rights? Certainly, this county ought to have a swamp land law; it won't do to divide the land up in little patches, everybody taking a piece; it must be in a few hands and then we can have a big irrigating canal The swamp act has done a good thing for Kern and so it would here if people would let it; but that G—d d—d s—— —— —— paper is always meddling where it has no business It is owned, body and breeches, by Pat Reddy; it is eternally full of adulations of Pat Reddy, Mr. Reddy; that is why it has so much to say of Waucoba; because Mr. Reddy is interested in it—if he don't own any stock he is the company's attorney, and that is enough. We'll bust 'em all out together, —— d——m 'em."

This is not all this powerful and refined man and extremely honorable Judge had to say in this strain in the course of that conversation, but it will suffice to show the bent of his great reasoning powers, and also, what a prize was won here at the last election. With two such Judges cheek by jowl, one for the preliminary work in the Land Office, the other on the Bench for subsequent contingencies, we don't see but what every thing is lovely. We really do not believe, however, that the profits of the proposed grab will equal the cost of the "busting out" operation. The sum fixed is not enough by at least one-half.

If his honor wants to take stock in our local affairs on one side it will be the busines of the other to see that he gets his share of the profits, as no man ought to interest himself so much in affairs which are none of his business unless he expects a share of the profits —such as they are.

When Judge Reed holds court again, and has to do so much squabbling as to make people partially sick, we would advise him by all means to leave his six-shooter in his room and take a stomach pump on the Bench instead—that, toward the close of a long term like the last, could be made effective on several at the same time, and intimidate the one-armed and un-armed lawyer most as much as the revolver did; besides, counsel then might not have so long to sigh in vain for "findings."

As we have not had anything whatever to do or say about Judge Reed's war with Mr. Reddy or any other lawyer —against himself or anything that he, to our knowledge, was or ought to be concerned in, we consider this underhanded attack upon us unwarranted and unjustifiable in every particular. We say here that, positively, we were not aware that Rr. Reddy was even the attorney for the Waucoba compaay, but it would make no difference if he had owned the entire district. If Judge Reed, Mr. Earl or any of their sort think they can by such means crush out either one or both of the especial objects of their dislike, P. Reddy, Esq., or THE INDEPENDENT, we cordially invite them to pitch in; we may have to use a little wormwood with our ink, but will make it as interesting for all hands as we can, comfortably.

COULDN'T STAND THE PRESS.

As was anticipated, Roscoe Conkling, who voted for and took his back pay and who defended it before his constituents in Herkimer and Oneidia counties, New York, is now zealously taking the back track. He is foremost in the race to repeal the act and return the swag. He has introduced a bill into the Senate providing for conveying into the Treasury all back-pay returned and prohibiting the payment of all sums not called for. This, if passed, will prevent further disbursements on this account, and is supposed to legalize the donations of back-pay already made by penitent Congressmen to the Treasury. Not to be outdone by the Honorable Roscoe, Senator Pratt, of Indiana, the same day introduced a bill fixing the salaries of members of Congress at the old figure, $5,000, exclusive of traveling expenses to and from Washington, and allowing each member $200 for stationary and postage. Senator Wright, of Iowa, also introduced a bill to repeal the act of March 3, 1873, increasing salaries, etc., which provides that all salaries increased by that Act be fixed at the same amounts as they were before its passage; though so far as it applies to the President it takes effect after his term under the Constitution; but so far as it applies to Senators, representatives and others, it takes effect upon the date of the passage of the bill. This bill provides that it shall not be so construed as to revive the franking privilege:

Says The Gold Hill News: It thus appears, that the universal condemnation of this iniquitous measure, both by press and people, has had its designed effect. The action of Republican Congressmen in this matter affords gratifying assurance that they appreciate and will act in accord with public sentiment on the question. The cry of some of the subsidized sheets claiming fellowship with the Republican party—which they disgrace by mere contact; that the people were sick of hearing about back pay, and that it was only the so-called independent press which was responsible for the trouble in this matter, has, like sundry other attempts to cover up wrong under the skirts of a great party, have been of no avail."

Railway Enterprise in Mexico.

A concession to construct a railroad from the Rio Grande frontier to the city of Mexico, thence to the Pacific, has been granted to a company of Mexicans. This defeats both the Plum and Rosecrans projects and leaves the matter in the hands of the Mexicans, who will doubtless interest other parties in the enterprise, or dispose of their concession to the greatest advantage to themselves.

WAUCOBA AGAIN.

Following is a copy of Prof Clarence King's report, or opinion, rather, of Waucoba. It is addressed to Mayor (now ex-Mayor) Alvord of San Francisco, the President of the Waucoba Company, and at whose desire the Professor visited the district and submitted an opinion for his, Alvord's, own personal guidance, as he is largely interested in the district, and is anxious to proceed with its development. We doubt not in the least but the suggestions contained in this report will be carried out, and at a very early date:

SIR—During a late visit to Inyo county I made an examination of the chief mining locations belonging to your company, and with a hope that my testimony as to their apparent value may encourage their development, I beg to offer you the following notes:

Waucoba District is situated on the east slope of the Inyo range of mountains, a little north of the parallel of Independence, and is approached at present by a wagon road from Independence to the head of Mazurka Canyon, thence about nine miles by trail to the company's house on Pownzina Creek. It may also be reached by a very fair road from Big Pine (Owens Valley) through Soldier's Canyon to Marble Canyon, thence southeast ten or twelve miles by trail.

The district occupies a section of the whole eastern slope of the Inyo chain, and embraces a varied range of geological formations, chief among which are central masses of granite and overlying belts of slate and limestone.

These latter rocks bear evidence of intense metamorphesion and frequent fissuring; they are further of moment as containing the silica and lead lodes of the district. These lodes assemble themselves in five distinct groups, which may be briefly noted thus:

NUMBER ONE—THE LOWER LEAD MINES,

lying about two miles northeast of the company's camp on Pownzina Creek, and consisting, so far as the limited openings allowed me to see, of a series of comparatively narrow quartz veins, irregularly but quite heavily charged with galena, which yields under assay about $40 per ton in silver, and 80 per cent. lead.

NUMBER TWO—THE WONDER AND ZACATECUS LOCATIONS.

lying about six miles northwest of the camp on Pownzina Creek, at an elevation of about 7,800 feet. The formation here is a dark-greenish hornblendic and chloretic slate or schist, through which the mineral vein cuts in a well-marked fissure.

Here, as throughout the district, very little development work has been done, but nature has exposed enough to warrant the most flattering hopes. Although not proven, I regard the Wonder and Zacatecus as locations upon the same lode.

The vein is a large and powerful one, ranging from six to ten feet, with spurs breaking through the country rock for a still greater breadth. In a gangue of reddish and white quartz occurs large masses and bunches of galena so closely joined and so intimately related to each other as almost to form a solid zone of lead ore.

Neither in Utah, Nevada or at Cerro Gordo have I seen such an important surface developments of lead ore.

Of course no estimate of tonnage could be safely made, but there is very fair ground for the belief that these two claims will yield a very great amount of lead. The pure ore assays from $40 to $48 per ton in silver and about the normal 80 per cent. lead.

NUMBER THREE—THE EMILY DEPOSIT

is so marked by the earthy and decomposed outcropping material, and the surface ground is so disturbed that I was unable to assign a definite character to the vein, but sufficient depth has not been reached to decide the character of the deposit.

NUMBER FOUR.

Near the head of Soldiers' Pass occurs a series of lead bearing quartz veins, of which the most prominent has been called the "Bierstadt." Like the lower lead mines first mentioned the quartz gangue largely predominates.

There are evidences of a very large vein, but how richly its mass may be charged with ore it is impossible to say from a surface inspection.

Of the foregoing four mineral groups, all but the Emily are well characterized, lead bearing quartz lodes, and it is most probable that the Emily is similar in nature, with the exception of an added value in high grade silver minerals.

NUMBER FIVE

is a group of silver quartz lodes, enclosed in a buff, silicious limestone. They are all within a comparatively narrow area upon a crest of an outlying spur, about three miles in a northerly direction from the camp on Pownzina Creek.

Chief among these claims are the "Canton," "Tiugahoki" and "Cotapaxi," the latter two probably located on the same vein.

The Canton is a vein of pure quartz from three to six feet thick, having a streak of silver mineral varying from one to two feet in width, and yielding under assay from $25 to $300 per ton in silver. The silver minerals seem to be rich argentiferous galena, mixed sulphurets of silver, lead and copper and minute particles of stephanite.

The lode dips with the limestone strata, and gives evidence of considerable force and permanence. Similar and of probably equal value, are the "Tiugahoki" and "Cotapaxi."

It would be unsafe to speak more definitely of these various groups until development has progressed further.

The lead veins are embarrassed with quartz, which, should the surface proportions hold good in depth, will have to be separated with water dressing before the ores can be smelted. I should therefore advise that among the lead mines work should for the present be confined to the Wonder and Zacaticus claims, where the proportion of quartz is smallest.

It is most desirable to prospect these two locations downward as rapidly as possible, to determine whether the quartz is only a surface accompaniment of the lead, or whether they continue to hold their relative proportions in depth.

Should the quartz hold downward, I consider it doubtful, under present conditions of transportation, if the ores could be profitably treated without enriching the bullion by adding silver ore.

If on the other hand the galena, as seems probable, should free itself from the quartz gangue, its treatment will be simple.

Among the silver mines proper, I should advise that for the present only the Canton be explored, as its volume and strength give such good promise to hold in depth.

I consider that these three claims, the Canton for silver, and the Wonder and Zacatecus for lead, make upon the surface such a showing of metal as to honestly warrant the expenditure of $30,000.

It should, however, be borne in mind that all estimates and hopes based on surface showing are too often upset by a deep prospecting—in short, that work alone can determine the value of new mining properties. In this case I can only say that the natural indications are ample to warrant the above indicated expenditure.

So liable are veins to change their mineral components downward, that I should recommend the expenditure of at least $15,000 in sinking on the Canton and Wonder before the reduction works are determined upon.

A thorough prospecting of these two mines will be the key to the value of the whole region, and although I feel bound to state that the operation will be an experiment and not a certainty, I believe it to be an experiment of remarkable promise and one deserving immediate attention.

As this is an informal communication, volunteed by me, and not a report on the district, I confine myself merely to this brief statement, referring you for further details to the reports of Mr Brady and Prof. Price.

I should add, however, that timber and fuel are very abundant, and that with economy there is plenty of water.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant.

CLARENCE KING.

Don't Want It.

When the news came that Casserly had thrown up his commission as Senator, it was the devout wish of a very great number of anti monopoly people that ex-Governor Haight would be elected to fill the place. Had Haight been willing, there is but little doubt but he would have been elected; but in a long letter to Dr. J. F. Montgomery he declines the honor. In this letter he touches briefly upon the political history of the past and the situation of the present. He does not believe that the Democratic party is about to disband, but it had better disband unless it purges itself of the element which avors protective tariff, inconvertible paper money, grants of lands and subsidies, and special privileges to corporations. He thinks it probable that they will do this now by a coalition with all the anti-monopoly forces, elect the next President and inaugurate an era of reform. "This," he says, "will not be accomplished by any compromise of principle such as was attempted in '72, when principle was sacrificed to organization, and when the most conspicuous champion of the protective system was selected to represent Democratic doctrines, to the disgust of thousands of sincere friends of reform." The protective system, according to Governor Haight organized the lobby, inaugurated the reign of bribery, and linked in with every corrupt railroad scheme before Congress. The only treatment to bestow upon it is to extirpate it root and branch.

Terrible Disaster.

A New York dispatch from London, December 1st, gives the following account of a terrible disaster at sea:

Ship Tri Mountain, from New York, arrived at Cardiff early this morning, bringing intelligence of a dreadful disaster to the steamship Ville de Havre, which left New York November 15th for Havre, commanded by Captain Surmount. At 2 o'clock on the morning of the 23d the Ville de Havre came in collision with the British ship Lechine, from London for New York, and sunk shortly afterwards. Two hundred and seventy-six of the passengers of the Ville de Havre were lost. The Tri Mountain saved 87 and brought them to Cardiff. Later dispatches from Cardiff bring the following additional particulars of the loss of the Ville de Havre: She was struck amidships by the Lachine, and sunk in 12 minutes after the collission. The Lachine immediately lowered her boats which rendered all the service possible by them. Fifty-three of the crew were saved, including the Captain which go to make up the 87 saved.

Decided.

The famous Raymond-Ely & Kentucky mining suit has been decided in favor of the Raymond.

Blood for Blood.

The statement is made that a private letter has been received in New York showing that Maximo Gomez, to avenge the shooting of those captured on the Virginius, attacked and captured a number of Spanish fortified camps in the vicinity of Santiago. He made over two hundred prisoners, and marching them up close to Santiago, shot them in full view of the Spanish fortifications, and then sent word to Burriel to come out and bury them. Burriel left immediately for Havana.

Snow Everywhere.

It seems that the late snow storm has excited surprise in other localities besides our own. It fell several inches deep throughout the Sacramento Valley and as far west as Petaluma, Sonoma county. Even in San Francisco the streets were covered with snow, and altogether it was an extraordinary event.

MARRIED.

At Independence, December 11, by Hon. John A. Hannah, County Judge, WILLIAM NOTER to MRS. ELIZABETH WILLIAMS.

BORN.

Insane Woman—Where does she Belong.

About three weeks since a woman apparently about forty years of age, came in the Southern stage and applied for work at the Blahey House and found employment for a few days; she then went to the Inyo House where she was given chamber work until she began to show unmistakable symptoms of insanity. She was then relieved from active work, but told to make the house her home. While apparently in her right mind she stated that she was from Tule River; that her name was Elizabeth Williams, her maiden name having been Smith; that she had been the mother of five children, all of which were dead, and that her husband, while they lived in Tennessee, had joined the Confederate army and was killed in the war. After she became flighty she was anxious to go to Columbus, Nevada, where she thought she had some relatives, and twice started off afoot getting as far as the Post from which she was pursuaded to come back. The second time she was brought back by the Sheriff, and as she subsequently became aware that it was the Sheriff that brought her back she became raving, but never at any time evincing any inclination to violence. Just before the storm she managed to slip away from the parties keeping watch during thenight, and the next heard of her she had reached Benigno Aguirre's, five miles from this place, where she has since remained. It is supposed the death of her husband and children is the cause of her aberation of mind, and it is deemed quite probable she is an escape from some asylum. P. S.—Since the foregoing was in type the question of her insanity is pretty well settled, since she has taken to herself a husband of the immature age of only seventy-nine.

Clerical Appointment.

Church people will be pleased to hear that Rev. Franklin M' Kean has been appointed to work in the Owens Valley District by the Los Angeles Conference South, J. W. Leach, Presiding Elder. Mr. M'Kean arrived last week and delivered his first sermon on the new appointment at Lone Pine last Sunday, where he will also preach again to-morrow. The several clergymen in the valley, representing three churches, will, as soon as practicable, arrange a programme of services so that, by alternating, there will be preaching at each of the principal places nearly every Sunday. Mr. M'Kean, who, by the way, is a preacher of long standing and experience, designs to visit Bishop Creek one week from to-morrow. He is in rather poor health however, and may not be able to do so. For the information of the fair sex we will state that he is not a married man, more's the pity.

Ball and Christmas Tree.

Our Lone Pine neighbors are going to get up a Christmas Tree and grand ball on Christmas, which, we will state for the information of all who have not a patent medicine almanac conveniently at hand, occurs on Friday, December 24th. The Tree is for everybody, and will be "given" at the school house. A fine hall has been secured for the dance; our old friends of the Cerro Gordo brass band are to furnish the music, and from all indications we believe this is going to be the finest ball that Lone Pine has yet had. As there are a number going from here we infer the attendance from the outside generally will be considerably larger than common. Christmas don't often come more than once a year, so let everybody make the most of it this time.

Christmas Tree.

The family people and the stay-at-homes, or those who can't get away to the Bishop Creek and Lone Pine festivities propose to get up a Christmas Tree for the big and little ones of this place. It ought to be done by all means. It is time some definite steps were taken to carry it through. We suspect it will devolve on the ladies to see to it. Ye genius homo of the male gender in this place ain't to be relied on to lead out in such things to any very alarming extent, though we know some of them who would do very well as subalterns.

Change of Time.

By orders received by agent B. L. Brown, the time of departure of the Northern stages is changed so that they will henceforth leave here at 3 o'clock on the mornings of Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays. Heretofore they have left at 1 P. M., Sundays, Thursdays and Fridays. This advance in the time of departure is made necessary on account of the great difficulty of making connections in the present condition of the road.

Shooting Match.

We are authorized to state that preparations are being made for a big shooting match for turkeys, chickens and cash, at Lone Pine during Christmas Day. Every man in the whole county that thinks he can "get away," with a bird is cordially invited to come and try.

"Old Probabilities."

The oldest inhabitant must take a back seat now. Last year, December 16, the thermometer fell to the lowest recorded and probable point, as was then considered—then it was down to 8 degrees of zero. But now the register at the Post shows the following, for a report of which our thanks are due John P. James, Hospital Steward, U. S. A.:

Good Suggestion.

In another column will be found a racy, well written communication from a Round Valley correspondent, which, besides an interesting retrospect of pioneer times, offers a suggestion respecting the organization of Granges which we heartily commend, save that we hope the proposed Pioneer Society may also be perfected. There are many reasons going to show the need of both organizations, the first at this particular crisis especially. It is certainly a matter worthy the attention of Inyo farmers if it is of any others in the State, and we have plenty of them abundantly able to put it through if they will only make the start. Any way, our columns are freely open to the use of all; preliminary notices and calls for either or both organizations can at any time find a place free of charge.

Stealing Papers.

One-horse newspaper thieves will note the following: Mr. Editor—A man who goes into a saloon where papers are kept for the use of its patrons and the public generally, together with comfortable seats and lights, and at the first opportunity puts them in his pocket, and deliberately walks away, apparently without the fear of God or the law before his unhallowed eyes, must be a brave man, and I would call the gent the essence of the outside of a spoiled bologna. Now, if my papers continue to spirit themselves away, as heretofore, I shall be compelled to call names.

J. R. H.

Roads, Snow and Stock.

We learn that the snow fell nearly four feet deep on the road about Fish Springs, and that in consequence the mails have to be packed on horses from the Taboose Ranch to Watson's; also that cattle are perishing in considerable numbers from hunger and the intense cold. It is remarkable that while the snow here is so deep, the depth is a mere trifle from Hot Springs northward over Esmeralda Mountain, which at Aurora is full 3,000 feet higher than here.

Assault on a Chinamen.

A Chinaman came into Lone Pine Wednesday last in search of a physician to go oto the relief of a countryman at Swansea. It appears that one Grady, who keeps a boarding house at Swansea, had had some difficulty with his China cook and endeavored to settle it by splitting the Chinaman's head open with a hatchet, and was so nearly successful in his murderous attempt as to leave it extremely doubtful whether he will recover or not.

Teams.

Several heavy freight teams from Los Angeles managed to pull through the snow and deliver their loads of goods to our merchants this week. The regular bullion teams now transfer their up freights to the steamer at Cartago, from which, at Swansea, they are reloaded by local teams for their several destinations.

The Weather.

The weather is most disagreeably cold, especially during the nights. The thermometer has already fallen ten degrees lower than at any other time last Winter. During the day the sun shines bright, makes little or no impression on the snow except in favored localities. From present appearances "our melting snows of June and July" will be productive of a vast amount of swamp land—everybody will be able to get a slice even if they have to go into the sage brush after it

For New Years.

In order that all interested may know in time what to expect, we call attention to the ball advertised to come off in the Masonic Hall in this place on New Year's Eve. Every effort is to be made to make that the ball of the season.

Spelling School.

There will be a spelling school at the school house near the Post this evening at 6½ o'clock. In addition to the usual "spelling down," there will be music, extempore debate, select readings, etc.

Stopped.

Owing to the weather, we presume, all the furnaces have been shut down for several days. Work goes on in the mines as usual, however.

To the F. & A. M.'s.

Don't fail to look at the "Masonic Notice" in another column.

Preaching.

There will be preaching at the school house to-morrow evening.

The Sleigh Bell's Chime.

These are not very sweet toned sleigh-bells, those we have here, but there were bells and sleighs, nevertheless, and

"Gay voices sounding,
In chimes wild and free,
While they went bounding,
Across the snowy sea."

At Lone Pine they commenced early to improve the unusual opportunity for sleighing. But here and every place else in the Valley, the sleighs had first to be built. B. L. Brown of the Pioneer stables got up a fine bob sleigh and with a four horse team took everybody riding who wished to go or rather who could go, for we wished to accept his invitation and take a ride but couldn't. It was a novel experience to numerous little ones whom he took out, as many of them had never even seen snow before.

LETTER FROM ROUND VALLEY.

[Correspondence of The Independent.]

Round Valley, December 7, 1873.

Mr. Editor:—The "beautiful snow" is falling just now, hence this old Pinenut is confined to his "wickeiup," and will devote an hour to scribbling.

In 1863 a person who had returned to Carson from Owens Valley, dilated very favorably in our hearing on the advantages, fine climate, etc., of this country, and emphatically declared that it "never snows in Owens River." Under this impression a number of us cheerfully sailed for the land of "no snow," and arrived here in the latter part of '64.

I shall not intrude upon your valuable time and space by describing the tough old time we experienced then; but this famous snow storm reminds us vividly of a similar one which occurred early in '65. We retired as usual one night in January, but next morning we were terribly surprised when gazing at the deep snow (two feet) which covered hill and dale. It was "thar;" and the only relief we obtained was in pronouncing a certain enthusiastic individual a "cussed liar." To be so suddenly and unexpectedly plunging in deep snow, without houses, fire-wood, or fodder for our horses, and but little "hogadie" for ourselves, was no fun. "The beautiful snow" may do for poetry, but it affords very little satisfaction to hungry stomachs. Beef straight was good then; bean soup was a rarity, but the few, small red beets, which Mr. A. Thomson (one of the noblest of Inyo's pioneers) freely distributed, were indeed delicacies. Parched barley was considered good coffee, although the horses thought it bad policy to infringe on their rights. Bread being played out, taboose and pinenuts were excellent substitutes The first white lady settler of Round Valley was Mrs. Convers. Her economy in the bread line is worthy of note. She made a few hot biscuits every morning, and exercised her fine calculating faculty so that the number of biscuits always corresponded numerically with the number of men for breakfast—one biscuit (nice, brown, little fellow) for each individual. Should outsiders happen to drop in (as was often the case those long, hungry days), just when the exact number of biscuits were steaming on the breakfast table, the perplexity of the lady can be better imagined than described. How to divide four biscuits among seven persons were questions which had to be solved in '65. But better days have dawned—plenty abounds in Round Valley at present; and should you, Mr. Editor, feel inclined to visit this little paradise (white and bright just now), you'll certainly get your jacket full of exceedingly rich, highly puffed, hot biscuits for breakfast. And why not? We always raise good wheat, and Mr. Russell, after expensive repairing and additional machinery, makes the best of flour; fruthermore the ladies here can't be beat at cooking—know everything pertaining to cream, butter and buttermilk, not like the city lady who wanted to know "which is the cow that gives the buttermilk?"

"Snowed in" as we are at present, we can but feel exultant when comparing the present with the past. Then we suffered, lacking the necessaries of life, except one—taboose; but now we have comfortable houses, cheerful fireplaces, plenty of beef, pork and beans and piles of A. No. 1 flour. Let her snow!

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

Farmers of Inyo shall we organize? The bone and sinew of the country from Maine to California are organizing—about 8,000 Granges are already in existence. The benefits to be derived from this order are incalculable, but most of us "outside barbarians" are ignorant of its objects and progress. The few of us who read The Rural Press can easily perceive the grand results accomplished by the P. of H. Will not the Patrons of Husbandry in this State scatter broadcast among us their pamphlets, containing the constitution, by-laws, etc, so that we may become enlightened? Flourishing Granges may be established in the different settlements of Round Valley, Bishop Creek (a very strong one there), Big Pine, Fish Springs, Independence and vicinity and George's Creek—even one or two would be a good starter. There are intelligent farmers in Inyo as well as in other counties, who are competent to properly steer the new ship. Gentlemen in the aforesaid settlements express yourselves through The Independent (the editor permitting) on this important subject. Instead of a "Society of Inyo Pioneers," let us organize Granges, where new comers will be admitted to co-operate with old taboose eaters.

Old Pinenut.

Resigned.

The resignation of Surveyor-General Hardenburgh has been tendered and is accepted by the President, to take effect upon the appointment and qualification of his successor.

The Governors' Message.

Following a is synopsis of Governor Booth's message as given by a correspondent of The San Francisco Chronicle:

CALIFORNIA'S PROSPERITY.

The Governor's message opens with felicitations upon the increasing prosperity of the State. There has been a gradual and healthful influx of a valuable class of settlers, and while the increase has not been remarkable, it is such as to be a matter of congratulation.

EXEMPTION FROM THE FINANCIAL PANIC.

California has been peculiarly fortunate in escaping the serious results of the recent financial crisis at the East, which is proof of the soundness of our financial and business systems, and must conduce to the establishment of increased confidence in our credit, and assurance of our continued growth and prosperity.

CONTROLLER GREEN'S REPORT COMMENDED.

The attention of the Legislature is particularly drawn to the report of State Controller Green, which, in connection with the report of the State Board of Education, is commended as a very able paper, deserving careful perusal, and containing suggestions of great pertinence and value.

HOSTILITY TO RAILROAD SUBSIDIES.

Of course the Governor preserves his firm attitude of uncompromising hostility to the granting of subsidies to railroad corporations and other monopolies, and the question is discussed at considerable length. The Governor holds that, if a State cannot dictate to railroad companies what shall be the rates of fares and freights, and what proper restrictions are necessary to protect the rights of the public against such soulless corporations, the State really loses its sovereignty and becomes subservient to a body of its own creation.

REGULATION OF FREIGHTS AND FARES.

The Governor advocates the enactment by the Legislature of all proper regulotions and restrictions regarding the railroads of this State, which are in the position of common carriers and must be governed by State laws, instead of State laws being so framed as to suit the convenience and answer the purposes of railroads. Not only should the rates of fare and freights be fixed by law, but the railroad companies should be required to post such rates at the stations along the route, as required of ferries and toll roads.

THE INSURANCE COMMISSION.

The Governor commends the law enacted at the last session, creating an Insurance Commission, and says its results have been beneficial alike to the companies and the insured.

OPPOSED TO CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

He recites the number of executions that have taken place in the State during his term, and the number of suicides by accused criminals, and concludes, after a careful review of the whole subject, that the best interests of society would be subserved by the abolition of the death penalty. He would establish some separate and distinct method of punishment for convicted murderers and criminals of the worst class.

EMOTIONAL INSANITY.

As to criminals found, after careful judicial and technical research, to be insane, he thinks they should not be turned loose on society, but should be confined in insane asylums.

THE STATE PRINTING.

Is considered carefully. The Governor favors the discontinuance of the practice of printing the State laws in Spanish, as unnecessary and expensive. He also calls attention to the unnecessary outlay caused by the insertion of much unnecessary matter in the Appendices to the legislative journals and other public documents. He calls attention to the fact that the Act passed at the last session creating a State printing office, and granting an appropriation for its establishment, is defective, and recommends that it be reenacted.

GOAT ISLAND AND OAKLAND FLATS.

In relation to the act of 1868, granting to the Terminal Central Pacific Railway Company certain submerged and tide lands adjacent to the island of Yerba Buena, upon certain conditions, and the extensions in 1870 by a supplemental law for two years, and the payment by the company of $12,000 the amount of the appraisment while the improvements provided for have not been made, he thinks provision should be made for the return of the money by the State to the proper parties.

THE DIFFICULTIES WITH SPAIN.

The message closes with a reference to the recent difficulties between the United States and Spain, and hopes they may be adjusted without an appeal to arms. War should be the last resort of republicans. A war between the greatest of republics and the young republic of Spain, which is struggling with unparalled difficulties to establish popular liberty, could not but result in retarding the cause of republican freedom.

These are but a few of the points touched upon in the message, which will make over eight columns of solid agate type in The Chronicles pages.

Hurricane in Tennessee.

A hurricane at Malvern, Tennessee, on the morning of the 4th ultimo, demolished six business houses, unroofed several others, and injured eight persons, two severely.

—At a dinner party, the other day the Minister from Holland being asked by a handsome young lady, if he could tell what the difference was between a tube and a foolish Dutchman, he won great applause by spontaneously answering: "One is a hollow cylinder and the other is a silly Hollander."

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The President's Message was delivered to Congress, December 2. It is an unusually long document. It needs to be read at length to be fairly appreciated, but we can venture on nothing more than a very brief synopsis of its most salient points; he says political partizanship has almost ceased to exist especially in the agricultural reigons.

The capture on the high seas of a vessel bearing our flag and which for a time threatened the most serious consequences, is in course of peaceful settlement. Our relations with all other nations continue friendly.

He speaks favorably of the showing made by the American exhibitors at the Vienna Exposition.

He is pleased to announce that the Emperor of China had received the diplomatic representatives of the Western powers in person, and says some progress has been made in the direction of the suppression of the coolie trade. He thinks further legislation on this subject needs to be made.

He transmits an application of the Republic of San Domingo to the United States to exercise a protectorate over that island, but makes no recommendations in that case.

He invites the earnest attention of Congress to the existing laws of the United States respecting American citizens abroad.

The President counsels forbearance on our part in the matter of the claims against Venezuela under the award of 1898.

Casserly's Letter of Resignation.

San Francisco, Nov. 28th, 1873.

Hon. Newton Booth, Governor of California, etc.—Sir: I hereby resign my unexpired term in the Senate of the United States as a Senator for California, this resignation to take effect immediately, so that the State Legislature, which meets on the first of next month, may fill the vacancy. As my intimate friends in the Senate and elsewhere will know, I have long desired to withdraw from that body, and at the same time to retire wholly from politics and political life. My public duties on both sides of the continent have demanded and received so much attention as to greatly impair my health and compel me to neglect my private affairs. The latter consideration is not a controlling one, but the condition of my health is such as to lead me to seriously doubt my strength to discharge the arduous duties of a Senator for California.

I have deferred carrying out my desire until the present time, when both objects may be accomplished at once, and when the Legislature just about to meet may elect my successor.

E. Casserly.

Cuban Affairs.

A New York dispatch of the 4th gives the following items: The Spaniards of this city have appointed a committee of their number to prepare an address protesting against the terms of the protocol agreed to by Palo at Washington, and calling for its rejection by the home Government. A Philadelphia dispatch says the officers of the Southern Steamship Company declare utterly false, the statements attributed to Captain Barrett of the steamer Yazoo City, recently arrived at New Orleans from Havana, that the Virginius had been fitted out as a man-of-war, and that general alarm prevailed among the Americans at Havana. The United States war steamer Kansas, which left this port for Santiago de Cuba, November 14, had not arrived at her destination, and it is stated that she has not been heard from since her departure.

A Racy Examination.

The following racy examination of candidates for admission to the bar is taken from The Western Law Journal. The examination commenced with;

"Do you smoke?"

"I do, sir."

"Have you a spare cigar?"

"I have. (Extends a short six)

"Now, sir, what is the first duty of a lawyer?"

"To Collect fees, sir."

"Right. What is the second?"

"To increase the number of clients.

"When does the position towards clients change?"

"When making out a bill of costs."

"Explain."

"We then occupy the antagonistic position. I become the plantiff and he becomes the defendant."

"Suit decided, how do you stand with the lawyer on the other side?"

"Cheek by jowl."

"Enough sir. You promise to become an ornament to your profession, and I wish you success. Now are you aware of the duty you owe me?"

"Perfectly."

"Describe it."

"It is to invite you to drink."

"But suppose I decline."

Candidate scratches his head.

"There is no instance of the kind on record in the books. I cannot answer the question.

"You are right, and the confidence with which you make the assertion shows conclusively that you read the law attentively. Let's take a drink, and I will sign your certificate at once."

A Wonderful Valley.

R. B. Freeman informs us that on the south side of the south fork of the San Joaquin River, about twelve miles from Keiser Gulch, a marvelous valley exists. Its surface is covered with a large number of hot springs, varying in size from one foot in diameter to twenty, and of great depth, The water in some of the springs is sulphurous, in others saline, and others give decided traces of soda. Freeman brought a large number of specimens of rock salt, white sulphur and soda. He describes the country surrounding to be of a mineral nature, as he noticed indications of copper and iron. He says the locality is worth visiting.—Fresno Expositor.

—A Sodus toper the other night got at the yeast jug and took a swig. Putting it down he called out to his wife, "Say, Jane, I wish you wouldn't mix that chicken feed over the cider jug, its 'nuf to make a hog sick." The yeast made him hop soon after.

—An Iowa City man built himself a $10,000 barn, and sat down in it to have a smoke and contemplate the structure. He liked it exceedingly well and will at once build another on the same site, having obtained his insurance.

—Two partners in street-medicancy in St. Louis, having disolved their firm, are engaged in a lawsuit to settle the division of $10,000 surplus capital.

—John Hay, author of "Little Breeches," is to marry the daughter of Amasa Stone, of Cleveland, the Lake Shore magnate.

THE SUN.

Weekly. Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

The Unknown Dead.

[From The Virginia Chronicle.]

L. H. York, an old Nevada explorer and prospector, who is now temporarily sojourning in this city, informs us that on the 1st day of May, 1871, he in company with Asa Adams (now living in Ohio), left Eureka for Death Valley on a prospecting tour. They had two saddle animals and a pack horse and were well armed. Crossing the desert by riding all night, they reached a point within one mile of a spring of water in the mouth of the canyon leading down into the east side near the head of Death Valley, at dawn one morning about the middle of May. Here they stopped to camp, but York became restless and insisted upon proceeding further, telling his companion that he believed there were Indians in the vicinity. A band of renegade Indians had been making hostile demonstrations in that region for some months, and York was on the alert. Breaking camp they proceeded on, and when within three hundred yards of the spring they saw five Indians hurriedly mount and ride away, having eight horses with them. York opened fire with a Henry rifle and unhorsed two of them. His third shot did not take effect, and then he learned to his dismay that his gun was empty—his emigrant companion having fired off the cartridges the evening before at rabbits, and failed to refill the chamber. The result was the escape of the Indians. Riding up to the spring York and his companion found two white men lying upon the ground, stripped to their drawers, and quite dead. Their skulls had been broken in and their throats cut, and the warm blood was oozing from the ghastly wound in the throat of one of them. Not a scrap of paper or clothing (other than their drawers) could be found, and no clue to their identity could be obtained. One of the men appeared to have been a miner and prospector, and the other a man unused to exposure, and the supposition is that one was a prospector proceeding to Death Valley to show some ledges to the other, who is supposed to have been a speculator or expert. The bodies were buried together in a gray blanket near the spring, and neither York or his whilom companion have ever been able to learn anything of the previous history of the murdered men.

Congressional Proceedings.

Washington dates of the 1st give the following synopsis of Congressional proceedings:

During the session of Congress today, Sargent of California introduced bills supplementary to the mining law of May 10, 1872; relating to swamp lands in California; for the relief of aged and infirm pre-emption settlers; for the sale of timber lands on the Pacific Coast; relating to the entry of homesteads and pre-emptions in California; for the sale of grain lands in California, and others of local interest.

Sargent also introduced a resolution instructing the Commerce Committee to inquire into the expediency of appointment by the United States of a commission to act with a similar commission to be appointed by the State of California, to examine and report on the expediency of protecting the harbor of San Francisco by the construction of a sea wall, the Government to assist in the work.

The Pension Rolls.

The Commissioner of Pensions reports that during the year ending June 30, 1873, there were dropped from the pension rolls 10,223 names. The number added during the year was 16,405. It appears, therefore, that the list was increased by over 6,000 names during the year. On all the rolls there are now 238,411 names, and the sum paid during the year was $26,259,284.

—"Gallinarium" is St. Louis for hen-house. Next we shall have Equinarium, Bobinarium and Asinorium.

With which she used to tussle,
She snatched the wool all off its back
And stuffed it in her bustle."

General News.

The bond holders of the Union Pacific Railroad under the first mortgage have elected Oliver Ames Trustee in place of his late brother.

It is reported that the Spanish mission at Washington has been offered to Figurates.

In the bombardment of Cartagenia 400 houses have been destroyed. At the request of the commander of the Government forces, foreign fleets have withdrawn from the harbor

The London Journals praise the message of President Grant

At the Municipal election for Mayor in Montgomery Alabama, December 1, a fight occurred between the whites and blacks. Two of the latter were killed and four others wounded. The affair caused a perfect stampede at the Polls. By the aid of a sufficient body of police it subsided. Faber (Rep.) was elected Mayor.

The Pope is again indisposed.

In the United States House of Representatives notice was given of a bill to repeal so much of the postal act as prohibits weekly newspapers from passing through the mail free.

There is said to be considerable opposition to the confirmation of Williams as Chief Justice.

A committee of the House in Congress have agreed to a bill repealing the salary law.

Senator Morrill, of Maine, has advocated the resumption of specie payment by January 1st, 1875.

Morton and his associates in the Senate caucus committee have been fixing things, and have concluded to put Liberal Republicans on the Senate committees if they want to be.

The New York Chamber of Commerce have adopted a report favoring specie payments.

The Peoria and Wabash Railroad Company has failed to pay interest on the debt.

Bowles of The Springfield Republican is again in trouble on a libel suit. The paper has been attached, and is in the hands of officers.

The Municipal elections at Los Angeles, December 1, passed off quietly The Councilmen elected were Macarel, Huber, Sabichi, Chaves and Gherkins A Board of Education was also elected The Chamber of Commerce is making efforts to diffuse newspapers, and circulars through the East, showing the advantages of Southern California in products, climate, etc.

Vallejo wins the county seat of Solano county by a majority of 317, in a total vote of 4,243.

Catching Fur Seals.

The manner in which fur seals are caught is very simple. The seals clamber up on the beach to their rookeries, as their breeding places and haunts are denominated, sometimes going back as much as a quarter of a mile from the water. Then the natives get between them and the shore and drive them inland in great droves, sometimes containing as many as 5,000 animals in one body. The distance to which they are thus driven depends mainly upon the convenience of the rookery to the salt houses established on different parts of the islands. Not unfrequently they are thus driven four or five miles.

Always however they must be driven sufficiently far from their "rookery" that the slaughter will not frighten the survivors away from their accustomed haunt. When the proper point is reached the Aleuts "waltz in among them with clubs." These are the only weapons used. The seal's skull is very thin, and a slight tap on the upper part of the nose kills him instantly. Generally the poor beasts only struggle to escape their fate, but now and then a "bull-seal," or "beach-master," as the large old males are technically denominated, will show fight and for a few minutes move round with a hostile agility, which sends the Aleuts skipping with all the agility they possess. The result, however is always the same. Sooner or later comes the tap on the nose, and the fight is finished.

The fresh skins, as soon as taken off, are laid down as a "keutch," or huge vat, holding from three to five thousand. Each is turned with the flesh side up, and thickly covered with dry salt. Here they remain for six or seven days. They are then "booked up," which means that each skin is folded in the middle, with the flesh side in and salt strewn thickly between. In this condition they are allowed to remain ten or fifteen days, until time is found to "bundle" them. Bundling consists of placing the flesh sides of two equal sized skins together, folding in the edges, rolling them up tightly and tying them securely with stout twine.

A Statesman.

The stage-struck answer of "Boss Tweed," that he was a "statesman," in reply to the recording clerk at Blackwell's Island, when asked his occupation, is a proof of a hallucination that at no distant day must end his life. If statesmanship consists of stealing then he was a statesman. In any other view it cannot be so. Tweed was imprisoned for his acts, while our members of Congress who steal are permitted to go free. Tweed is a thief—they are not a few of them thieves. Still, Tweed has been caught; he is not a statesman now.

Postal Hints.

People carelessly neglect many of the postal regulations and suffer consequences entirely disproportioned to the offences. Some suffer through ignorance. The following hint may be of use: Don't write on newspaper wrappers, circular envelopes, or printed matter of any kind, anything but the address. Many are in the habit of writing on wrappers the words, "Printed matter," "One paper," "Books only," etc. This subjects the entire package to letter postage, three cents for each half-ounce."

Grand Enterprise.

The Government of British India intends to spend £27,000,000 sterling within the next five years on State railways and canals of irrigation.

—Nothing really succeeds which is not based on reality; sham, in a large sense, is never successful; in the life of the individual, as in the more comprehensive life of the State, pretension is nothing and power is everything.

—The New Bedford Standard dosn't sympathize It says: "Instead of trying to steal Cuba by countenancing filibustering expeditions, our Government ought to act manly, if the island is wanted declare—war and take it by force," and thinks it would be well if more filibusters were shot. Cruel man!

—A young lady upbraided an admirer for his flirtations during a long absence. "You are too bad to be pardoned," she said, "but if I discard you I shall punish myself most, and so I will ignore what is past and enjoy your society as much as I can while I live, for when I die I shall never see you any more—I am going to Heaven."

MATTERS FOR LEGISLATION.

It is the especial desire of our local Representative to have all parties interested in legislation for this county to present their desires, supported by such arguments as they wish to offer, to him or his colleagues, in order that these points may be brought forward in time for definite action. There are some of these, somewhat special in character, but of general interest notwithstanding, that require immediate attention. Among these we may mention the matter of the county's obligation to the court house and bridge contractors. There is a balance due these of some $6,000, the payment of at least $5,000 of which was pledged by the county's agents in the first contract. Our private opinion is that that pledge ought to be made good to the letter, provided as a matter of course, that the parties of the second part satisfactorily fulfilled their part of the contract, which we think they did. But unless good legal arguments can be sent forward showing why it should be ordered paid through a legislative enactment, it is very doubtful indeed whether such authority can be obtained.

A Good Appointment.

Information comes that Hon. George H. Williams, late Attorney General of the United States, has been appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. With this announcement many persons will breathe more freely than when it was supposed that Roscoe Conkling was to have the place. The appointment no doubt will be satisfactory to the bar of the United States, and that Court will now have a member whose whole life has been devoted to the profession of the law. He is in every way worthy, and this appointment will hereafter be hailed as one of the best made by President Grant. The Judges of the Supreme Court recommended his appointment, and they should be able to judge of the merits of the appointee, and his admirable fitness by temperament and habits of life will render him a proper man to hold a place so important.

Another Daily.

Friend Marion, of The Arizona Miner, has disposed of a one fourth interest in The Miner to each of three other gentlemen, and now Arizona has a very neat looking daily. As they say themselves, it was a "brave undertaking" to attempt a daily in such a sparsely settled region, but few as they are, we fancy the settlers who have braved life in Arizona so long, are brave enough to give an extra helping hand to an institution, which next to the actual physical force of the military has done more to sustain and encourage them than any other one power in the Territory. The establishment of the daily followed the completion of the telegraph as a matter of conrse, and Prescott can now have the news of the world almost at the same hour as San Francisco. It is a mere superfluity to say that the new enterprise has our very best wishes for its perfect success.

A Good Magazine.

The December number of Wood's Household Magazine is replete with good reading—entertaining sketches, stories, poems, etc, etc. Its table of contents includes a goodly number of select stories, interesting reading matter and able articles on various popular subjects, from experienced pens. In addition to these articles are several pretty poems, a charming little Cottage Design, and editorial departments embracing Our Housekeeper, Correspondence, Literary Notices, Laughing Stock, etc., etc. The engraving for this month is entitled "Old folks." All the above for only one dollar per year—or with chromo, Yosemite, one dollar and a half. Address, Wood's Household Magazine, Newburg, N. Y.

On the Committees.

On the Standing Committees of the Assembly, appointed by the Speaker our delegation is represented on seven. Parker is on three—Roads and Highways, Swamp and Overflowed Lands, and Public Printing. Long is on three—State Prison, Federal Relations, and Mines and Mining Interests. Summers on two—Public Morals and Public Printing.

—While a Texas man was trying to anchor his mule to a stake, recently the animal managed to get the rope around the man's neck and then ran away at the top of his speed. The widow wants to sell that mule.

IN A QUANDARY.

Our solons at Sacramento, and their respective party friends generally, are much exercised at the present political situation. Each of the three parties are fearful the others are going to gobble it up body and breeches—absorb it in toto, and accordingly, managers are exceedingly jealous and circumspect in their every move; so much so, indeed, looking at it from our stand point, that, the Democrats particularly, are inviting the very danger they wish to avert.

Had Casserly not have deserted his post it would have comparatively plain sailing. Fully one-half the new Democratic members owe their seats to Republican voters—voters willing to throw overboard their own false party leaders for a principle these candidates were expressly pledged to carry out. These principles were the especial aim and object of the Independent movement, which, in both the September and October elections, accomplished enough to clearly prove itself unmistakably in full accord with the overwhelming sentiment of the people of this State.

The individual representatives of this sentiment were Booth and Casserly or Casserly and Booth, first or second choice, as the case might be, of both Independents and Democrats, for their candidates for Senator. These parties by explicit or implied understanding became natural allies. Republicans, proud of their party principles but disgusted with their later leaders, ignored mere partisan claims powerful as they are, and joined fortunes with former opponents that these false leaders might be put down. On the other hand full an equal number of Democrats, differing from these Republicans only in name, were governed in their objects and actions by precisely similar motives, and whether giving support to either an Independent or Democrat, did so in the full desire that principles and not a mere party name should be perpetuated. The day is passing away when thinking men can be compelled to march to the magic of a party name let that be what it may.

But what do we see? Plain sailing as it was for Democrats to comply with the conditions of their election with Casserly in, it is still plainer with him out. Now, these presumed allies could, with perfect consistency, join forces and jointly vote for a representative of each party. But this plain duty does not suit the ideas of the small fry, Bourbon leaders, who learn nothing, whatever they may forget; they proceed at once to dragoon every man elected under the party name into strict party harness, will he, nil he, turn their backs on their natural allies, and longingly hope for success to their party through the aid of the very people they were sent to put down. They seem to think the integrity of ther party can only be secured by squarely selling it out. They vote it a crime to listen to propositions of an essential and perfectly proper alliance with the Independents, but turn square about and ask their especial enemy for aid and comfort.

Should they be successful in securing railroad votes to elect either one or both Democratic candidates, these Senators would have to out herod Herod in opposition to monopolies, and thus break faith with their new allies, or else be considered traitors to the people who send them there, not as blind zealots required to hit a monopolist's head whenever they see it, but to do justice to all. If they persist in the course now marked out, we prophecy an overwhelming victory to the Independents the very first time the matter is submitted to the people at large, and as it is quite clear that some one of the three parties must sooner or later go to the wall, the first to yield will be that whose present leaders seem bent upon forcing by caucus rule into an act of very bad faith to those who trusted them.

Terms of County Officers.

Mr. Pendegast, of Napa, has introduced a bill into the Senate, which wil probably become a law, to amend the Code so that county officers elected at the last general election, and those hereafter to be elected, shall take their office on the first Monday in March instead of the first Monday in January. This will settle the mooted question as to the meaning of the Code regarding the present officers elect, and also be an improvement in this, that newly inducted officers begin their terms with the fiscal year.

Comes Again.

The Eureka Sentinel which was burned out a short time since, now comes again all newly trigged out from top to toe. The dress does not differ materially in appearance from the old one, but the new one looks considerably the best. The Sentinel was always a very welcome visitor and is now even more so, since its fiery experience.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Both Houses have got to work in earnest, and so far, leaving the Senatorial contest out of the count, are legislating industriously and with satisfactory results.

The Five Per Cent. Act was repealed in Assembly by a vote of 78 to 2. A committee was provided for to inquire into the subject of land monopoly. A desire to retrench has manifested itself, but in a very picayunish manner as yet. The House refused to print the Governor's message and report of Yosemite Commissioners, but on motion of Parker the vote was re-considered and the bill finally passed. Finney introduced a bill making education compulsory; Tinnin one that will will effectually squelch the free pass or dead head system, for officials; Parker one to amend the Code regarding the official distances of county seats from the State capitol, that of Inyo, for instance, being practically almost twice the legal distance of the Code; Ferguson, a trespass law for Fresno and Kern counties.

In organizing the House, Charles E. Street, of Tuolumne, was put in nomination for Postmaster, Parker making a neat speech in his support. Street was elected on the first ballot over several competitors, but subsequently the Sacramento and San Francisco delegations didn't like the arrangement for some reason, and wished to have a deputy appointed to perform his duties. The whole tenor of the proceedings in that connection was uncalled for and out of place, and our delegation generally got pretty warm over it, Parker moving that all that portion of the minutes relating to a substitute be expunged. No immediate action was taken on this motion at the time, there being some other business before the House. Street is said to be as competent an officer as there is in the House, but as his family was sick he asked leave of absence, of which the delegations first named seemed desirous of taking advantage to put in a man of their own; at least this is our understanding of the matter from a hurried reading of the proceedings. Street, as many of our local readers, former residents of Tuolumne, are aware, has the distinction, such as it is, of having been the first white child born in Sonora, in that county.

Senator.

The Democrats and Republicans are caucusing, but have made no nominations yet. If they do, and stick to them, there will be a dead lock, and a ballot will be necessary every Tuesday during the session, and without result. In The Chronicle's dispatch it is said that "it was like pulling teeth to get Senator Eakin in." As Booth was the Captain's second choice after Casserly he was evidently in a dilemma about taking a caucus pledge; but as Casserly has withdrawn, we don't think that should debar Mr. Eakin from favoring some other Democrat as his first choice. No fair man would censure him under these circumstances.—Tuolumne Independent.

Correct, so far as it goes; but under the new aspect of affairs the Captain is we think, under obligations to vote for an Independent as well as a Democrat.

Panamint.

Messrs. Vanderbilt, Kennedy and Rains arrived here Wednesday from Inyo county with some very rich specimens of silver ore from the Panamint district. The specimens are exhibited at the Clarendon creating quite a little excitement, particularly among those who are unfortunately not interested in the lead. The ore is familialy known as copper silver glance, but does not contain enough copper or other base metals to prevent it from being easily crushed. The claim is situated about sixty miles south east of Cerro Gordo and was located last January by Mr. Kennedy. It presents the most encouraging prospects and will be developed as soon as the necessary tools and machinery can be procured. It is estimated that the ore will turn out about $1,000 to the ton.—Los Angeles Star, Dec. 13.

Granges.

There are one hundred and twenty-two Granges in this State, of which fifteen are in Los Angeles county. These Granges are distributed throughout twenty-six of the fifty-one counties.

The State officers are:

Master—Hon. J. M. Hamilton, Gueneoc, Lake county;

Secretary—W. H. Baxter, Napa City;

State Agent—G. P. Kellogg, San Francisco.

Anti-Railroad.

In the Assembly, Mr. Cowdery has introduced a bill to repeal the Act to empower the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties of the State to aid in the construction of railroads.

Homesteads.

Commissioner Drummond, of the General Land Office, will again attempt to procure the repeal of the present homestead and pre-emption laws, and and secure a simple homestead law in their stead. He is opposed in this measure by the lawyers, who make money out of the present laws.

The General View.

[From The Los Angeles Express.]

The assessment role of the State of California shows the astonishing and anomalous fact that in six counties 120 men own 3,140,000 acres of land! Throughout the entire State, however, there is a determination of extensive tracts of land into the hands of a few Singular as it may seem, these larger proprietorships do not so much arise from the extensive grants which the previous Governments of California had made to individuals, and thus unbrokenly descended to the present owners, as they do from speculation in the public domain, both State and National. It is a remarkable fact that under the laws devised for the purpose of fairly distributing the lands of the country to actual settlers, estates have concentrated in individual hands in California, which would compare to the baronial domains of the feudal times as a calcium light to the flicker of a rush candle. The public lands conveyed to the State have been absorbed wholesale by speculators through the perversion of State laws; and even immense slices of the national domain in this State have been obtained, by hook or crook by the same parties. It is noticeable, too, that the very best lands in the State have been thus alieniated from the settlers. A handful of land operators have managed to appropriate to themselves nearly the entire San Joaquin Valley, and tracts of ten, twenty and fifty thousand acres are there held by speculators, who virtually retard the growth of the State by their great land monopolies.

It is one of the great duties of the hour to reach this grant evil by legislation, direct or indirect. Heretofore these men have been powerful in the Legislature and out to prevent anything more than a nominal assesment of their vast unproductive acres. The poor man who purchases 160 acres along side of one of these mammoth tracts, industriously cultivates it and renders it productive to the State, is taxed literally to death. A high valuation is placed upon the land which his labor has improved; his crop is taxed to its utmost limit; and his improvements are assessed up to the highest figure. He has to bear the burthens of Government, whilst his neighbor, the huge monopolist, who will neither improve his land himself nor sell at a figure that would invite others to improve it, succeeds in escaping with a mere nominal taxation. This kind of evil calls loudly for a remedy, and it will be the duty of this Legislature to devise a system of taxation which will make the holding of vast unproductive tracts of cultivateable land too expensive to be indulged in.

—Virginius was a Roman, and the Virginius was a roamer.

Judge and Candidate.

In a lengthy article under the above caption, the San Francisco Post (Democratic.) argues with great warmth against Judge Wallace as a candidate for Senator. We give place to the introductory paragraph as explanatory why Wallace's caucus nomination would, as is generally asserted, produce a fatal schism in the Democratic ranks. The Post is the mouth piece for a large proportion of "the dyed in the wool," and its opinions in this matter is of some weight:

We do not object to William T. Wallace, the individual, running for the Senate, and doing anything in honor to get there; but we do object, and the people of the State and Legislature ought to object, to William T. Wallace, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of California, appearing before the public in the attitude of an intriguing politician and office seeker, Mr. Wallace owes it to the dignity of his high place either to stop the bandying of his name about as a candidate for the Senate, or to end the scandal to the Supreme Bench by resigning. He cannot properly perform the duties of the high position which he now holds and for which he draws his pay, while intriguing for the Senatorship, or allowing his name to be used in that connection.

DIED.

In Los Angeles, December 4, LOUIS VAN REED, after a painful and protracted illness of heart disease and paralysis.

The subject of this notice was born in Reading, Pennsylvania, and was about 58 years of age. By the advice of his physician he removed from this county to Los Angeles, hoping that his health might be benefited. About the year 1840 he emigrated to Texas. When the war broke out with Mexico, Mr. Van Reed supplied Gen. Taylor's army with beef. He came to California early in 1849. Mr. Van Reed was one of the first interested in the erection of the famous "El Dorado" of San Francisco, and also the "Bella Union." His partners were Messrs B. Ross, Jas. Johnson, J. Sullivan, F. Ragsdale and others. In the year 1850, in company with Ross, Hugh Fanch, Ralls, and others, he built the first El Dorado of Marysville, where he accumulated a large fortune; Y. McDuffey was his partner in the second El Dorado of Marysville.

After meeting with many reverses, he went to Aurora and Mono Lake, where he invested largely in mines. He has resided in this county for four or five years. He had a brother, J. H. Van Reed, a banker, residing in San Francisco, and the Hon Henry Van Reed, of Reading, Pennsylvania, is also his brother. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss. Mr. Van Reed was an honest and upright man, loved and esteemed by all who knew him, and by his death many friends are made to mourn the loss of a noble, good man.

The Wilton Troupe.

Our citizens generally have been highly delighted for the last three evenings witnessing the performance of this very excellent troupe. The house was crowded each night, and as an exception to similar exhibitions seen in this out of the way region, all seemed to enjoy it throughout and satisfied they had received their money's worth. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilton both render their parts exceedingly well. Very few ladies on the stage can equal this one for versatility of talent. Whether as a rollicking Irish lad, Missus Toodles, simple Dutchman in distress, high tragic injured innocence, or suppliant maid, she is equally at home in each, and always a success. The same remark is equally applicable to Wilton as Spanish Hidalgo, chivalrous or blustering Yankee, grand, old Irish General, Toodles sober and Mister Toodles very drunk. Dick Meade as a negro minstrel and clog dancer does very well indeed, and his performances were witnessed with great satisfaction. Harry Eytinge made a strike as an Irish granny, hard up vagabond and first villain (he will please not consider this personal). Some amatuers gave a finale as negro minstrels at the close last evening, but taking it altogether, we don't think Bachus, Rhodes, Christy, Tuers or any of those fellows, whether dead or living, need feel painfully alarmed of an eclipse. Some funny episodes, not on the programme, occurred every night, but these we pass. The troupe will play at Lone Pine to-night, and at Cerro Gordo on Sunday and Monday nights following. Further than this we can only say they propose to make a tour of this entire country, but for a time will go into Winter quarters over about Visalia. Their performances are well worth seeing.

District Court.

These two cases concluded the business of the District Court, which adjourned for the term on the 6th: F. K. Miller vs. Peter Peerson and Rock Vincentilli; Decree for plaintiff in accordance with complaint entered. By consent of counsel a stay of proceedings for 40 days was agreed upon in which to file motion for new trial. Bond of $1,000 required on the stay of proceedings. John Simpson and wife vs. Wm. H. Van Arsdale; judgment for defendant entered, and motion for new trial filed. Both these cases had been under advisement for a number of days; judgment was rendered on the demand of attorneys, the time taken for consideration not having expired.

Wood.

We find that the wood question interests a great many people from one end of the valley to the other, since all but a few had only a small stock on hand at the beginning of the storm, and that remaining in the mountains, their only resource, is quite inaccessible on account of the depth of the snow. As a substitute numerous farmers and others use corn cobs, fences and such, but there are others again who don't have these at their command, and these don't have very warm times—nothing like those of August last.

Appointments Withdrawn.

Appointments to preach by the Rev Mr. McKean were given out for this place and George's Creek for to-morrow but circumstances, almost unavoidable have made it necessary for him to withdraw these appointments. Being a stranger in this section, Mr. McKean wishes to first visit the different localities before he can consistently make definite arrangements for regular services at each, and in pursuance of this desire he started last Wednesday for Bishop Creek and Round Valley.

Wrong Date.

By a misreading of our magnificent manuscript, and subsequent stupid oversight, the local reference to the Lone Pine ball was made to read exactly wrong in the last issue. It should read, "Christmas Eve, Wednesday, December 24." But our readers here lately can afford to rectify one little error themselves where they can find so many, so we'll not say anything about this one.

The Weather.

This is an extremely common topic, but at this crisis of no little importance. Since last week we have had some cloudy and rather blustering weather with an inch or two of snow, but most of the time the sun has shown clear and warm; but the snow disappears slowly, very slowly, scarcely thawing at all until late in the afternoon.

Wood's Store.

Parties desiring presents for the little ones should, by all means, take a look at L. Wood's splendid assortment. There are things there to make the little chaps eyes water, and mouth's, too, for the matter of that. Young men (the old ones are past advising), desiring to make a permanent impression on the obdurate hearts of their respective Mary Anns can do it, if it can be done at all, by a judicious investment, for their dear sakes, of a few dollars at Wood's store.

Will not Take Place.

As everybody very well knows the weather has been particularly rough on feathered bipeds, and that in consequence many of them will never gather grass-hoppers or scratch gardens anymore, and what is of more immediate importance, can never be set up as targets for rifle practice, nor be ignominiously raffled away; they froze out and perished just in time to escape that melancholy fate, and there is another thing about it—people who have good appetites for Christmas turkey can now effect a saving in more ways than one—save the cost of the fowl and also their appetites which last may come in handy at a future time. In short, owing to the causes hinted at, likewise the great depth of snow at the Taboose Ranch. Harry Wright requests us to specifically state that his proposed shooting tournament is unavoidably postponed until a more favorable time. All his turkeys except two or three, and many others throughout the country, perhaps anticipating the fate intended for them, have given up the ghost and gone where fowl marksmen cease to trouble, and sorry as they may have been to cause disappointment to any one, feel constrained to cause the announcement that the shooting match is off.

Very Bad Accident.

Henry Brockman, a steady, highly respected young man, who for some time past has been engaged in driving team for John Lucas, met with a very serious accident at Lone Pine last Tuesday. While taking his team out of the stable-yard, the horses started to run, and the wagon striking the gate-post, Brockman was thrown to the ground; either from the force of the fall or the wagon passing over him, a leg and arm were both broken, so that for some months to come he will be a helpless cripple.

Not an Entire Success.

We are sorry to learn that some of the piping of the Cerro Gordo Water Works gave way under the immense pressure to which portions of it was subjected, so the grand ultimatum of Cerro Gordo's hopes is not yet realized. As the work in all other respects is a substantial success, this weakness of a few pipes is a matter of small consequence—quite different from the possible inability of the engines to raise the water such an immense hight, but they send it up without the least difficulty.

Christmas Tree.

Several ladies and gentlemen have taken the matter in hand and intend to get up a fine Christmas Tree, next Wednesday evening, in the Masonic Hall. All are invited to participate, and if possible, to bring forward their presents before noon on Wednesday in order that they may be properly arranged on the tree. There will be a committee there to receive them. Now is a chance for everybody to have a little fun; a magnif old Santa Claus is promised for the occason.

Plenty of Goods.

Harris & Rhine's large store appears to have more goods in it than ever before. It is useless to specify since that firm makes it a point to keep as complete a variety of everything as any other in this State—but we observe some of the finest boots and ladies shoes there we have yet seen. They sell, the best, at respectively $7 and $15 a pair, but there are plenty there for less money.

Rowley's.

The Postoffice store is chuck full of new goods—holiday toys, candies and goodies of all sorts, besides a good stock of groceries and substantials of various kinds. Rowley wants to sell 'em, and will only ask a very small advanse on cost to begin with—but he probably won't come down much, segunda.

Discharged.

Antonio Mesa, the Mexican who killed Mirandi and Pisano in Cerro Gordo a short time since, was brought before Judge Hannah, yesterday a week ago, on a writ of habeas corpus, and after a due examination was discharged from custody. To people not learned in the law some things connected with it appear mighty mystifying.

Suspended.

The late rough weather, particularly the rain down towards Los Angeles, has materially interferred with the teaming business. If we are not misinformed, most, if not all, of Nadeau's teams temporarily suspended work immediately after the storm, but we presume it was but for a few days.

Stock Perishing.

We are told by parties who have been up the country that the carcasses of cattle, dead from cold and starvation, are to be seen in very many places. Some say that at least five hundred head have thus perished, but we are inclined to think the estimate fully twice too large.

Justified.

We hear that Grady, who operated on the Chinaman at Swansea last week was duly examined and discharged, it appearing that the aforesaid Celestial had first started in to mince up his boss with a butcher knife, to which Grady demurred with his little hatchet.

Smashed Down.

The old Silver Sprout mill, at the mouth of the canyon eight miles west of town, was crushed to the earth by the weight of the snow. As no one lived there we not know what day it came down, but probably about the close of the storm.

All Right.

The Visalia Delta says that Evans and Persian made the trip across the mountains to that place in safety.

An Absconder.

A man named Brown came up here a few days in advance of the Wilton troupe and representing himself as the brother of Frank Wilton and the agent of the troupe. He registered his name at the Blaney House as "Ed. Wilton," ordered work for the troupe at this office, and stated that he was going to "bill" the towns in advance. He went on the next morning. Two days later Sheriff Prater of Kern arrived with a warrant for the arrest of said Brown (Frank), on a charge of having robbed a store on the South Fork of Kern river, belonging to a party also named Brown, of $1,200 cash, a revolver and a fine watch. The thief had been the confidential clerk of the store, and took advantage of the temporary absence of the proprietor to commit the thefts and make himself scarce, and to avert suspicion, we suppose, passed himself off as the advance agent of the Wilton Troupe. Sheriff Prater, on his arrival here finding the object of his pursuit so far ahead as to probably be on the railroad at that time, gave up the chase and started on his return home yesterday morning.

Benton and Columbus.

A gentleman recently returned from a trip around the country gives rather a gloomy account for the immediate prospects of Columbus. There is nothing being done in borax, chiefly, we suppose, for the reason that the market for that article is over stocked, and it does not pay to produce borax for nine cents per pound, all that it will now bring in San Francisco. But one mill, Sweetapple & Hazelton's five-stamper, is now running. A heavy Chicago company, it is currently reported and believed, design to soon enter largely into borax manufacture, market or no market. As the mines are very good, and the other mill only temporarily shut down, it is hoped that with this times will soon improve. Benton is lively as usual and is steadily progressing, though but one mill was then runnieg. The snow-fall was a mere trifle in both localities, though the weather was ver rough.

To Correspondents.

We are in receipt of several communications which we would be pleased to bublish if the writers, for our own satisfaction and knowledge only, would give us their real names. Though sometimes disregarded yet it is a standing rule not to publish communications, especially upon personal matters without knowing the name of the writer. As before stated we like to give place to local communications upon almost any subject, so please tack your name on some place and come along with them.

A Big Venison.

Jeems Smith and Harry Wright managed to slip up on the blind side of a 180-pound deer up near the Taboose Ranch the other day, and after shooting him sufficiently, got him into camp. It is said he would "cut a full inch on the ribs," and made most excellent vittuals for a large number of persons, the joyous sleighing party, which arrived at the Ranch simultaneously with the venison, fresh and vigorous from their four mile walk, included. They enjoyed it hugely—not the walk through two feet of snow, but the venison and such.

Not Behind.

We notice that Rothchild's & Co., are not a whit behind the rest in the new goods question, several big teams having unloaded there in the past few days, and there is ne'er a doubt if you want anything good, substantial or fancy and will intimate as much to James P. M., or Theodore, they will find it for you, and if they say it is good, it is good, otherwise, oire de modo.

Bullion, Etc.

There are now some 12,000 bars of bullion at Cartago awaiting shipment. Nadeau's fifty-six prairie schooners, with their sand marines, don't seem to gain on the furnaces very much, though all the latter have been shut down since the storm began.

Pub. Docs.

We are in receipt of a number of public documents, including reports of state officers, and one of the State Medical Society containing colored plates and much interesting reading matter. They were sent by our Inyo Member, and consiquentially the usual "great obligations" are quite superfluous.

New Firm.

E. W. Harris and G. Walz have formed a partnership in the boot and shoe business, and solicit orders. Mr. Walz the new member, is lately from San Diego, and is an old hand at the business, and said to be a most excellent and reliable workman.

Nice Dance.

A very enjoyable dance took place at the Blaney House immediately after the close of the theatre last night. The light fantastic and heavy square toe were both gaily tripped for some hours.

Don't Forget.

Festive people are herewith reminded that a big ball is to come off at Lone Pine on Christmas Eve, and a shooting match (for turkeys and chickens for the opponents) on the following day.

Tax Collecting.

Sheriff Mulkey is up about Bishop Creek, pursuant to notice and pursuit of delinquent taxes. Death and taxes are two inevitables, but the first has this advantage: it don't happen but once.

School.

In consideration of the holidays and the difficulty of obtaining wood together, the school at this place was dismissed last Saturday until the first Monday after New Years.

Preaching.

The Rev. Mr. McKean will preach at George's Creek at 11 A. M. and at this place at 7 P. M. one week from tomorrow.

What They Think About It.

It ain't every day that young ladies can be found willing to take the desperate chances of marrying a newspaper man, and when such a thing does happen the craft feel it a duty to offer words of advice, condolence sympathy, etc. The victims in the latest case, whose names are set forth below, not being present to interpose an objection, we append some of the observations of our neighbors upon the unusual event:

Found His Mate.—Jas. E. Parker, of The Inyo Independent, has gone into the matrimonial business. If he had staid at home and attended to his work, and not been fooling his time away down on Bishop Creek, he might not have been caught for many years yet. We are sorry to have this announcement to make while Jimmy's Legislative laurels are still so fresh on his modest brow.—Borax Miner.

The Independent further says that Mr. Parker, immediately after the ceremony, started with his bride for the capital. So those disgusted Pecksniffs, who were debarred the privilege of toadying to him here, can now understand that Jas. Edwin had no time to hob nob with Tuolumne's dead beats. We can reasonably hope to hear no more spiteful whining about his not coming to "see" them.—Tuolumne Independent.

Edwin Parker, of The Inyo Independent, was married to a lady named Warnes, on the 23 ult. The senior partner of the concern, who is an old yoke fellow in the marriage harness, comments on the affair by saying: "Adzactly! We warned 'em both, but they thought they'd rather know how it was for themselves."—Los Angeles Express.

En Bishop Creek, condado de Inyo, contrajeron matrimonio el 23 de Noviembre el Hon. Jas. Edwin Parker, de The Inyo Independent, y la senorita Maruca Quintana Warnes, de Nueva Orleans.—La Cronica.

Assemblyman Parker, of Inyo, married a week ago last Sunday. That accounts for his not calling on his few constituents in Tuolumne.—Un on Democrat.

And is it there ye are, Jim. You weak disciple of bachelorhood, whom as we thought, a reliable bach—succumbed, subsided, and deserted our club at last. To what end have you "arriven," We will have to give way to our feelings in prose:

Now "Farewell the tranquil mind Farewell content!" Farewell the Perfect freedom of the mountains and Flirting with the native aboriginal Pocahontoses. Farewell champagne
Cocktails that make virtue
Rambunctious. Adieu to Shooting ducks and going goosing
Farewell the privilege of lying
Crosswise of your bed when pleased so to do.
Farewell going to Frisco,
And having to borrow money
To get home again. Farewell
To the old course of life as this Right angle turn will take you
Away, and out of sight. Farewell
Again as we have to remain upon the Old Pike disconsolately thinking that our Occupation is almost gone,
But we live in hopes
Of knowing how it is—
Ourself some day. Farewell
Of kissing her for
Her mother—and Accept The "Miner's"
Congratulations.
—Havilah Miner.

The Execution at Belmont.

D. M. Hall, convicted of the murder of John Copeland, alias Black Jack, in Belmont, last Summer, was executed at that place on Friday last at 3 o'clock P. M. The gallows was erected about 400 yards from the town at a point between the grave yard and the slaughter house. The doomed man was brought to the gallows shortly after one o'clock, and spent the interval of two hours in smoking, speaking and listening to the spiritual consolations of the Episcopalian minister of Belmont. *

He knelt on the scaffold and prayed and seemed to be in peace with all mankind, forgiving all, but still thinking, or seeming to think, that he was justified in what he did.

The arrangements on the scaffold were perfect, and the wretched man died without a struggle and apparently without pain, the physicians declaring that he died within five minutes after the drop fell.

He is reported as a young and intelligent looking man, who came from Salt Lake to Pioche, and thence to Belmont. A few days prior to the execution, Sheriff Caldwell opened a letter to Hall's address from a brother of his in Montana, asking for money with which to help him (the Montana brother) out of some trouble into which he had fallen. —Reese River Reveille, Nov. 29.

A Mountain of Gold.

The San Bernardino Guardian has much to say about the discovery of a monster gold ledge in Holcomb Valley. It concludes an account of the discovery, etc., as follows:

The mountain in which the ledge was discovered is situated in the eastern part of Holcomb Valley, about three miles east of the Haley Company's quartz mill, and about three or four hundred yards from the renowned Spanish lead The Ledge, it is reported projects some sixty feet, and is very nealy thirty yards wide. A number of specimens were brought in town on Tuesday by John Brown, Sr., a sight of which would have cured the most chronic case of sore eyes—provided the owner of them had an interest in the discovery—to have seen the heavy gold all through them. The excitement up to this hour still continues great, and there is a great desire to receive the latest news from that quarter.

Our Delegation.

The Sacramento Record is giving personal sketches of members of the Legislature. Our Senators and Representatives are thus noticed:

Hon. M. C. Andross, Senator from the 12th District, composed of Mono, Inyo and Tuolumne counties, is a native of Vermont and a straight Republican, one of the hold-over Senators. He was born in Bradford, Vermont, is 36 years old, and married. He has been Assistant United States Assessor in the 3d District, and is emphatically a self-made man. He was Colonel of the Third Regiment of California Militia, and is now Assistant Adjutant General or Chief of Staff of General Davies. He came to California in 1855, and has resided nearly all the time since in Tuolumne county.

Hon. W. A. Eakin, Democratic Senator from the 12th District with M. C. Andross, is a Democrat, and will serve his first term this session. He is a miner by occupation, was born in Georgia in 1818, and came to California in 1849, and is unmarried.

Hon. W. G. Long, member of the Assembly from Tuolumne county, is serving his first term in the Legislature Born in Maine, is a Republican and the only one elected from his district, Tuolumne, Mono and Inyo counties. He came to California in 1850, and settled in Sonora, Tuolumne county, where he has since resided. He is married, 42 years old, and a miner by occupation.

Hon. J. E. Parker, Democratic member of the Assembly from Mono and Inyo counties, was born in Iowa, came to this coast in 1865, settled in Virginia City, Nevada. Has resided in Inyo county since 1870, is publisher of The Inyo Independent. Is 27 years, old, and was married November 23, 1873. He is serving his first term in the Legislature.

Hon. J. W. Summers, Democratic member of the Assembly from Tuolumne county, is a married man, was born in Kentucky in 1821, is a farmer and will serve his first term. He came to California in 1850, and settled in Tuolumne in 1851.

General Amnesty Bill.

In Congress, Maynard reported a general amnesty bill, and substituting for the iron clad the modified oath now administered to rehabilitated citizens.—The bill passed by 141 to 29. As Maynard explained, in answer to a question, Jeff. Davis may now be elected to either House of Congress if the people choose to elect him.

Captured.

J. F. Smith and W. M. Dougherty, who escaped from the Havilah jail on the night of November 30th, were pursued by Deputy Sheriff Coons, to the town of Centerville, Fresno County, and Smith was re-captured, the other escaping.

Nevada Gift Concert.

We have seen a letter from Virginia in which the writer states that this bilk has been postponed until the 4th of next March. It's a hundred to one it never will be drawn. We do not propose to purchase any more tickets, —Reno Journal.

Didn't we tell you so more than a year since?—Eureka Sentinel.

—A Vermont woman who recently followed the remains of her rather irregular husband to the grave, afterwards remarked that she had one consolation—she knew now where he slept of nights.

—Somebody in a Georgia Court "applauded," whereupon the Judge (we quote from The Griffin News) indignantly said, "Now dry that up; I will let you know that this is no camp meeting!"

—What was you brought up on?" asked a rough Western Judge of a lean lank culprit. "Brought up on a charge of vagrancy, I believe your Honor."

—A female lecturer in Boston said: Get married, young men, and be quick about it. Don't wait for the girls to become angels. You would look well beside angels, wouldn't you brutes?

—Why are ungrateful men like hogs eating acorns under the branches of an oak? Because they never look upward to see whence their blessings descend.

—Question before a western debating society: Can he be called a shrewd man who marries a shrew?" The report of the committee was, "Beshrew us if we can tell."

—A good man and a wise man may at times be angry with the world, at times grieved for it; but be sure no man was ever discontented with the world who did his duty in it.

—A Western paper calls a fellow a poor devil who run off with $20,000. We should call him a rich devil.

—Miss Hoover, editor of a Missouri paper, simply wants a partner to take her business off her hands. Does this behoover?

Weekly, Semi-Weekly and Daily.

THE WEEKLY SUN IS TOO WIDELY KNOWN to require any extended recommendation; but the reasons which have already given it fifty thousand subscribers, and which will, we hope, give it many thousands more, are briefly as follows:

It is a first-rate newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant; at full length when of moment, and always presented in a clear, intelligible and interesting manner.

It is a first-rate family paper, full of entertaining and interesting reading of every kind, but containing nothing that can offend the most delicate and scrupulous taste.

It is a first-rate story paper. The best tales and romances of current literature are carefully selected and legibly printed in its pages.

It is a first rate agricultural paper. The most fresh and instructive articles on agricultural topics regularly appear in this department.

It is an independent political paper, belonging to no party and wearing no collar. It fights for principle and for the election of the best men to office. It especially devotes its energies to the exposure of the great corruptions that now weaken and disgrace our country, and threaten to undermine republican institutions altogether. It has no fear of knaves, and asks no favors of their supporters.

It reports the fashions for the ladies and the markets for the men, especially the cattle markets, to which it pays particular attention.

Finally, it is the cheapest paper published. One dollar a year will secure it for any subscriber. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have THE WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Any one who sends a single dollar will get the paper for one year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1 a year. No discount from this rate.

THE SEMI WEEKLY SUN.—Same size as The Daily Sun, $2 a year. A discount of 20 per cent. to clubs of 10 or over.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price 50 cents per month, or $6 a year. To clubs of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent.

NOTICE NO. 19.

UNITED STATES' LAND OFFICE,
Independence, Cal., November 15, 1873.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Boushey Silver Mining Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, whose postoffice address and principal place of business is at San Francisco, California, has this day made application for patent for fifteen hundred (1,500) linear feet of the "BOUSHEY" Silver Quartz Lode, Vein or Deposit, being 750 feet northerly and 750 feet southerly from a post on the outcroppings of the vein at the center of the claim; with surface ground two hundred (200) feet wide, being 100 feet on each side of the middle of the vein; situate on unsurveyed land, in Township 16 South, Range 38 East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, in Cerro Gordo Mining District, Inyo County, California, said mining claim being described on the plat and field notes on file in this office as follows, viz: Beginning at a post in mound of rocks in the easterly boundary of the claim; thence south 8 deg. 45 min. west (magnetic variation 15 deg. 40 min. east) eleven (11) chains and 36 links to a post marked, "P. 3, B. S. M. Co." in mound of rocks at southeasterly corner of claim; thence north eighty-one (81) deg. 15 min., west three (3) chains and four (4) links to a post marked, "P. 2, B. S. M. Co." in mound of rocks at southwesterly corner of claim, said last described line passing through a post, marked, "P. B. B. S. M. Co.," at the middle of the southern end boundary of claim, from which LAST described post the corner on 4th Standard Parallel South, common to sections 3 and 4, in Township 17 South, Range 38 East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, bears south 37 deg. 26 min. 48 sec. west, distant 437 chains and 78 links; thence from said post marked, "P. 2, B. S. M. Co.," north eight (8) deg. 45 min., east 22 chains and seventy-two (72) links, to a post marked, "P. 1, B. S. M. Co.," at northwesterly corner of claim, whence a pine tree eight inches in diameter bears north 54 deg. 30 min. west, distant 33 links; thence from said last describde post south 81 deg. 15 min., east along the northern end boundary of claim 3 chains and 4 links to a post marked, "P. 4, B. S. M. Co.," in mound of rocks at northeasterly corner of claim at a point about three hundred and seventy-five (375) feet lower than the summit of Buena Vista Peak, from which last named post a pine tree 15 inches in diameter bears north 36 deg. east, distant one (1) chain and 42 links; thence from said last described post, south 8 deg. 45 min. west, 11 chains and 36 links to the place of beginning, containing 6 acres and 91-100 of an acre of land more or less, said claim being situate on Buena Vista Mountain, and distant about one mile more less southerly or southeasterly from the town of Cerro Gordo, and having been located by Stephen Boushey, November 14, 1872, record of which was made the same day in Book 3, Page 176, records of Cerro Gordo Mining District, Inyo county, California.

The United States Lode claim adjoins this claim on the south, and for still more specific description see the official plat and field notes on file in this office and the plat posted on the claim itself.
